sonally promised to help obtain the release of nine British subjects and an Irish missionary held by the North Korean Reds.

Last Thursday the Russian commander in Germany proposed that he and his British counterpart Sir John Gage should go together to try to prevent more incidents like the shooting down of a British bomber by Russian MiGs.

And these followed speeches by Russian Premier Malenkov stating that there were no outstanding questions between East and West that couldn't be settled by peaceful means.

To Split West? Some Western observers speculated that the Russian gestures, particularly towards Britain, might be an effort to split the Anglo-American alliance by playing one against the other.

They also speculated that the Russian moves might be prompted more by internal considerations than by any effort to woo the friendship of the West.

Their thinking went this way: For years propagandists have told the Russian people that an attack by the West is imminent and that their only protection was the strengthening of the armed forces.

Staff Changes At Income Tax Office

Mr. Harold A. Forsythe

Recent staff changes in the local office of the Department of National Revenue, Taxation Branch, have brought promotions to two Charlottetown men, Messrs. Harold A. Forsythe of 16 Alexander Drive and Fred Shannon, 22 Park Terrace.

Mr. Forsythe, who is scheduled to leave here on March 30 for Fort William, Ont., to assume duty on April 1st, came to the city at an early age with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Forsythe and after attending West Kent School, completed three years work as a student at Prince of Wales College. He joined the staff of the Department of National Revenue in 1947 but continued his studies with a view to receiving the degree of Chartered Accountant, which he achieved last December.

Both prior to and following active service with the R.C.N.V.R. from 1940 to 1946, he was a member of the staff of the Eastern Trust Company.

Mr. Shannon is president of the Centennial Y's Men's Club. In 1940 he married Miss Ethel McPhee of Charlottetown and is the father of two girls, Anne and Catherine, and one son Douglas. The family will remain in Charlottetown for the present.

Equipment Arrives For Installation In Dried Milk Plant

Two carloads of equipment have arrived in Charlottetown to be installed in the new Dried Milk Plant of Central Creameries on Fitzroy Street. The prompt arrival of this modern machinery ensures that production will start in the plant in April as originally planned.

The list of patrons who have agreed to deliver whole milk to the new plant is steadily growing, and the number is now large enough to guarantee near capacity use of the plant's facilities. Many of the patrons are old associates of Central Creameries who hitherto delivered cream to the company but who have now become converted to the idea of selling whole milk. Dairy producers, it is said, will derive considerable advantage from the new set-up. It is pointed out that they will be freed from the necessity of separating the cream, a task which takes considerable time each day. Dairy men are also pleased that under the new system it will not be necessary to purchase expensive mechanical equipment. It is understood that any farmer who has access to spring water, a running stream, a good well, or ice will have no difficulty in delivering his milk to the Dried Milk Plant in good condition. Many farmers who have given thought to the new development believe it will have a very bracing effect on the dairy business throughout the province.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

Through the discovery of grafting man has brought the lowly crab-apple tree with the sour fruit to many trees each bearing a different kind and better tasting apple.

Prince Edward Islanders are fortunate in their drinking water lies far below the surface of the soil. In the Canadian West, farmers have to drill wells to a depth of 500 to 1000 feet to get decent drinking water. Boring to such a depth costs considerable money today. But, if you lived near the chalk cliffs of France and England, you'd have to drill much deeper to get water. One well near Paris is 1790 feet deep, one at Rochfort, France, is 2785 feet deep; at Columbus, Ohio, 2775; at Peath, Hungary, 3182, and at St. Louis, Mo., 3843. Artesian borings have been made in West Queensland, 4000 feet deep, and at Schaldep, in Prussia, there is one almost 5280 feet.

One advantage of a deep artesian well is that the water is warm enough for heating buildings. Famous for its Biblically associations is "Straight Street" running through the city now called Baroda. This street is mentioned in the book of the Acts. IX: 11. It is about two miles long. In the days of Saul of Tarsus (later called Paul) it was one of the world's finest thoroughfares, a hundred feet wide, and flanked with magnificent corinthian columns.

Children of multiple pregnancies seldom live for more than a few hours. The key sisters are the only quadruplets ever to reach maturity in the United States and Canada's famous Dionne sisters by this token are regarded as the miracle of this century.

On July 6, 1924, a huge halibute fell at Nebraska, which tipped the scale at one and one-half pounds and measured seven inches around!

The position of the queen cells in a beehive is always vertical, while that of the drones and workers is horizontal.

The feeding of geese and turkeys by forced feeding was practiced by the early Romans who endeavored to fatten geese which were produced in this way.

Nooding is one of the best methods of forced feeding. It consists of feeding the fowls with noodles which are a grain mixture, moistened with water, and formed into links in a sausage machine.

Links as long as four inches can be forced down the birds' throat by hand, in a carefully stepped-up feeding schedule. Livers weighing as much as three pounds are obtained in this way.

A new kind of fuel oil has been used successfully in India to drive high-speed diesel tractors. And, strange but true, this oil is derived from the lowly peanut.

