A GREAT MEDICINE.
Cod-liver Oil is useful beyond any praise it has ever won, and yet few are willing or can take it in its natural state. Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil is not offensive; it is al-

BUSINESS ROMANCE.
When Miss Magnolia carefully withdrew the covers from the great cedar trunk, unfolded the old damask tablecloth which enveloped it and spread out its shining folds for the admiration of her niece, Rosalie, that young lady clasped her pretty hands and quoth "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." Miss Magnolia nodded and smiled.
She was small and round and brown as a nutmeg and of decidedly certain age could be. But her heart, which had been full of sentiment once, was a warm and sensitive organ still. And she took a deal of interest in Rosalie's romance.
"Yes, my dear, it is a thing of beauty.
And to think that I wore it but twice!
Dear Rosalie!"
"You had a lover, then, auntie?" inquired Rosalie.
"Yes, pet. This was one of the dresses got up for my marriage. It just became worn on business. It is just the gown for our fancy dress ball," burried on Miss Magnolia. "A trifle short, if course, but here is quite a piece turned in at the top, so you could let it down. You shall go as a lady of long ago."
"Not so very long ago, auntie," protested Rosalie. "You will think, but I don't like to take it. It is too lovely."
"Not for a moment of war. Remember, you are going to conquer the proprietor."
"That is so, and the master should have written. There is she armed with a pretty dress!"
The fog which Miss Rosalie had proposed arraying herself with the obsolete gown of her handsome lover. He had promptly and perversely opposed the marriage of his niece. The young fellow would have ignored the refusal of his relative were it not that the old gentleman had always been very kind to him—had, indeed, taken the place of his dead father. So he decided that Rosalie should meet his uncle and put his prejudice to test.
"He's coming to visit an old friend of his," Cyril had said. "Judge Charteau. You know the Charteau family, of course you have heard they are going to give a fancy dress ball next month in honor of the coming out of their daughter Lisette. You will receive a card, and you will attend. You will meet Uncle Albert and you will take his heart by storm."
"I don't believe he planned his scheme. He has a great deal of experience. But Rosalie protested. It was to be a grand ball and she had nothing to wear. Besides, she did not like the idea of plotting to make a person like her. And she said:
"Please you!" cried Cyril. "He doesn't disturb you. I don't believe he even knows your name. His resentment is general, not particular. As soon as I told him I was in love with a Southern girl he—he I have to drop into slang, Rosalie—sat square down upon you, a Southern girl! He told me him when he was young, and he is bound to save me from a like awful fate. But when once he sees you he is bound to capitulate. He is a regular old brick—Uncle Albert!"
"But I have nothing to wear. And what is more, I cannot buy a dress for the Charteau ball. We—Aunt Magnolia and I—are poor as the rebels of the church!"
"But just then Miss Magnolia came to Rosalie's relief, like a regular little fairy godmother.
"The very thing!" she cried. "My parlor gown!"
Rosalie regarded her dubiously, determining to know her aunt's treasure, her jewels, her lace, her rich, glittering brocade.
"Do you mean to give me that?"
"Miss Magnolia's bright old eyes winked very rapidly indeed.
"Do, my dear! I was young once myself."
"And that was how Rosalie Wilde came to be the belle of Mme. Char-teau's fancy-dress ball. The proposed "fascinating" had been the talk of New Orleans for several weeks. The night long anticipated, was cool, crisp and bright. The "fascinating" had been sense was brilliantly lighted. Many a carriage rolled up, rolled off. When Rosalie descended from the brougham of her chaperon she felt a little nervous, a little excited and conscious that she was looking uncommonly well.
As indeed she was. Quite a picture was the pretty young figure in the glimmering gown of pale yellow satin, picturesquely puffed and quaintly fantastic. The carriage, cut round, revealed the lady, tall that. Dainty house-dress washed away, with its slender neck also exquisitely round, and the small, olive-tinted face was lighted to loveliness by pearly black-eyes.
A flash of admiration succeeded the serene composure of Cyril Rodney's countenance as he caught sight of her.
"So this is the way to her side."
"Queen Rosalie," he murmured.
"You're fit for the prettiest girl here to-night. Poor Uncle Albert! How complete will be his surrender." She swept him a mocking courtesy.
"Ah!" she said, smiling, "if that conviction were but mine."
"The sentence ended in a long, soft sigh.
"I'll be your guide," he began. "Confound it! I never can get my tongue around your circumlocution. The however, that if there were no misadventure in the world the world would suffice. Now, prepare to face the music." "Oh, my dear! He soon returned and by his side was a sturdy old gentleman.
"The dragon!" he murmured.
"Silver hair and a dark moustache had the dragon. A florid complexion had the dragon and a manner that was grave, dignified and courteous.
"Uncle Albert," explained Cyril with boyish eagerness, "this is Miss Rosaline Wilde."
"Wilde!"
The old gentleman started perceptibly. He looked at the blushing girl, at the yellowish gown. He bowed.
"And," avowed young Rodney, sending his sweetest a swift smile of encouragement, "and—the young lady of whom I spoke to you."
"Oh!" exclaimed Albert Ellsworth.
Then, interrogatively, "Wilde? Was your father's name Clayton Wilde?" Rosalie assented.
"And your mother's maiden name was Magnolia Kingsley?" "Oh, dear, no! Aunt Magnolia was never married. My mother's name was Magnolia Kingsley."
"Magnolia Kingsley?"
"That is the name of the dragon."
"The dragon?"
"The dragon?" faltered Miss Magnolia.
"That," murmured the little lady, feeling that she was in for it, and might as well make the best of it, "is what Rosalie and I called Cyril's conquer him."
"Well, she did. The boy will marry Madelaine's pretty daughter. And you Magnolia—you'll marry me."
"Oh, dear, no! I'm too old."
"Not a day."
"And ugly—now."
"Loveliest woman in the world to me," insisted the dragon loyally.
"Bless you, my children," cried a voice from above.
The pair in the courtyard glanced up quickly. On one of the inner balconies stood Rosalie and Cyril.
"Vanish, you scamp!" roared the dragon.
"I shan't allow you to marry a Southern girl, sir!" shouted back Cyril, as he and Rosalie beat a brisk retreat.
Laughing and laughing they faced each other in the old drawing room.
"Everything is lovely, sweetest," cried Cyril in an ecstasy. "Waverly Magazine."

