The Transvaal War

THEY SPOKE TOO SOON.

The foreign enemies of Great Britain were very noisy a few weeks ago.

Here are some samples:
"General Buller's last reverse should at length convince the wooden-headed British that the Boers are far better men than they are.—Tagblatt, Vienna.
"The supremacy of England has been sapped at its base by the unconquerable Boers. Carthage had a mercenary army, but it was commanded by Hannibal. And the War Office has not yet produced a Hannibal.—L'Evenement, Paris."

"What man with authority will arise and point out the mistakes in our colonial administration, so that we may profit by this moment when the position to the United Kingdom in the Transvaal and in Egypt should lay open to us an era of profitable revenge.—Echo de Paris, Paris"
"The total incapacity of Her Gracious Majestys generals is now beyond controversy. The arrival of Lords Roberts and Kitchener has in nowise changed the disastrous course of events, and they appear to be, as they doubtless are, played out, and as incompetent as their predecessors.—Libre Parole, Paris."

Now Britain is preparing a military force of 600,000 men, and the foreign papers are all saying that she ought to be magnanimous.

WISE IMPERIAL POLICY.

There are undoubtedly more than sufficient British troops in South Africa to subjugate the boers, nevertheless most thinking persons will applaud the determination of the Imperial Government to hasten tens of thousands more of troops to the scene of action. The truest wisdom and the truest charity are combined in making the British force supremely overwhelming at the earliest possible moment.

Both by the moral effect upon the Boer Leaders and the European sympathisers write them, and by the actual preponderance of soldiers afield the appearance of enormous forces in South Africa is desirable to ensure a speedy ending of the war and to avert the useless bloodshed of a prolonged struggle. Nor, as regards the European powers, is anything risked—on the contrary, something is gained—by concentrating a huge army in South Africa. The troops are not needed in Britain is not open to attack; if she were, there are enough volunteers and militia to account for any foe likely to reach her. From only one country need Britain apprehend land attack, namely from Russia in India—the Cape is more than half way from England to India, and a big British army is much handier at the Cape than in England, so far as Russia is concerned.

HOW AMBULANCE MEN WORK.

Mr. Charles Bosen Caple, late of Cardiff, now of the Volunteer Ambulance Corps, serving in Natal, writes to his brother of Tugela and after. He says: "The hospital tents were soon up ready for the wounded. By this time the battle of Tugela had commenced. It was not long before the ambulance waggons started, and in two and a half or three hours they returned loaded with wounded, followed by men who were able to come in by themselves, as they were wounded only slightly. Other wounded were brought in on stretchers, and more were carried in on the clasped hands and arms of two comrades. These bearers were done up, but they kept on bravely; they were helping their comrades. After a while about a dozen of us started out and went to the top of the hill. The Boers opened a terrible rifle fire upon them then, and the men began falling by the dozen. In the midst of this my section was called upon. We started to go forward and soon came across lots of wounded. Some who were so badly hit that they could hardly stand were helping others, and when we offered to help, replied, 'No, no, my lads, Lower down you'll find hundreds who cannot move.

W. Richmond Smith, in his letter from Paardeburg to the Montreal Star says: "I cannot empathise too much the bravery of the Canadians during the whole day, and the out-poken admiration of the British soldiers in commenting on the manner in which the Canadian soldiers fought was calculated to send a thrill of pride through the breast of every man from the Dominion. If the official expressions of praise over the gallantry of the Canadians were strong, it found a louder echo in the manner in which Tommy Atkins himself ungrudgingly complimented his over-seas companion in arms.

EXPLOSIVE BULLETS.

The Boers are using explosive bullets here. The day following that on which the New South Wales Lancers patrol was cut up, we found two men bearing evidence of it. One was dead. The back of his skull was completely blown away. The other was a peculiarly sad case. The bullet had carried away the lower jaw, tongue and other portions, he was still alive, and wrote with his finger on the sand the one word, "Water!" but he had neither tongue nor mouth to drink by, and so he died.—Rensburg Correspondence London Telegraph.

The statement that Mr. Major owes his life to . . . DR. CHASE'S Kidney Liver Pills

Dr. J. T. A. Gauthier, of Valleyfield, Que., writes: "I, the undersigned, certify that the contents of this letter, in regard to the cure of Mr. Isadore Major, by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, is correct."

Here is Mr. Major's letter: "After 20 years of suffering from backache and kidney disease I owe my life to Dr. A. W. Chase. I had tried an endless variety of remedies to no avail, and on the recommendation of a friend began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Two pills that night and two next morning gave great relief, and I continued their use until now I am completely cured. My friends are surprised and pleased to see me well again, for I spent hundreds of dollars in vain trying to get cured. Before using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills my back ached so I could not put on my shoes and couldn't lift 20 lbs. My shoulders were sore, I had headaches and a bad taste in the mouth. These troubles are now entirely gone and what I say I am ready to prove. I have told my friends of my wonderful cure, and many have been greatly benefited by using these pills."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the greatest kidney cure the world has ever known. One pill a dose, 25c. a box at all dealers, G. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.
