

Thoughts For Our Time

By His Eminence Cardinal McGuigan

The citizen of today usually finds it extremely difficult to assess the merits of the various issues presented to him through the press and radio. This is due in part to the complexity of the issues themselves, but also in part to the even greater complexity of determining the morality of supporting them in a given particular case.

In our own country, for example, we are during these days being asked to take sides on questions raised by the Massey Report on University aid, by the U.P. Report on education, by the H.N. decision to push the Korean war, by the projected plan for an inland sea-way, and by the various attempts to reduce the sale and use of alcoholic beverages.

Three factors, at least, ought to govern the good citizen's judgment on any public issue. First, the validity and justice of the issue itself; secondly, the means by which it is proposed both to mitigate it and to carry it into effect; and thirdly, the intention of the motive governing those who take sides on the question.

The second and third of these factors are only too often neglected, and yet there are of tremendous importance for any decision about the morality of the issue at stake.

Take, for example, this matter of the means employed to create public opinion on the use of alcohol. It is impudently pointed out by some that those who use alcohol immediately cannot be successful citizens. Now we should like to think this is true, but we know it is not. England's history for over two centuries at least is simply studded with illustrations of successful toppers.

Literary figures like Addison, Steele, Lamb, to take only essayists, were notorious drinkers. Somehow they managed to do first-class work, and they have been permanently established in our hall of fame. Statesmen like Pitt and Fox were so notoriously dissipated that Lord Rosebery was moved to write of the latter that his dissipation "was hardly paralleled in that dissipated age."

Let nothing be said of the poets of the last century! Drunkenness have been and still are, only too often, successful leaders in most walks of life. They may be the exceptions rather than the rule, but they are not isolated exceptions. To attempt to encourage either moderation or total abstinence by saying anything else is to blind the evidence and defeat the cause.

The only means that can be successfully used to promote a project like temperance is to invoke the strictest honesty, to point out the natural dangers of course, but to make the main appeal a supernatural one. We don't ask men to practice moderation in the use of liquor, or to abstain from it entirely, on the ground that he will otherwise ruin his chances of becoming an industrial, professional or political leader, but on the ground that to do so is a Christian virtue and perhaps to the very nature of a sound spiritual life. In other words, our means must be positive, not negative; must pertain to life, not death.

In the same way, we have to be forthright in our motives and intentions when we support or attack a particular project. The Hope Report, for example, recommends that elementary schools be limited to the first six grades, that secondary schools carry on high school ten, and that post-secondary education be pursued in junior colleges and technical institutes.

Some may support a project like this because they believe it

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

WINIFRED E. WILSON

WALKERS OR HOPPERS

The common English Sparrow and the Pigeon may be watched any day in our Canadian cities, yet how few of us have noticed the difference in their gait. A Sparrow hops, planting both feet down at the same time; a Pigeon waddles forward, putting one foot in front of the other, and rhythmically moving its head from side to side. The great majority of land birds hop, so the Sparrow is acting normally; the Pigeon is one of the exceptions. Shore and water birds walk.

The Pigeon's waddle is something like a Duck's. Shore birds, like the well known little Sandpipers, often leave their tracks as they run along the edges of ponds. The footprints of a Great Blue Heron on a sandy beach prove by their pattern that the bird walks.

New Playground Popular Center

Barry's Playground, now the recreational centre for youngsters of the Spring Park area since it was officially opened there on the 24th of May by Mr. Earl Riggs in memory of his son, Barry, is thriving with activity these days.

Adding to the many playthings already installed on the grounds for the enjoyment of the youngsters, Mr. Riggs is continuing to make it the best of its kind in the City. A wading-pool and another slide are his latest creations, and although weather conditions of late have impeded progress, both are now nearly completed. All that is needed to complete the pool is a little dry weather to finish the painting and it will be ready for use. "In fact," Mr. Riggs stated last night, "the kids are so anxious to use it that I'm going to have it filled with water on Saturday and open it for them on Sunday whether the painting has been finished or not."

The pool, the first of its kind in the City, is 30 feet by 30 feet and 1 1/2 inches deep and is all finished with asphalt. The water supply will be kept up by the City watering cart. "The new slide will also be completed for Sunday," Mr. Riggs stated and "I'm planning to put in two or three more swings soon."

