HIS TIME HAD COME.

So Thought a Quebec Man Until
Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Him

Quebec, April 23.—Narcisse Maugy, of 109 St. Anne Street, this city, considers himself an extremely fortunate man. He has come through the ordeal of Bright's Disease alive.

Bright's Disease is an extremely fatal disease of the kidneys. The sufferer lingers on, growing weaker and weaker, slowly and miserably dying. Once it fastens itself upon a victim there is only one hope to save him. Dodd's Kidney Pills. But they never fail.

Narcisse Maugy says: "I have endured Bright's Disease for over five years. Doctors told me I would never get well. I thought my time had come. A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have just finished the fourth box and am cured."

Death is natural, beautiful, progressive. There is small doubt it is treated far too sentimentally.

A CURIOUS BOER CHRISTENING.

Boer housewives, as a rule, do not make much fuss over the christening of their progeny, the custom being to get a baby properly and lawfully named when they 'go to town' to make some purchases, thereby saving expense, and, to their way of thinking, unnecessary trouble at the same time. An amusing incident occurred in a Dutch church at Pretoria not long ago in connection with a very stolid-looking farmer's wife, who had brought her baby into town in the conventional way to be christened. Before leaving home her husband had written the names it was intended to give the infant on one slip of paper, and the list of the household requirements on another, and both were carefully folded and put in the great leather purse she carried. When the proper time arrived the fond mother handed up a slip of paper to the minister, who read and re-read it, and then remarked that Koffie, Rijst, Suiker, Gember Komfijit (the Boer names for coffee, rice, sugar and jam), were rather odd names for the child, and ones which might prove embarrassing to the possessor at some future time. Then the other slip of paper was produced, and explanations followed. — Christian Herald.

Cecil Rhodes has sailed for South Africa, with the consciousness that Lord Roberts had justified in effect the strictures upon the military authorities which Julian Ralph had put into his mouth at Kimberley and which he has not taken the trouble to deny. Mr. Rhodes is not likely to exercise much influence in the immediate settlement of South African questions, but he has an ally in the German emperor, and his ambitious railway projects will ultimately be taken up. A great financier like Lord Cromer will be needed as soon as the war is ended and he cannot be under the influence of Rhodes or Alfred Beit, for the wealth of the Rand is the only resource for meeting the immense colonial claims for damages and demands upon the imperial exchequer for indemnities.

Corporal Downey, of Montreal, writing from Bloemfontein says: "Even we in the ranks cannot help seeing in the daily movement of this great army, the great purpose of our General; everything moves with machine-like regularity of precision, every staff officer knowing and doing his work with perfect coolness and politeness; perfect gentlemen these, with their neat uniforms and their fine horses. The large convoys, too, which must have been from 15 to 20 miles in length, were handled without a hitch. When we look back at our experience of the past five weeks, with our long marches, nine days in the firing line with little water and less food, it all seems like a dream, but we have waked up and after a few days rest, to get back our strength, we will be ready for it again, if Kruger doesn't give in."

Perhaps some readers will recall the first war song of the Crimean war:

What will they say in England,
When the story there is told
Of deeds of might on Alma's height
Done by the brave and bold—
Of Russia, proud at noon-tide,
Humbled ere set of sun—
They'll say 'twas like old England,
They'll say 'twas nobly done.

These almost forgotten lines come back to memory on reading the story of Paardeberg and the capture of Bloemfontein.

Blood Disorders

are simply kidney disorders. The kidneys filter the blood of all that shouldn't be there. The blood passes through the kidneys every three minutes. If the kidneys do their work no impurity or cause of disorder can remain in the circulation longer than that time. Therefore if your blood is out of order your kidneys have failed in their work. They are in need of stimulation, strengthening or doctoring. One medicine will do all three, the finest and most imitated blood medicine there is.
