Overseas visitors to Britain totalled nearly 1,800,000 in 1963, a 10 per cent increase over 1962.

Nelson Castonguay Orders 500 Tons Election Supplies

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Chief electoral officer Nelson Castonguay is getting set for a general election. But that doesn't mean an early vote is in the offing.

Mr. Castonguay will place orders next week for 500 tons of election supplies just as a precaution. His job requires him to be ready for an election at any time.

Because of the immense printing job involved in the $400,000 worth of election material, he has to place orders weeks and sometimes months ahead of any possible election date.

By ordering the printing of enumeration supplies, the forms required for the house-to-house canvass conducted before election day to draw up a list of persons eligible to vote, Mr. Castonguay will be in a position to hold a national enumeration any time after mid-January.

The remaining election supplies — ballots, election instructions to returning officers and deputy returning officers and everything down to the pencils supplied in polling booths — should be on Mr. Castonguay's shelves by April.

EARLY VOTE UNLIKELY

Although Mr. Castonguay is clearing the decks for action, the government has indicated publicly it has no plans for an early election.

Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons last week the government intends to go ahead with its program for this Parliament and any election before the end of this Parliament will be the responsibility of the opposition parties. The current Parliament was elected for a maximum of five years, until April, 1968.

Mr. Castonguay has been taking a calculated risk since the April election in not re-ordering election supplies. A minority government such as resulted from the election always poses the possibility of the government being defeated and an election being called.

Mr. Castonguay's decision not to re-order election supplies immediately after the April election was in marked contrast to what occurred at the 1962 election, which also produced a minority government.

Mr. Castonguay had a hunch during the June, 1962, campaign that such might be the result. Before the votes were even cast he had placed orders for another full stock of election supplies. As a result, he was ready to hold another election in September of that year.

Johnson's Oil Policy Move Seen Not Affecting Canada

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson's decision to delegate national oil policy to Interior Secretary Udall will not affect U.S. import policy as far as Canada is concerned, an interior department spokesman said Tuesday.

"We shall continue as we have before," the spokesman added in response to inquiries following Udall's meeting Monday with Johnson, whose home state of Texas is a major oil producer.

The U.S. maintains a ceiling on imports, fixed at 12.2 per cent of estimated U.S. production, but overland shipments from Canada and Mexico are excluded from the restrictions.

Mexico has agreed voluntarily to maintain a ceiling on such shipments but Canada has not.

From time to time Udall has urged Canadian exports to exercise caution in trying to get too large a share of the U.S. oil market. The main U.S. concern is the rise of Canadian shipments east of the Rocky Mountains.

American officials are not concerned about rising imports on the west coast where Canada's main competition comes from other foreign suppliers.

Two years ago Udall said a gradual rise in imports from Canada should not affect the U.S. industry materially, providing shipments are orderly and well-timed.

But, he added, if imports from Canada have "a marked and abrupt adverse effect" on the American industry, a review of Canadian exemptions would result.

Imports from Canada continued to rise and in recent months Udall has shown less concern over this issue. He has concentrated more on getting negotiations completed with Canada on the Columbia River power project and in building Canadian and U.S. support for his proposed $1,000,000,000 project to harness the flow of Fundy's Passamaquoddy tides for a vast supply of power for the New England area.

South Bend Plant Claimed 'Bleeding' Studebaker Co.

NEW YORK (CP)—Officials of Studebaker Corporation said here they were forced to shift automotive production to Canada because the company was being "bled to death" at South Bend, Ind.

Executives of the company appeared at a press conference to explain the decision, announced Monday to build all Studebaker cars at the company's Hamilton, Ont., plant.

Money losing facilities at South Bend, Ind., are to be shut down, although about 1,000 of 8,000 employees there will be retained to make components for the Canadian plant.

The officials said the company has lost $40,000,000 since 195 on U. S. automotive production.

It also was announced that Gordon E. Grundy, 51-year-old president of Studebaker of Canada Limited, now will head the company's automotive division.