Playground Commission Active

The City Playground Commission, who have been doing so much along the same lines for the past few years, are planning an active season again this year in fixing up and organizing their programs for the playgrounds located in the various squares and centres throughout the City. Whether being done individually, as Mr. Riggs has done, or by a group such as the Playground Commission, these centres for recreation are a wonderful thing for the youngsters and are serving the full support of the community as a whole.

Keeping the children off the streets where they can play in safety and enjoy healthful recreation is a public service that every parent and child alike can appreciate, and it is hoped that the Commission will receive every support in its program efforts again this year.

IN MEMORIAM

BARRY RIGGS

The Angel of Death came to the vicinity of Upper Queen Street, Charlottetown, on May 10th and claimed for its own Barry (youngster) son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Riggs at the tender age of seven years and child, always willing to help in his own little way. He was on his way home from running an errand when he met his sad fate, being hit by a truck. Everyone who knew him, loved him; his smiling little face had won for him a host of friends who will ever cherish his memory.

The funeral which was very largely attended was held on Saturday, May 12th from the home of his parents at 124 St. John's Street and grave services at the home of Rev. H. E. D. Ashford assisted by Major Hutchison, who spoke words of comfort to the bereaved family.

Hymns sung were Safe in the Arms of Jesus and The Sweet Bye and Bye.

During the Service Major and Mrs. Hutchinson rendered very tenderly Barry's favorite hymn "When He Cometh."

The pallbearers were six playmates, Dean Burke, Roger God, Harold Moore, Billie Smith, Leonard Stull and Gordon Blanchard.

Besides his sorrowing parents there are left to mourn the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. Roger Fortin, Mountain View, Ontario; Joyce, Doris, Betty, Bruce, Carl and Ronny all at home.

A little child sleep in his eyes forever.

HUNTER'S RIVER W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Auxiliary of the W. M. S. met at the home of Mrs. J. S. MacLeod with a large attendance.

The president, Mrs. J. L. LePage presided and opened the meeting by repeating the theme, "How We Can Work For Peace Through Helping To Feed The Hungry." "Christ for the World" was sung and the 15th chapter of John was read followed by the circle of prayer.

Mrs. MacLeod read an article on Christian Stewardship and Mrs. Seaman gave a reading concerning temperance. The singing of "In Christ There is No East or West," closed the worship period. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. G. E. Smith who acted as secretary during the meeting. The roll call was answered by seventeen members and six visitors. A letter from Miss Aileen Rats, port worker in Halifax was read. A sympathy card was acknowledged. Seventy-seven home and eight hospital calls had been read and eight were given out.

The June meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. G. Wood when the roll call will be answered by a verse of scripture containing the work "work." Mrs. C. V. Smith, Mrs. W. I. Bowman and Mrs. Seaman were on the luncheon committee. The new members were welcomed. The offering was received and dedicated. It included a donation from Mr. G. H. Robertson, and Miss Simpson.

The meeting closed by singing "God of Mercy, God of Grace." A dainty lunch was passed by committee in charge.

OTTAWA — The panhandler who slugged Social Credit Leader Soion Low on an Ottawa Street the other day, after Low had refused him a handout, got off lightly when he was charged only with common assault.

For slugging an MP, in case you're ever tempted, is a grievous offense—much more grievous than assaulting an ordinary citizen.

As one authority (Bourinot) puts it, "assaulting, menacing or insulting of any member in his coming to or going from the House, or on account of his behaviour in Parliament is a high infringement of the privileges of the House."

For so doing, one may be judged for an indeterminate period of time, or otherwise punished, at the discretion of which the House of Parliament of which the injured MP is a member.

In Britain such action is "a most outrageous and dangerous violation of the rights of Parliament, and a high crime and misdemeanor". In the past, offenders have been hustled off to the Tower of London and incarcerated there at Parliament's pleasure—which means until Parliament's honor is satisfied and the culprit sufficiently punished.

"The Canadian Parliament has never had a 'Tower' in the English sense of the word. Parliamentary dungeons were out of fashion when our Governmental edifices were built. But that didn't prevent Parliament from jailing a businessman named R. C. Miller in 1913 for his refusal to answer questions put to him by a Common committee. Miller languished for weeks in the local pokey."

