EGYPTIAN RESIDENT SMILES BUT SITUATION CONTINUES GRAVE

Menzies Mission Presents Control Plan To Nasser

CAIRO (AP)—The Menzies mission to Egypt Monday formally presented to Egyptian President Nasser the 18-country plan for international control of the Suez Canal. It made arrangements also for "free and frank" discussion at subsequent meetings with him. Nasser, although opposed to international control, was described as completely co-operative in setting up the schedule for the conference with the five-nation mission headed by Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies of Australia.

The Egyptian president was in smiling good humor as he met during the day with his visitors and agreed to see them again today. But outside the conference room there were these developments: 1. Gen. Abdel Halkin Amer, commander in chief of the Egyptian army, said mobilization of his forces is complete and "our forces are deployed to meet any situation." Nasser has indicated he will seek Soviet aid if Egypt is attacked.

The French have put 800 service troops on the British crown colony defence bastion as the vanguard of a much greater force, expected to arrive today. 3. Another Briton was jailed by the Egyptians, who have accused the Britons of directing a spy plot against the Nasser regime. The British embassy said it did not know if this man—John Thornton Stanley, 40, an insurance company employee—was arrested in connection with any charges that have put three other Britons and nine Egyptians in jail. 4. Reports were current in Paris that foreign pilots on the Suez Canal have informed Egypt they will quit Sept. 15. A lack of trained pilots for the 103-mile waterway would greatly handicap operations.

The Ceylonese mission under Sir Claude Corea, who is high commissioner to Britain, will begin parallel talks in Peking Sept. 8 with the object of establishing full-scale diplomatic and trade relations with Red China.

He told his listeners that a good farm, a good farmer and a good family make up the best social institution in the world today. He expressed the opinion that here we have everything—agriculturally speaking, that Wisconsin or any other area in North America but said that agriculture in the Maritimes was now passing through a transition stage from subsistence farming to the commercial family farm. "Those who make the adjustments are the successful farmers. They are the farmers who acquire the necessary technical knowledge, who know how to use farm credit prudently, who will organize to take advantage of markets and who will build the facilities needed to modernize agriculture."

RUSSIAN ADMIIT HIDING WOMAN WANTED BY POLICE

LONDON (Reuters)—Nina Ponomareva, Russian champion, sought by British police, remained hidden in the Soviet embassy here Monday as her fellow athletes flew home to Moscow. A Russian embassy official confirmed for the first time that Mrs. Ponomareva was in the Embassy, where she is immune from arrest. "she will probably leave in two or three days' time," he said. Nina, 27, brawny Olympic record holder, was tossed into the middle of a diplomatic storm by five feathery hats which a London store accuses her of stealing. Describing the charge as "a dirty provocation," the Russians protest withdrew from the weekend track meet with Britain which brought them here.

EXPRESS REGRET

They left for Helsinki Monday without a race run, a hurdle cleared or a javelin tossed except in practice. At the airport, they expressed their regret at the trouble that had occurred. Though the affair of Nina and the hats has become an embarrassment to everyone from the government down, it is difficult to halt the wheels once the machinery of British law is in motion. The government is unable to interfere at this late stage because it is a jealously guarded tenet of British life that the law and the executive remain separate. There could be an outcry if there was any attempt to intervene.

STILL KEEPING WATCH

A court warrant has been issued for Nina's arrest because she did not turn up to face the shoplifting charge. Nothing except her presence in court can satisfy this. The question is—what will happen when Nina leaves the Soviet embassy to go home? As soon as she steps out of the gates, her immunity ends and she can be arrested. Despite the international repercussions of the affair, London police are dutifully keeping a watch for her. They were on the spot when the other Russian athletes flew off.

SPRIT OF GOODWILL

The talks between Corea and So viet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily Kuznetsov took place "in a spirit of friendship, mutual goodwill and co-operation." The communique said. It listed these results: 1. An agreement to exchange ambassadors and diplomatic missions. 2. Arrangements to begin negotiations soon for a trade and payments pact that will enable Russia to import some of Ceylon's agricultural products and minerals and export industrial equipment to Ceylon. 3. An understanding that there is room "for economic co-operation" between the two countries, which will form the basis of a full-scale agreement soon to be negotiated.

U. S. Traffic Toll Declines In Closing Hours Of Holiday

CHICAGO (AP)—The highway death rate dropped in the closing hours of the Labor Day holiday weekend Monday night and the United States Safety Council held out hope that the final toll would fall far short of its advance estimate of 490 deaths. Although millions of homebound motorists were jamming the nation's highways, an Associated Press survey reported only the relatively low number of 46 traffic deaths in a seven-hour period between 4 and 11 p.m. EDT. That raised the traffic-death toll to 402. In addition, there have been 74 drownings and 62 deaths from miscellaneous causes for an overall total of 538. Compilation of the holiday
