The Fashions.

Dresses for the promenade this spring will be made of fine Austrian wool. Cashmere and serge in small pin-check paterns, with strips of colored satin alternating. Many of these costumes will be made in combination with plain materials, while others will be entirely of the striped fabric. Plain materials is not so fashionable as brocaded, checked, or striped, but many ladies prefer it, and it is always effective and lady-like. Trains are becoming more fashionable on dresses for the house, and are hailed with general satisfaction. Walking-dresses are still short, and are likely to continue so. Various shades of peacock blue and greens are mixed with gold, in tailor made costumes of tweed cheviot and Austrian wool with velvet or plush used as a trimming. Very short jackets are again becoming fashionable; they are generally made to match the dresses which they are worn and trimmed with feathers of the same shade. Short Russian jackets are much worn by young girls for skating costumes; they are composed of gay plaided materials, in velvet, cheviot or tweed. The old English walking hat is likely to be revived this spring. The crowns in most of the new shapes for spring wear, are to be high and square, or in the sloping Langtry shape. The Rubens, Sir Joshua Reynolds and Gainsborough hats are to be very popular during the coming season. For those who prefer small hats there are the Oxford and Derby. The Langtry, Gibby, Cottage and Queen Mab all appear again this season, with very slight alterations. Lace dresses of all descriptions will be more fashionable than ever for the coming summer. Those dresses are not composed of piece lace, but are formed of lace about eight or ten inches deep, laid row upon row, either pleated or slightly gathered. The following are two very pretty dinner toilets: the first is composed of coral colored satin, covered with black lace. The skirt is short, and is trimmed with flounces of Spanish lace; the tunic is of the lace, and is looped very full, the front in paniers arrangedin soft full folds and the back is quite long, and looped up with long bows of coral satin ribbon. The bodice is of the satin, covered with lace: the sleeves are half short, and are trimmed with bows of satin ribbon. The second dress is formed of ruby ottoman brocade, and ruby velvet. The skirt is composed of the brocade; it is short, and is trimmed round the foot with two rather wide pleatings. The tunic is of the velvet, and lined with plain ottoman silk; it is looped to show the lining. The bodice is of the velvet, it is tight and pointed back and front; the sleeves are half-short, made high at the shoulders, and trimmed at the edge with a full flow of lace and bows of ottoman ribbon. Evening dresses are made of very fine veiling or crape combined with silk and lace. English crape is very popular. Spanish girdles of embroidered velvet are very fashionable. The moliere plastron is still very popular. Soft ottoman silks, in cream and white brocaded, with tiny bunches of flowers in natural colors, are very much worn by young girls for evening dresses, and are very effective and stylish. Muslin, which has been so long discarded, is to be in great favor for spring evening dresses and summer morning toilets. They are printed in small devices in soft shades of color upon light grounds, such as tea-rose, pale blue and cream. A very pretty evening dress for a young girl is composed of pale blue grenadine. The skirt is covered with flounces clear to the waist, are edged with lace, and ornamented with bows of dark blue velvet ribbon. The bodice is of dark blue velvet pointed back and front; the sleeves and chemisette are of the blue grenadine. A large bunch of forget-me-nots are fastened at the right side of the bodice. Walking dresses are of extreme simplicity. Plain woolen materials, such as cashmere vigogue and diagonal are mostly used. The chief difference in the trimming of these dresses is that instead of being pleated all the way down, they are now trimmed round the foot with rows of tucks. Cloth bodies are still very fashionable, and useful too with almost any dress; they are often made with a pleated plastron either of the same material or of that of the skirt.

"Well, son, did you get any cases today?" asked a father of a son who had been admitted to the bar about six months ago.

"No, father; none yet. I am very much discouraged."

"Perhaps you don't use the proper method to get cases. You should never appear upon the streets without carrying in your hand a sheet of cap paper folded up so as to look like a legal document; rush about as if you were loaded down with business. When in your office and anyone comes in be busy writing out a deed of something, and when, in Court never fail to cock your feet up on the table, brush your hair and look wiser than the judge, if you can. That's the way these fellows who succeed in law so well all do.—Sunny South.

MRS. SOPHIA POTTER'S

Bone Rheumatic Liniment

IT is a fact worth knowing that Mrs. Sophia Potter's Bone Rheumatic Liniment cannot be excelled for removing pain and soreness. It is no worthless trash, as some may suppose, simply because they have been imposed upon by others, but is positively the "King of Pain." Sore throat cannot stand before its power.