British Rifle: The British Government didn't appreciate being beaten by this column on the announcement of the British Army's adoption of a new 280 cal. automatic rifle. When that news was published here on April 12, the British were making plans to send a memorandum on the new rifle to Commonwealth S. S. Kyle to be retired from the Labrador run.

Mr. Gordon said expansion in the communications field has already involved a capital outlay of between $600,000 and $700,000 and additional investments now are being made. The 23 telegraph channels have been increased to 59 and a new telephone channel placed in operation. Circuits of full broadcasting quality have been provided for a daily program service on a 16-hour basis.

Mr. Gordon Reviews Capital Expenditures On Newfoundland Ry.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., June 7—(CP)—Donald Gordon, President of the Canadian National Railways, said Tuesday that money, availability of materials and manpower are three main factors management must bear in mind when analyzing new railway projects.

"Costs must bear some relationship to revenue traffic, real or potential," said Mr. Gordon in an address prepared for delivery before the St. John's Board of Trade.

"Locomotives, rolling stock and other supplies cannot be turned out overnight and when defence requirements of strategic metals are given over-riding priorities then our programs become difficult, uncertain and subject to revisions."

Of the manpower problem, with particular reference to available supply to expert assistance, Mr. Gordon said: "It takes a lifetime of experience and training to develop some of the special skills needed and many projects simply have to await their turn on drafting boards or in surveys because the staff of senior skilled officers is limited."

Expansion Necessary

He said the Newfoundland Railway and its associated facilities, when they became part of the C. N. R., showed evidence of having been managed by capable railroaders. But like all railways it had suffered from the financial famine of the depression era and from serious shortages of materials and manpower during the post-war period.

It was necessary to expand large capital sums for Newfoundland lines. New railway equipment had been ordered on or order totalled 483 units, representing an investment of $2,938,232.

Improvements to the Newfoundland Hotel will probably cost close to $1,500,000, he said. The railway working forces have been increased by about 800 men, and all employees have received the scale of wages, pensions and other emoluments in force on C. N. R. lines elsewhere. With 4,500 employees the system is the largest single employer of labor in the Province.

Mr. Gordon said there is no possibility in the foreseeable future of a change from narrow to standard gauge in Newfoundland. Practical necessity and traffic potential do not justify the heavy expenditure involved, he said.

North Sydney Ferry

Mr. Gordon announced that a new ferry between North Sydney and Port-aux-Basques is expected to go into service in less than two years. The ship will be able to make a round trip every 24 hours, including time out for loading and unloading, and be able without difficulty to plow through heavy floe ice in the Cabot Straits. Carrying capacity will be 300 persons, 75 automobiles, six trucks, two trailers, 50 head of cattle and 650 tons of cargo.

A new dock will be built at Port-aux-Basques and the facilities at North Sydney will be extended and improved. Mechanized handling of freight will be made possible. Cost of the ferry and terminal facilities will run between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000, providing the most modern ferry operation known. One of the vessels now in this service will be placed on south shore coastal runs. The other will replace the

Governments on April 29

First WD: Almost every city, it seems, has its own candidate for "first woman in the RCAF"—usually pictured in the local press shaking hands with a be-ribboned RCAF officer. Actually the first woman in, since the decision to recruit women for the regular peacetime Air Force was taken, was Flying Officer Millie Fraser of Ottawa and Massetown, N. S., who joined up on April 1 to aid in planning the recruiting of other women. She served in the WD's last time.

Governor General: A columnist in the English Financial Times plugs Sir Evelyn Baring, retiring British High Commissioner to South Africa, as Canadian Governor General when Lord Alexander retires. But in the unlikely event that a suitable Canadian appointee cannot be found, it's not probable that a long-time British civil servant with close connections with the British Government would be considered.

Missing MP: Something new was added to Parliament on June 4. For the first and probably only time this session, Montreal's Mayor Camilleien Houde, who is the independent MP for Papineau Que., was present in the Commons chamber attending to his parliamentary duties. There's one consolation: the penalties imposed for his habitual absenteeism exceed his indemnity and allowance of $6,000 a year, so he doesn't get any money for being an MP.

Final Word: Among other things, the Massey Commission report would seem to squelch the inferential argument of private radio station owners that they have a right, practically a property right, to use the air waves. The operative sentence is: "But that they (the private broadcasters) enjoy any vested right to engage in broadcasting as an industry, or that they have any status except as part of the national broadcasting system, is to us inadmissible."
