Fairy Car Stories, Fox Hunt Recalled

By NEIL A. MATHESON
I HAVE found that stories about the early days of cars are always well received and I have two of them this week.

My name is MacDonald and I knew both your grandfather and your father's voice on the telephone told me Monday, and I found it almost impossible to recollect the statement with a voice that sounded so young, because my father died in 1900 and my grandfather's service before the turn of the century and that was before I was born.

But I knew Dan MacDonald immediately when the former's portrait was walked into a cafe a few minutes later. Mr. MacDonald—his more often referred to as D.M. MacDonald—I then recalled that he had been buying with West Coast Cross Roads in the Victoria area one day when six o'clock in the evening came they realized it.

THE HOUR was important because at that time roads were closed to cars on the island on market days, except for one limited access route to Charlottetown from that area, which involved driving to Rocky Point and coming across on the old ferry boat, and the last ferry from Rocky Point left at six o'clock.

Mr. MacDonald insisted that he was going to motor to Charlottetown by the main road, and that because this particular story comes in.

They were approaching Bonshaw when they were met by a large group of people—Mr. Wood had sounded the horn as they were approaching the village and they drove through the crowd, people with nothing worse than some angry comments hurled at them. If you read some of my previous columns on early days of the automobile here you will recall that the feet ran terribly strong against cars in those days, and all manner of things were done to stop them.

Horse And Wagon Block Road
A LITTLE further on they met a couple of men in a horse and wagon. The horse was not frightened though many were in those days, but the driver stubbornly refused to pull over to the side as they could not see the horse.

Mr. Wood was driving the automobile, an "old smoothy," MacDonald—the term is meant kindly—got out to talk to the men in the wagon.

"Can you tell me how far it is to the nearest city?" he asked with an air of bewildered innocence, as he left the impression he was not an Islander.

"Don't you know the road is closed to cars?" retorted one of them.

"What road, and what's this about roads being closed to cars?" my old Strathlough companion retorted.

After being assured that this "visitor to the Island" had meant need of getting to Charlottetown, the men pulled their horse up to the side and let the automobile proceed.

A LITTLE further on they saw two men making towards the road with axes in their hands, but they broke the speed limit of 30 miles per hour, and escaped that threatened encounter.

Several days later the inevitable court action followed—there were a dozen complaints sent in. Mr. MacDonald recalled—and MacIntyre D. Fitterer Shaw assessed the minimum fine of $10 and costs which came to $12.95.

First Car In Cape Traverse
THE OTHER old car story came in the course of a chat with Ed MacIntyre, Cape Traverse was the first man in that area to own a car.

Fox Hunt With Unusual Ending
MR. MACDONALD told me a story of old fox hunting days that I found intriguing. A black fox was reported to have been tracked on the lower in the Priest Pond area near East Point. It was in 1917 or thereabouts when Mack Fox was really valuable, and Mr. MacDonald offered $2,000 if the animal was caught untrapped.

Visit To "Big Jim" Is Interesting
I HAD an interesting half hour this week with "Big Jim" Pendergast who is making a splendid recuperation from an operation in the Charlottetown Hospital. We returned over half century in our talk, and the former Kensington man recalled many interesting experiences for me. They ranged from prospecting in the Yukon, hunting and throwing the 50-pound shot, to a new world record in Boston, to a fox-hunting trip he made to the old town of British Columbia. His experience in running the race track at New Arman from 1912-1955.
