Cough medicines, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is in greater demand than ever. No preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable to the taste, and so widely known, as this. It is the family medicine in thousands of households.

"I have suffered for years from a bronchial trouble that, whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, shows itself by a very annoying tickling sensation in the throat and by difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none does so well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which always gives prompt relief in returns of my old complaint."—Ernest A. Hepler, Inspector of Public Roads, Parish Terre Bonne, La.

"I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults."—Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"Twenty years ago I was troubled with a disease of the lungs. Doctors advised me no relief and considered my case hopeless. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and before I had finished one bottle, found relief. I continued to take this medicine until a cure was effected. I believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—Samuel Griggs, Waukegan, Ill.

"Six years ago I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs and soon developed all the alarming symptoms of Consumption. I had a cough, night sweats, bleeding of the lungs, pains in chest and sides, and was so prostrated as to be confined to my bed most of the time. After trying various prescriptions, without benefit, my physician finally determined to give me Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took it, and the effect was magical. I seemed to rally from the first dose of this medicine, and, after using only three bottles, am as well and sound as ever."—Rodney Johnson, Springfield, Ill.

Local and Other Items.

I. O. O. F.—Fraternal visit of St. Lawrence Lodge to Willey Lodge to-night.

For restoring the color, thickening the growth, and beautifying the hair, and for preventing baldness, Hall's Hair Renewer is unsurpassed.

AQUATIC.—A despatch from Toronto says that William O'Connor, champion oarsman, has left for San Francisco, where he will row Gaudaur early in March next.

THE MAILS.—The steamer Stanley arrived at Georgetown from Pictou this forenoon, and mails and passengers arrived in the city shortly before one o'clock this afternoon.

REAL ESTATE.—The assessed valuation of New York real estate is $1,334,785,866. One ward, the 19th, has a valuation of $21,941,420, and another, the 12th, of $188,939,510.

NEW LAW.—It is reported by some of our exchanges that the legislature of Ohio will shortly be asked to pass a law prohibiting any minister of the gospel from being present at an execution as the spiritual adviser of the condemned.

That beautiful glossy sheen, so much admired in hair, can be secured by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. There is nothing better than this preparation for strengthening the scalp and keeping it free from dandruff and itching eruptions.

SMOKER'S TABLE.—The time for guessing for the smoker's table, on exhibition in Reddin's drug store, expires on Saturday, the 2nd of February. Every smoker should have a guess at the number of beans in the bottle which stands beside the table. Only ten cents a chance.

DIVORCE STATISTICS.—English statistics of divorce covering the three decades from 1858 to 1888 show the following facts:—Petitions for dissolution of marriage have increased from 2,188 to 4,761; petitions for judicial separation from 536 to 1,230; decrees absolute 1,279 to 3,371.

MARRIAGE LICENSE.—A Columbus, S. C., despatch says: A strong effort has been made to have a marriage license in this State, and the advocates of the measure has been strengthened by a trick played on the Rev. A. Durham, of Piedmont, by Franklin Merritt and Robert Dilworth, two young men, the former being attired as a woman, who applied to be married. The ceremony was performed, and the preacher inserted the marriage notice in a local paper before he was undeceived.

WINTER CARNIVAL.—We have received a very compactly arranged and neatly printed pamphlet-programme of the carnival to be held in Montreal next month. The festivities will begin with the opening of the toboggan slides on the 4th Feb., and will close on the evening of the 9th with hockey and skating matches, tobogganning, snow-shoe club dinner, and grand fireworks display and illumination of ice palaces and public buildings. In addition to the programme, the pamphlet contains an interesting sketch of Montreal and a good deal of other information.

STUPID.—Canada's Comic Paper, Grip, is at times epically, but often obtuse. In its last issue it gives the "Portrait of Sam Fee, the eminent Chinese Engineer of the Marine Department, under whose auspices the new steamer for the P. E. Island service was brought from the Old Country." It is evidently intended for Mr. McElhinney, yet the likeness and intention are so indiscriminate that it would have been better had Mr. Bengough given an explanation like unto the small boy who, when drawing a rude dwelling, never failed to write underneath "This is a house."

BOSTON'S WEALTH.—The Boston Herald each year publishes a statement of the taxes levied on individuals and corporations, the figures given in which are carefully taken from the books of the assessors. The list published a few days ago shows that more than $200,000,000 of personal property is taxed, and more than $563,000,000 of real estate. The actual amount of wealth in the city is, of course, only faintly indicated by the $200,000,000 of personal estate which the assessors found. Large sums are invested in untaxable bonds, and great sums are undoubtedly concealed, while still other vast sums, partly represented by the $100,000,000 which are annually paid in dividends to Bostonians, are invested in other States and taxed there.

Personal.

Harvey McKenna, the billiardist, is having great success on his southern exhibition tour. Charles King, of Middleton, Mass., was 108 years old on Wednesday. He is in good health. He has 600 descendants.

Mr. Froude's book on Australia has given birth to a new word in the assembly house at Melbourne. It is "Froudacity."

Mrs. Louisa Krane, of New York, has been the wife of three men within eighteen months. Louisa is now only 18 years old and an orphan. Under more favourable circumstances she might have done better. Still there are those who contend that marriage is a failure.

