A FINE COLLECTION OF COINS.

The St. John, N. B., Globe thus describes the exhibit of coins made at the Dominion Exhibition, recently held in that city:—"The lovers of old and rare coins should not fail to see the collection shown by Mr. John S. Maclaren in the little room off the gallery of the old building used previously as an art gallery. Mr. Maclaren is an enthusiast in the matter of numismatics, and his enthusiasm, supported by knowledge and judgment, has led him to secure a splendid collection of coins. The total number exhibited in his five cases is 1,850. Not alone old and rare coins are shown, but complete sets of the coins of many countries are gathered together. For instance, all the English gold coins from the 5 guinea piece to the third of a guinea are shown. There are 42 pieces, 2 guinea pieces, spades, crown guineas and half spades. There are specimens of the silver coins from the time of William the Conqueror to Elizabeth. From Elizabeth to Victoria the set is nearly complete. Oliver Cromwell's set is nearly complete—so with the coins of the reigns of Charles II., James II., William and Mary. The Oliver Cromwell coins are very rare. The third of a farthing is the smallest, in value, in the collection, and it was probably small enough for all practical purposes. The two-penny is the largest in copper. Two Gothic crowns of Victoria are very hand some. There is an uncirculated coin of the Bank of England, one dollar of the Bank of England, and 6s. of the Bank of Ireland. Of course, Mr. Maclaren is very proud of his Scottish collection. This embraces coins issued from the time of William the Lion, to Queen Elizabeth. There are coins of Robert Bruce, David Bruce, etc., the Crookston dollar, crown of James VI. and clipped coin, is, 8d., of Rothesay. There is a magnificent teston struck in honor of the marriage of Mary and Francis, Dauphin of France in 1558. In Irish coins the collection is not rich, but there are two, of silver, issued many hundred years ago. As to the United States, the collection is superb. There is a specimen of the first issue of the $10 gold piece, specimens of the old $5 gold pieces; a $2 piece of 1793; a Brigham Young $5 piece of 1849; very rare half dollars of 1796 and 1797 and rare ones of 1815 and 1852; a full set of American half dollars—that is, a specimen of one half dollar issued each year; also sets of cents and half cents. The coins issued by the colonies before the revolution are real curiosities; there is quite an assortment of them. There are French coins from Louis XIII. down to the present day, including a 40 franc gold piece of the first Napoleon. Spain, Portugal, Austria, (including a Maria Theresia), Belgium, Holland and Netherlands are well represented. Germany has contributed some fine old coins. There are crowns, single, double and triple including the Truth dollar of 1598. A double crown of Leopold the Hogmouth is a valuable coin. There is a seign piece of the Arch-bishop of Salzburg. (Very old) and many other old and rare coins. Going back to the old days of Greece and Rome, Mr. Maclaren can point with pride to a silver coin of the city, Regina, 2,700 years old. There is a beautiful coin of the city, Antioch. The medal of the Messiah is a rarity. Many of the Papal pieces are also very scarce. There are South American coins and coins from British Burmah, East Indies, Sierra Leone, etc. A Hamburg schilling has quite a history. It was picked up on a deep sea lead from the barque "Silver Cloud," and was presented by the owner of the vessel, Mr. O. Emery, to Mr. Maclaren. The collection also embraces medallions of Julius Caesar and others; a "Republic of Ireland," $10 bond, Canadian tokens, paper money of the old colonies, and a great mixture of coins generally. The entire collection is well worth studying.