PLEDGE ON DOLLAR

He told the press conference he had been given assurances—"at least as far as politicians will go"—that the pegged 7½ per-cent discount rate on the Canadian dollar will be maintained "for some time to come."

This exchange rate was a factor in the decision to move, along with favorable tariff and duty rates.

Grundy said wage rates were probably 10 to 15 per cent lower in Hamilton but were "consistent with the cost of living" there. This was not an important factor in the decision.

Randolph Guthrie, chairman of the board, backed up this statement.

The officials said there would not be much stress on design at the Hamilton plant and that the appearance of the Studebaker would remain largely unchanged for the time being.

But they rejected a suggestion that they planned to "run out this model and call it a day."

Grundy said the move will probably result in a "substantial increase" in employment and production at the Hamilton plant, but declined to make specific predictions. The plant has been producing about 11,000 cars a year on average and has a capacity of 30,000.

The full line of Lark cars will be assembled at Hamilton, with the exception of the lowest-priced Challenger series. The Avanti sports car is to be dropped. No new models are planned.

About half of the Canadian Studebaker will be built from U.S. components. Some of the South Bend workers will be transferred to Hamilton, but the officials could not say how many.

In Ottawa, meanwhile, Industry Minister Drury said in an interview he was being cautious in his enthusiasm for the future of Studebaker production in Canada. A key question was the future of the dealership organization in the U.S. and whether the company would try to retain any sizable market for Canadian-built cars there.

In Washington the administrator of the U.S. area redevelopment program met with federal, Indiana and labor officials to study the impact of the Studebaker move on South Bend.

Note In Bottle Sparks Romance

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—George A. S. Brown of Calgary, a student at the Royal Military College here, didn't realize the romantic implications that would develop when he answered a note he found in a bottle in the nearby Cataraqui River.

The bottle, tossed into the Pacific Ocean by Virginia Blake of Vancouver four years ago, asked the finder to please reply as to the place and time the bottle was picked up.

Although university officials here and in Vancouver are stymied as to how the bottle could possibly drift from the Pacific to a river flowing into Lake Ontario, 18-year-old Virginia feels fate has intervened in her life.

Four days before cadet Brown's letter of the discovered bottle reached her, Miss Blake caught the bride's bouquet at a friend's wedding.

"I'm not superstitious," she admitted, "but doesn't it look like fate? I think it's significant." She's replied to cadet Brown's letter . . . and included her picture.

Cadet Brown, meanwhile, is finding the episode "a trifle embarrassing." He said Tuesday he merely replied to the message and would like to leave it that way.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 NT!	Dble.	Pass	Pass
6 NT!	Dble.	Pass	Pass
7♠	Dble.

Opening lead—king of hearts.

This hand is said to have been played in a high-stake game in Hollywood many years ago. I don't know whether the participants were script writers, producers, actors, directors, or merely janitors, but the scenario was certainly first-rate, whether you believe the story or not.

South was obviously an imaginative member of the movie colony, if we are to judge from his opening bid of three notrump. Moreover, he also displayed a fine sense of humor, when, having been doubled at three notrump, he leaped to six notrump.

This got doubled also, to no one's surprise, and South came out of his shell long enough to say seven clubs, likewise doubled.

South had no idea how badly he'd be beaten at seven clubs—he was out to have a good time and he was having it—but when West led the king of hearts and dummy came down, his heart was really gladdened. In fact, he reeled off thirteen tricks before you could even say Sam Goldwyn.

He ruffed the heart in his hand and then crossruffed the next eight tricks, trumping four diamonds in dummy and three hearts and a spade in his own hand. After drawing East's lone trump, he could then claim the balance, since his last diamond had by now become established as a trick.

Of course, the hand created quite a stir. South had scored a tour de force as well as a grand slam, and North naturally congratulated him on his fine bidding.

East-West were understandably less enthusiastic about the result. South had made a grand slam against them even though they had 30 high-card points to offer in opposition to North-South's 10. Moreover, they realized they could have made seven hearts if West had been declarer at that contract.

What the moral of the hand is, I don't know. Maybe there isn't any, and all that can be said about South's bidding and the extraordinary result is that he was a little bit lucky.
