KING COLE TEA

A Country Garden

By Mrs. Gordon Macmillan

The sun's gleams are fitful,
Keenwinds are still blowing,
And yet there's a feeling
That nearer Spring's stealing,
Frost's going.

O not so far distant
Spring's Blossoms are massing,
And though winter lingers,
Say chilled feet and fingers,
He's passing.

The rooks in the elm trees,
Each other advising
To build more securely
They know—and know surely
Sap's rising.

And high o'er the meadows
You'll hear an outpouring—
A rapturous singer,
A tiny joy-bringer—
Lark soaring.

Why, actually near me
I hear a bee humming?
The air's growing warmer
To greet the fair charmer,
Spring's coming.

C. M. SAVAGE

I have received a Garden week in Massachusetts guide book beautifully illustrated and describing the gardens that are open to the public in garden week May 21-27. Dr. Donald Wyman of the Arnold Arboretum... Many in Massachusetts is the most beautiful time of year, particularly for those who wish to visit its many different types of gardens.

The invigorating climate, in which cold winters, warm springs and hot summers coordinate their efforts, force the plants into the peak of their bloom at this season. Gardening has been favored in Massachusetts ever since the first fruit gardens of the Pilgrim fathers.

Boston later became the horticultural centre of the country, for it was here that more ornamental woody plants were first introduced and displayed, than any other place in the temperate regions of North America. As a result of this, over 450 varieties of lilacs will be in full bloom during Garden Week in Boston area alone.

Hundreds of different oriental crab apples, flowering cherries, azaleas, tulips, iris, columbines and dogwoods will be in blossom at this time, combined in many ways to give each garden a beauty and individuality all its own.

Visitors can inspect fifty different gardens, some of them among the most famous in America. Tickets are on sale at Horticultural Hall Massachusetts Avenue and I can not think of any other week as pleasant as Garden Week the third week in May.

The birds have had a difficult time since they have arrived from the south, and dozens of Robins have been fed in this garden, but the greedy Bluejay and Starlings have made it hard for the Robins, they seem to like the berries of the Barberries very much and I hope none have perished.

Those whose birthday it may be prepared for a sudden turn of events or conditions in which the personal as well as business plans and objectives may swerve from their course. Perhaps the collaboration of those in power may be withheld or other promise may go by default. The feelings or standing may be hurt or prestige and popularity may suffer by such withdrawal. Aim at over-looking such slights, making light of personal antagonisms or temporary defeats. Look forward to a sudden turn of events.

A child born on this day may find setbacks and reversals of its cherished hopes and wishes, being subject to antagonisms or want of cooperation from influential persons or employers.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS -

Jealous Wives

Ex-Office Worker Claims Suspicious Unnecessary

DEAR MISS DIX: I notice in your column an ex-business-woman says that her experience in an office had made her distrustful of men and therefore jealous of her husband. I am an ex-business woman also, but my experience impressed upon me that where there is one frisky boss there are ten bosses who employ women for their efficiency alone. That where there is one girl making eyes at her employer there are dozens to whom the boss is tolerated merely because he represents the weekly pay check. Twice I was the victim of wives' suspicion and in both cases I was merely trying to help the men to make more money for their wives. If there is one thing that I learned while working it is not to be aware of men, but to beware of their wives.

MRS. J. O. E.

ANSWER: This fine and wise letter reaches to the very heart of one of the greatest problems in modern married life. For the great majority of business men are compelled to employ attractive women in their offices, and the great majority of wives are eaten up with jealousy.

HAVE FALSE PICTURE

Why women are so much more jealous of their husbands' feminine employees than they are of any other women, nobody knows, but they are. They seem to feel that a business office offers a seductive environment that leads even the most prosaic and devoted middle-aged husband into philandering. This is, of course, far enough from being the truth. The business office is a workshop and a man's thoughts during business hours are not of romance, but of finance.

The average boss looks upon the women in his office as just so many cogs in the wheels of the business. He isn't interested in them personally, but only in their efficiency. And the average girl employee in her soul thanks God she is not her boss' wife and that she doesn't have to stand his whims and his crochets except during business hours.

So the jealous wife had as well wipe her tears away and look at the matter rationally. The world is full of women, and if a man is a wanderer by nature he will always find some one to philander with. And a husband who has to be watched isn't worth the trouble.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a schoolteacher about to be married and I have saved up about $2,000. My girl friend and I have had an argument about whether I should help in purchasing the furniture for our new home. I claim that it is up to the man to furnish the apartment, as he has steady work and the means to do it, but this would take all his savings. My girl friend claims that marriage is a

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I take proper care of the wash wringer?

