The Late Archbishop Lynch.

A PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND PRIEST'S TRIBUTE TO HIS MEMORY.

The deep regret which accompanies the announcement of the death of Archbishop Lynch is not circumscribed by the limits of the Province over which he exercised Archiepiscopal jurisdiction, but extends from ocean to ocean. As the greatness of any of our citizens cannot be exclusively claimed by the particular Province of which he is a resident, but extends itself, honors and ennobles the whole nation, so, also, the regret experienced at the death of such a personage is not local but universal. Here, in Prince Edward Island, we mourn with you in Ontario, and indeed with the whole Dominion, the loss of a great man, a true and gifted bishop and the friend of our suffering race wherever found. Perhaps outside his own Province and possibly Quebec, Archbishop Lynch was nowhere in this Dominion better known and more generally beloved than in this Island Province. True, we only enjoyed his personal acquaintance within the last three or four years; but that was long enough to learn to love, honor and esteem him, to feel for him in his trial, to rejoice with him in his successes, and now to mourn for him with a grief all the more poignant because the great man had been so long with us.

Mr. Lynch passed three vacations on the Island. He came here first to assist at the Silver Jubilee celebration of our bishop, and was then, as each succeeding year after, the guest of the late regretted Owen Connolly, Esq. Every recurring summer we welcomed the venerable prelate to our shores and bade him adieu again after a visit of about six weeks, pleased in the consciousness of his having improved much in health, if sorry that the work of his vast diocese called him hence so early. How he enjoyed his holiday here I need not say. In a speech he delivered at the banquet in St. Dunstan's College, on the occasion of his first arrival here, (the Jubilee celebration above mentioned) he spoke of the delight he experienced on beholding this beautiful Island, and in the course of his remarks, he said he could not refrain from designating it "An Ireland of the Island," as outside the Emerald Isle itself he had never seen in all the wide world, such richness of verdure, such a scene of quiet beauty and abundant comfort. It is not strange, then, that he endeavored to find time yearly to pay us a short visit; and that in a small Province like this, he should become generally known and beloved.

Of His Grace's scholarly qualities we were often the enthusiastic witnesses. His efforts in the cause of religion in his native province made themselves felt on religion the Dominion over. We watched with keen interest his defence of our Holy Faith against false aspersions, and from our hearts thanked God that on every occasion the strength to successfully repel each fierce attack was not withheld from his worthy minister. Mr