During the war Miss N., a beautiful and spirited Virginian, whose brother (a Confederate soldier) had been taken prisoner by the Union forces, was desirous of obtaining a pass which would enable her to visit him. Francis P. Blair agreed to secure an audience with the President, but warned his young and rather impulsive friend to be very prudent and not let a word escape her which would betray her Southern sympathies. They were ushered into the presence of Mr. Lincoln, and the object for which they had come stated. The tall, grave man bent down to the petite maiden, and looking searchingly into her face, said: "You are loyal, of course? Her bright eyes flashed. She hesitated a moment, and then, with a face eloquent with emotion and honest as his own, she replied: "Yes, loyal to the heart's core—to Virginia!" Mr. Lincoln kept his intent gaze on her for a moment longer and then went to his desk, wrote a line or two, and handed her the paper. With a bow the interview terminated. Once outside the vexation of Mr. Blair found vent in reproachful words: "Now, you have done it!" said: "Didn't I warn you to be very careful? You have only yourself to blame." Miss N. made no reply, but opened the paper. It contained these words: "Pass Miss N. she is an honest girl, and can be trusted."

BOOK FOUR.

CHAPTER II.

Rising from the obeisance with which he accompanied the words, he said, boldly: "Cholula should be the grave of the invaders. The whole population should strike them in the narrow streets where they can best be assailed. Shut up in some square or temple, hunger will fight them for us, and win. But I would not trust the citizens alone. In sight of the temples, so close that a conch could summon them to the attack, I would encamp a hundred thousand warriors. Better the desolation of Cholula than Tenochtitlan. If all things else failed, I would take to the last resort; I would call in the waters of Tezucaco and drown the city to the highest azoteas. So would I, O king, if the crown and scepter were mine."

Montezuma looked from the speaker to the lake.

"The project is bold," he said musingly; "but if I failed, my son?"

"The failure should be but the beginning of the war."

"What would the nations say?"

"They would say, 'Montezuma is still the great king.' If they do not that—"

"What then?"

"Call on the tototchtli. The gods can be made speak whatever your policy demands."

"Does my son blaspheme?" said Montezuma angrily.

"Nay, I but spoke of what has happened. Long rule the good god of our fathers!"

Yet the monarch was not satisfied. Never before had discourse been addressed to him in strain so bold.

"They see all things, even our hearts," he said, turning coldly away. "Farewell. A courier will come for you when your presence is wanted in the city."

And so they separated, conscious that no healing had been brought to their broken friendship. As the canoe moved off, the tzin knelt, but the king looked not that way again.

CHAPTER III.

LOVE ON THE LAKE.

"What can they mean? Here have they been loitering since morning, as if the lake, like tianguis, were a place for idlers. As I love the gods, if I knew them, they should be punished!"

So the farmer of the chinampa, heretofore described as the property of the princess Tula gave expression to his wrath; after which he returned to his employment; that is he went crawling among the shrubs and flowers, pruning-knife in hand, here clipping a limb, there loosening the loam. Emerging from the thicket after a protracted stay, his ire was again aroused.

"Still there! Thieves, maybe, watching a chance to steal. But we shall see. My work is done, and I will not take eyes off them again."

The good man's alarm was occasioned by the occupants of a canoe, which, since sunrise, had been lying about the garden, never stationary, seldom more than three hundred yards away, yet always keeping on the side next the city. Once in a while the slaves withdrew their paddles, leaving the vessel to the breeze; at such times it drifted so near that he could see the voyagers reclining in the shade of the blue canopy, wrapped occapilis such as none but lords or distinguished merchants were permitted to wear.

The leisurely voyagers, on their part, appeared to have a perfect understanding of the light in which they were viewed from the chinampa.

"There he is again! See! I said one of them."

The other lifted the curtain, and looked, and laughed.

Ah! if we could send an arrow there, just near enough to whistle through the orange-trees. Tula would never hear the end of the story. He would tell her how two thieves came to plunder him; how they shot at him; how narrowly he escaped—

"And how valiantly he defended the garden. By Our Mother, Io, I have a mind to try him!"

Hualpa half rose to measure the distance, but fell back at once.

"No. Better that we get into no difficulty. We are messengers, and have these flowers to deliver. Besides, the judge is not to my liking."

"Tula is merciful, and would forgive you for the tzin's sake."

"I meant the judge of the court," Hualpa said soberly. "You never saw him lift the golden arrow as if to draw it across your portrait. It is pleasant sitting here in the shade, rocked by the water."

"And pleasant yet to be made noble and master of a palace over by Chapultepec," Io answered. "But see! Yonder is a canoe."

"From the city?"

"It is too far off; wait awhile."

But Hualpa, impatient, leaned over the side and looked for himself. At the time they were up in the northern part of the lake, at least a league from the capital. Long, regular swells, something like those of the sea when settling into calm, tumbled the surface; far to the south, however, he discerned the canoe, looking no larger than a blue-winged gull.

"It is coming; I see the prow this way. Is the vase ready?"

"The vase! You forgot; there are two of them."

Hualpa looked down confused.

"Does the tzin intend them both for Tula?"

Hualpa was the more embarrassed.

"Flowers have a meaning; sometimes they tell tales. Let me see if I cannot read what the tzin would say to Tula?"

And Io went forward and brought the vases, and, placing them before him began to study each flower.

"Io," said Hualpa, in a low voice, "but one of the vases is the tzin's."

"And the other?" asked the prince, looking up.

Hualpa's face flushed deeper.

"The other is mine. Have you not two sisters?"

Io's eyes dilated; a moment he was serious, then he burst out laughing.

"I have you now! Neneztin—she, too, has a lover."

The hunter never found himself so at a loss; he played with the loops of his escapuli, and