A. When finished using the wringer, wet a piece of cloth with kerosene and rub the rollers thoroughly. It will clean and whiten them. Give them this treatment every week after washing.

Q. How can I clean alabaster ornaments?

A. The best method is to immerse them for a length of time in milk of lime, made by mixing a little slaked lime in water, followed by washing in clean water; and when dry, dust with French chalk.

Q. How can I treat ferns that have white specks on the leaves?

A. Spray them with a solution of white oil soap. Be sure that the solution reaches all portions of the leaf.

Dust Stains

Do not rub obstinate dust stains on a garment too hard, as this will only drive the marks into the material. If you cannot remove them by light brushing, rub with a soft rag dampened in cleaning fluid and the marks will disappear.

Variety of Flavor

A variety of flavor in roast beef or veal can be effected by basting during the process of cooking with equal parts of spiced pickled fruit juices and water.

Heavy Stitching

If hesitant about stitching through heavy cretonne on the sewing machine, rub the seams with yellow soap, and the needle will penetrate the goods without danger of breaking.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

Nor did any welcoming gleam of sunlight greet us this morning. Nothing but a sky that was beclouded darkly, and intermittent snow flurries along the slopes of this valley. "I guess," Jamie said, buttering his toast at the breakfast-table, an act closely observed and duly imitated by his brother, several minutes in the heat of the warming oven, the better to flavor it, "we'll be talking about this weather that Easter brought with it, for a long time. We'll know it as 'the Stormy Easter!'" "Yes, the Stormy Easter!" we agreed, now watching Rob patiently fill the younger lad's glass "up to here—do you see the place where my finger is? Up to here!" an invisible but apparently the only satisfactory line the milk might reach. "It's certainly been a stormy spell," Rob offered, "I never saw the like of it for the time of year. There's more snow about the yards than there was in Winter, but there was one good thing about it: it wasn't too cold. It's inclined to be milder today. Yes, and I'd say the storm is pretty well spent now!" We perked up ears, to catch in his words a tone we had known back through the years. He had, our intuition warned us, unreasonably, a notion to be off on a jaunt. Yes, we needed no other telling to know that some time during the day, if all possible that pen of hogs that "by rights

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it all right for a widow to continue to wear her wedding ring after the death of her husband?

A. Certainly, unless she remarries. She should then, of course, substitute her new ring.

Q. Is it considered polite for one to take the last piece of bread or cake from a dish that is offered at dinner?

A. Yes; there undoubtedly is more in the kitchen, or you would not have been urged to take it.

Q. Is money an appropriate gift for a christening?

A. Yes; many consider money as the most appropriate gift.

Morning Smile

Chatty

A musical comedy actress, no longer youthful, joined a touring pantomime company. Business was not particularly good and the tempers of the company suffered accordingly. Relations became somewhat strained between the "star" and certain members of the chorus. There came a knock at her dressing-room door.
"Who is it and what do you want?" she demanded sharply.
"There's a lady in front who'd like to see you. She says she was a chum of yours when you were at school. Shall I show her in?"
From the corridor came the voice of a pretty chorus girl, "What her is?"

KNOW YOUR HEART

In the past, if an individual was told he had heart disease, he felt that his doom was sealed and that he was simply living on "borrowed time." Soon the Grim Reaper would catch up with him and he could either lie down quietly till the end came, or go out and have a "good time." Today the heart patient does neither of these two things. Because he knows that while heart disease is more widespread than ever before, means of prolonging life for many years are now available.

In Public Affairs Pamphlet No. 137, written by Dr. Howard Blakeslee for the American Heart Association, Inc., we read: "If you have heart trouble today you are better off than you would have been at any previous time in the history of the world. Your good luck lies in the fact that now much can be done for hearts that was never before possible. Some forms of heart disease that were incurable can now either be cured or remedied so effectively that a happy, useful life is assured." More than one of these miracles has happened since the beginning of World War II. Not only is longer life now possible for the heart patient, but by following very simple directions he can have a full life so that it can be said of him, as it was of that famous scholar, Henry Scott Warthin, "he lived until he died."

Not just existed but actually "lived." It is known to all physiologists, and stated in the pamphlet, that the heart is the toughest and strongest of all the vital organs. It is the organ that would be likely to live longest if given a chance to use its reserve power and if we have not used up too much of its reserve power by infections of various kinds, this power will carry us through severe illnesses. Even if a leaking valve is present, the reserve power of the muscular heart can compensate for it. Some of the common, everyday conditions that can reduce your heart reserve are overweight, colds, overwork and emotional strain. The heart reserve can be maintained by light exercise to strengthen the circulation and frequent rests to prevent strain. However, your heart should be examined at least once a year by your family doctor.
