monds indicates the real suit is hearts. The notrump bidder now bids four hearts and thereby becomes declarer.
The convention has one great flaw. Players sometimes get absent-minded and forget they are using it. In fact, when Reese and Schapiro agreed to use it, they also agreed that the first one to forget would pay the other a fine of 100 Austrian schillings.

Sure enough, when this hand came up, Schapiro forgot about the convention and jumped to four hearts instead of four diamonds. To Reese the heart bid indicated a long spade suit. So Reese dutifully bid four spades.
Panic-stricken, and realizing what had happened, Schapiro jumped to six hearts, hoping Reese would interpret the bid correctly. Reese caught on, and passed.

Opening lead—ace of spades. When Terence Reese and Boris Schapiro went to Vienna last summer to represent Great Britain in the European championships, they agreed to play the Texas convention.

This is a method sometimes used to get the final contract played from the right seat. It follows the general principle that it is usually better for the stronger hand to be declarer.

The convention comes into being when one player bids a no-trump and finds partner with a good hand that includes a long major suit. Instead of responding in the suit, he jumps directly to four in the suit just below it in rank. Thus, a jump to four dia-

Work Pushed On Dictionary That Will 'Say It In Canadian'

EDMONTON (CP)—Canada is soon to have a dictionary of its own English. Researchers already have compiled a list of 25,000 Canadian words and the list is expected to grow rapidly.

Announcement of the project, which should be completed in two or three years, was made to the Canadian Linguistic Association meeting here Friday by Dr. M. H. Scargill of the English department at the University of Alberta, where the work will be centred.

Dr. Scargill said: "Our research program will extend from coast to coast and we expect to enlist many scholars, and students to lend a hand."

The text of his remarks was released to the press in advance of delivery.

The researchers' aim, he said, will be to ascertain the words, spellings, usage and pronunciation preferred by most educated Canadians.

Dr. Scargill cited these examples of typically Canadian words and word combinations: "Siplake," a hybrid game fish developed in Jasper National Park by crossing speckled trout with lake trout;

"Ponask," an Indian word meaning "to roast over an open fire," a word widely used in the Northwest Territories;

"Kerosene," a coined word first used as the trade name for coal oil, and "insulin," another coined word used for the diabetes medicine discovered in Canada;

"Banker," as used in Newfoundland to designate a man who fishes on the Grand Banks;

"Bear berry," a little plant defined incorrectly in American dictionaries as a shrub;

"Confederation," in Canada a proper name, is spelled in all existing dictionaries only with a small "c";

"Snake," a game played in the north, chiefly by natives, by running a stick through an iced furrow in the snow;

"Separate school," known in Britain as a Catholic school and in the United States as a parochial school is common only to Canada;

Among other well-known Canadian words are "gumbo" and "muskeg," "chuck races," "her ringchokers," "mukluks," "blue noses," and—best known in the Maritimes—"Digby chicken" for herring.

Dr. Scargill has been named as the co-ordinator of individual research carried out recently by himself and six others. He said Friday the group expects to collect about 150,000 examples of Canadian words within the next year.

Those working on the project with Dr. Scargill include Dr. G. M. Storey, Memorial University, St. John's, Nfld.

for Richard Arens, the committee's staff director.

Walter had suggested that Eaton was seeking, through an informal meeting Wednesday in the office of Republican Representative Gordon Scherer of Ohio, to avoid a formal appearance before the House committee.

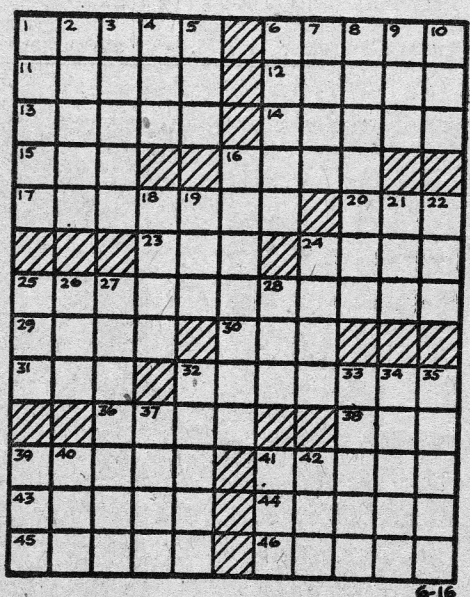

Arens announced May 19 that a subpoena had been issued for Eaton, who told a television audience May 4 that the FBI and some other agencies engage in "snooping, informing and creeping up on people."

Eaton said that far from seeking to get the subpoena quashed he would like nothing better than a chance to tell the committee to its face "how despicable are the un-American tactics of Messrs. Walter and Arens in attempting to intimidate, bully and push citizens around."

As Eaton was leaving by plane Friday for Cleveland, he said the subpoena still hasn't been served on him. He said to be served in the right of the American citizen to "independence of thought and expression," and added: "I'm minding my own business but any time a congressional committee wants to see me, I am ready."