Priestley's "Eudora" Cloth
"Eudora" is the name of the new black dress fabric put upon the market by the Priestleys, whose famous dress goods are a household word all over the world. It is like their much esteemed Henrietta cloth; indeed, it has all their merits, and a few things which they lack. It is made in black only, it is a perfect dust shedder; has extra weight and width; and, fitting easily and draping gracefully it gives a distinction to the wearer which all of Priestley's goods confer. This is their excellence, which sets them apart from all other goods. "Eudora" is wrapped on "The Varnished Board," and Priestley's name is stamped on every five yards so that ladies cannot be deceived.

world. It is like their much esteemed Henrietta cloth; indeed, it has all their merits, and a few things which they lack. It is made in black only, it is a perfect dust shedder; has extra weight and width; and, fitting easily and draping gracefully it gives a distinction to the wearer which all of Priestley's goods confer. This is their excellence, which sets them apart from all other goods. "Eudora" is wrapped on "The Varnished Board," and Priestley's name is stamped on every five yards so that ladies cannot be deceived.

How About Lamps.
The days are getting shorter, and we want you to inspect our Lamp department. Some people, you know, prefer them to gas, and our assortment is so large that we can suit any taste and any pocket. Then, again, what makes a nicer present than a handsome Lamp?

Undertakers' Notice
"Death's but a path that must be trod, If man would ever pass to God." Pardon our intrusion upon your time, but being newcomers we take this method of introducing ourselves, trusting that it may be a long time ere you may have occasion to employ us in our capacity; but should you or any of your friends need the preparation for the last rest, we would kindly ask you to consider this notice.
We will always carry a full assortment of Coffins, Caskets, Shrouds, etc., to suit the desire of the poorest or fulfill the last requests of the wealthiest, and having devoted time and study to business, can assure you that if ever called upon we will treat you with all consideration which sad moments, when our services are in demand, require. We are here to remain, and while administering to the dead will assuage the feelings of the living.
Please remember us, as we assure you honorable treatment.
Will be on hand night and day at our place of business, corner Queen and Kent Streets, opposite City Building and T. J.
Morris' Grocery.
P. S.—The business will be continued as usual by A. H. WADMAN at Crapaud.
Very respectfully yours,
A. H. WADMAN,

IN THE TREATY PORTS.
A Canadian Product Finds Favor in the Land of Confucius.
Vancouver (Special) Oct. 14.—A passenger by the last vessel from China stated the other day that among other Canadian products which are fast coming into favor in the Chinese treaty ports, is the Canada specific remedy for kidney diseases of all kinds known as Dodd's Kidney Pills. The medicine was first introduced by Canadians and the increase in its use both by Europeans and natives is attributed first to the accounts of its success in the Canadian and American newspapers, many of which are received in Shanghai and other ports, and later to its established efficacy in curing all kinds of kidney diseases, which are very prevalent in the country.