I don't suppose many Prince Edward island farmers would be interested in the snake farming business though no doubt a creepy one. There is one or more sizable snake homes in Florida but the one I am going to tell you about is the Doonside Snake Farm on the South Coast, Natal, South Africa. There are over 10,000 deadly snakes on this unique farm where every comfort is provided, though of course, they are kept confined, each time being segregated in its own garden sanctuary.

Feeding this snake community is quite a problem in itself, as they prefer their food in the living state in the form of mice, rats, frogs, toads and other kindred creatures. Why do people engage in this strangest of farming ventures in the world? Because there's a scientific side to the business apart from the large profits to be made from raising snakes.

The venom is milked from the wigglers in regular "milking pens" set up for this special purpose and placed in small jars and tubs and shipped to labs to be used on human beings and animals that have been bitten, and if it were not for anti-snake serum, most of them would die.

Doctors inject the snake venoms into horses until they are immune to the poisons, and then take the life-saving serum from their blood.

Snake poison is also valuable in stopping excessive bleeding. Doctors now know that every kind of venomous snake has a slightly different mixture of poisons in its venom. Some prevent pain while others lessen the severity of epileptic fits. Scientists all over the world are busy experimenting with snake venoms, and who knows when the time may come that many illnesses and diseases will be cured by this method. Sometime you may become a happy wanderer and visit Doonside Snake Farm the happy home of 10,000 snakes.

Believe it or not the Beggs Island natives can do something that no scientists or physicians can explain, namely: walk through a pit filled with red hot stones without burning their feet.

The largest clams in the world come from the Great Barrier Reef off the coast of Queensland, Australia. Many of them weigh as much as 150 pounds, large enough to house a big pumpkin.

Many persons hold that grapefruit has a cultivated history of only half a century. So far as the U. S. A. is concerned the statement is true, but the fact is that this fruit has been cultivated for over 2,000 years in India. The fruit grows in grape-like clusters — hence the name.

Student Nurse Recruitment

Again this year the Association of Nurses of Prince Edward Island is sponsoring a Student Nurse Recruitment Week.

The nursing profession provides today a career of unlimited opportunity for the high school graduate who is looking for a future of security, satisfaction and success. "Nursing, like medicine, has public health, industrial nursing; and the rapidly developing field of nursing education.

To-day, nursing positions compare favourably with those in the business world — in salaries and employee practices concerned with working hours, sick leave and vacations.

Of Permanent Value

Everything that is learned in nursing stands by one during life, that which is learned of child care, nutrition, psychology, medicines and treatment; in dealing tactfully with all types of people; the confidence that is acquired of what to do in case of illness or accident. This is one career that can be combined successfully with marriage.

The physical, mental and emotional demands which are made upon young student nurses require physical, mental and emotional fitness of a high order. Complete physical examinations are made before admission to a school of nursing and throughout the course the students' health of primary importance. Health programs include physical examinations, X-rays, etc.

Because of the demands made upon the student nurse and adjustments that must be made to a wholly new environment, she needs a certain maturity and 18 years is considered to be the minimum required for admission to a school.

Other essentials of admission is that the prospective student meet the academic requirement of matriculation. Experience has proved that candidates for nursing require a sound foundation of general education in order to master the present day nursing curriculum, which must be in line with present day medicine.

Information may be had from the Director of Nursing at the nearest hospital.

Many of them, like Pte. Gabriel Kamouche of Beauce, Que. are going back because they like the army and prefer to serve where there's action. Others are going back "just for the fun of it".

Others, like Pte. Edgar Battah of St. Leon, N.B., were anxious to get back there "because that's where all our friends and pals are serving".

Premier Leads Way In The Red Cross Campaign

Premier J. Walter Jones when giving an address in connection with the current Red Cross annual campaign, in which he outlined the many benefits of the services carried on by this organization, urged the people of the Province to raise their contributions by at least 25 per cent this year.

He then immediately gave his own generous subscription to which he added 25 per cent as evidence of the sincerity of his appeal. Hope is expressed that everyone will consider when approached by the Red Cross volunteer canvassers.

Captain O. R. Simons, the Charlottetown chairman, stated last night that everything is now in readiness for the general canvass in Charlottetown which will get underway tomorrow. Division commanders and team captains will be meeting at Red Cross Headquarters this evening when cards will be allotted to the different teams. Members of these teams are out to raise more in the City than they have during the past couple of years in order to meet the ever-increasing demands for Red Cross Services.

Mr. Darrell McGuire, chairman of the Charlottetown special names committee, reported that while this committee's returns are not yet completed some substantial increases have been received.

Major Roy D. MacGillivray, the Queen's County chairman, said he was pleased with the response in Queen's County to date. Canvassers have been secured in nearly all the districts in the County but no doubt the present conditions of the roads will delay the collecting. He said that returns had been received from the following districts during the past week: Clinton, Meadowbank, McMillan, Flat River, Graham's Road, and Donaldson. In addition, contributions had been received from Brackley, Cape Egmont, Fortune Road, Borden, East Point, Souris Line Rd. South, Ebenezer and Pisiquid.
