

Happenings of The Week

King Farouk I will marry Nariman Sadek, 16-year-old Egyptian beauty, in Egypt next spring...

Karim Thabet Pasha, press counselor of the Royal Palace in Cairo, told reporters there is no question of a marriage ceremony in France...

There had been much speculation that the 30-year-old monarch, who is on a 10-day vacation here, and Miss Sadek might wed at this resort city.

The King met Miss Sadek in Cairo last November. Reliable sources outside Egypt's strict censorship reported that the girl's engagement to Mohammed Zaki Hashem, 27, a former United Nations economist, had been broken at the order of the King.

Since the meeting of the King and Miss Sadek, many rumors have swirled about them, only to be met with stony silence in official court circles. The Egyptian beauty was last seen at St. Moritz, Switzerland, recently.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

Presently now the light shall fade from the eastern sky in token that the sixtieth Anniversary of the Provincial Exhibition - The Old Home Week is over. It was, we remember, a happy choice for the event, indeed, excellent, blessed as the days have been for the most part by favorable weather, which gathered throngs in attendance. How memorable this week will be for many! To the visitors to our shores and to Islanders near and far. And from what distances they come to foregather, east meeting west, south hailing north! "I reckon" on one who sat beside us in "the stands" on a recent evening at the Races said, due to mid-night "it's about time we were getting on the road." "Yes" his companion agreed "it's a long road we've got to go!" "And which part of the Island do you come from?" our womanly curiosity queried. "From away up west - from Wellington... and Charlottetown, returned by plane to Brooklyn, N.Y. on Monday of this week."

As we had been led to expect by the signs of the times - the farm-work being made ship-shape for an absence, the family at Alderlea was represented each day at the Fair. Rob's too, his excuse being, if one were needed, the entry of the head of his herd of swine - and ours, a rather handsome porcine, in competition with a class of his contemporaries. On a day when we attended the event with James, his nephew, the granddaughter in a brief Alice-blue gown and Jamie led us to the animals' temporary quarters, we fancied he glanced up to see if James had a smile of approval for the blue ribbon he had won. But "that boy's much too busy on the farm, Ellen to bother taking entries to a Fair!" he commented in the pig's ear.

And so this week gave granddaughter her first taste of the Fair, one much enjoyed in that she rode on "a real live pony". It also brought his first Anniversary of birth to her brother, a pink and white cake and one small brave candle marking the event. He did not celebrate it by taking a first step as his mother had hoped, but he stands more confidently now on the feet that support short plump legs. Soon, he will follow his sister about her haunts - if they chose a work which might be conveniently rested at any hour or urge, or for any desired period, in the light of the week at hand, the calls of the farmers' occupation did not fall on deaf ears. Spells we lost.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Silliphant, N.S. left yesterday on return home after visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mercer, Summerside.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis French of Weymouth, Massachusetts are visiting in Summerside this week, guests of Mrs. W.P. Callaghan, Belmont Street.

The Stars Say

By Genevieve Kemble

For Sunday, August 27 WHILE the trend is toward exceptional adventures, with intrigue, mystery and emotionalism accented, situations may arise to test and tempt. With feelings, emotions and impractical flashes of an experimental or so-called "inspired" nature, runaway feelings or bursts of enthusiasm or temper could cause failure, strife, physical dangers are also among probabilities for indiscretions.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is, may encounter adventures and experiences that will be of a nature that is not to be feared, but rather to be enjoyed.

So a good week it has been, granting them and other farmers remote from their cares, allowing them to gather food for thought about stable and show-ring - and entertainment to last for days to come. And all the while August added colors to Summer's weaving and brought old and new sounds to our ears - of insect and bird and bee in a drowsy contented hum. "A thousand sounds, and each a joyful sound; The dragonflies are humming as they please, The hummingbirds are humming all around. The clethra all alive with buzzing bees, Each playful leaf its separate whisper found, As laughing winds went rustling through the grove; And I saw thousands of such sights as these And heard a thousand sounds of joy and love. And yet so dull I was, I did not know That He was there who all this loveliness displayed. Shared all my joy, was glad that I was glad; And all because I did not hear the word In English accents say? 'It is the Lord.' Until Monday - - -Diary - - - Good-night" ences of a conflicting nature. The feelings and emotions may be keyed to high purpose and ideals while the energies, initiative and temperament may be prone to run wild. With discretion and discipline of feelings and urges, dissensions and clashes may be avoided. Physical indulgences, excesses or aggressive actions could beget danger. A child born on this day, may have a contradictory nature with emotional, intuitive and inspirational moods, yet also has inclinations to the wayward, violent, and temperamental. Early discipline is recommended.

For Monday, August 28

MONDAY'S astrological forecast shows a rather conflicting or uncertain state of affairs. The emphasis is on the social, domestic, cultural and perhaps romantic, yet there are possibilities that all the progress, and expectations along sentimental or ambitious lines may not measure up to highest hopes and wishes.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is, may expect a fairly progressive and pleasant year, with personal as well as business contacts in line for activity, rich fulfillments and promise. Overdoing - in outlay, extravagance, or other indulgences might take the keen edge off cherished hopes and wishes. Keep within bounds discretion and security for greatest happiness and enhancement. A child born on this day is equipped with assets of a cultural, personable and aspirational tendency, with much to create a favorable and happy life. The tendency to extravagance and indulgence would work against high success.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS -

Too Little Laughter Cheerfulness A Neglected Virtue Among Women

I once heard a small child ask his mother why she never laughed as Mrs. A. did, as a jolly peal of mirth came from a neighboring window. Before she could answer, her husband exclaimed: "I would give a thousand dollars to hear your mother laugh like that just once." To which the woman replied by sighing and saying self-righteously that she was not of the vulgar and noisy type.

The little episode made me wonder why it is that among women cheerfulness is a discredited virtue and one they feel that they are under no obligations to practice in the home. Yet it is the one thing that their families crave of them above all others, the one thing that would do more than anything else to make their successes as wives and mothers.

When a conscientious woman tries to do her sacred duty by her family, she keeps her house clean and orderly, she serves scientifically balanced meals that contain the proper vitamins, she looks after her husband's and children's physical wants, but she only too often overlooks their need to be pepped up and she fails to realize that they would rather she made jokes than good pies.

EASY-GOING TYPE For proof of this we have only to observe the women among our personal acquaintances. All of us know some one woman who is a slack housekeeper, whose windows are never as clean as they might be, whose meals are never on time, whose children generally need a patch or a darn or to be washed behind the ears, who wastes her husband's money, but who is jolly and easy-going and whose house always rings with laughter, and invariably she is adored by her husband and children and her home is the gathering place for all the youngsters in the neighborhood. A happy home does not depend upon the material comfort in it. It depends entirely upon the attitude of the woman at the head of it. A gay and light-hearted woman can make a place of enchantment out of a hovel. A dismal, weepy woman can make a palace an abode of woe that gives every one who crosses its threshold the jitters. A cheerful, hopeful woman inspires her children to do their best and keeps them on their tiptoes. A wet-blanket mother takes all the enthusiasm out of her children and melts down their courage so they are whipped before they ever start to fight. "A cheerful mother is the greatest blessing any boy can have."
