GAME BETTER THAN GOLF.
The Man From Jersey Lowers His Record For Train Catching.
 His countenance suffused with satisfaction and his walk expressing triumph, the man from Jersey made his matutinal descent upon the metropolis. Without waiting for questions he began the plea of his joy.
 "Knocked seven-eighths of a second off my record this morning," he said. "I simply can't be beat. Nineteen and a quarter minutes from the arms of Morpheus, through ablutions, vestiture, nutrition, conjugal admonition and a half mile of geography to the confines of a car, and there you are. Giving all proper handicaps, by this performance I win the cup, and I'm going down to the engine house tonight to get it."
 "Mebbe you thought we didn't have any sporting blood out in my country? You never heard of a links from me, and you never saw me going around like a gosh binged umbrella mender with my arms full of shiny sticks. No, siree! But we have a diversion that beats golf all hollow in making time for the trains—one that lasts all the year round too. Records? What are the records of putting little pills into little holes to the records pinned up in our little depot, records of honest toil that appeal to the instincts of all industrious men? I tell you that the dediticated individual who thinks he abides in joy when he has quartered over a county in one stroke less than he ever did before is an object of pity to the man who is trying to cut off a fraction of a second from the passing from sound sleep to the busy railroad.
 "He is engaged in a useful occupation. He is trying to demonstrate the capacities of the wonderful human engine and at the same time adding to the well being of the race by lengthening the hours of sleep. Any scientist will tell you that the great fault with man is that he doesn't sleep enough. You take my advice and quit golf and come live in the country and keep tab on your transits like me, and if that ain't enough you can go down to the engine house on Sunday afternoon, when there ain't any trains, and pitch quoits."

SMOCK MARRIAGES.
Instances in Maine of a Custom That Prevailed in England a Century Ago.
 A Bangor lawyer attending court in the ancient town of Wiscasset, Me., went rummaging recently in the colonial court records of the place and in the course of his reading ran across the official registration of a "smock marriage." Not knowing what sort of marriage that was he looked further and got considerable light upon a custom that prevailed in England a century or two ago and also to some extent in the American colonies.
 Smock marriages were weddings where the bride appeared dressed in a white sheet or chemise. The reason of such a garb was the belief that if a man married a woman who was in debt he could be held liable for her indebtedness if he received her with any of her property, and also that if a woman married a man who was in debt his creditors could not take her property to satisfy their claims if he received nothing from her. In England, says an antiquarian, there was at least one case where the bride was clothed puris naturalibus while the ceremony was being performed in the great church at Birmingham. The minister at first refused to perform the ceremony, but finding nothing in the rubric that would excuse him he married the pair.
 To carry out the law fully as the people understood it the ceremony should always have been performed as it was in the Birmingham church. But modesty forbidding, various expedients were used to accomplish the desired purpose and yet avoid the undesirable features. Sometimes the bride stood in a closet and put her hand through a hole in the door. Sometimes she stood behind a cloth screen and put her hand out at one side, again she wound about her a white sheet furnished for the purpose by the bridegroom, and sometimes she stood in her chemise or smock. Eventually, in Essex county at least, all immodesty was avoided by the bridegroom's furnishing to the bride all the clothes she wore, retaining title to the same in himself. This he did in the presence of witnesses, that he might prove the fact in case he was sued for any debts she might have contracted. A marriage of this kind occurred at Bradford in 1733, and the following is a true copy of the record of the same:

BRADFORD, Dec. ye 24, 1733.
 This may certify whomsoever it may concern that James Bailey of Bradford who was married to the widow Mary Bacon Nov 22 last past by me ye subscriber then declared that he took the said person without anything of estate and that Lydia the wife of Roger Burbank & Mary the wife of Thomas Kenney & Margaret the wife of Caleb Burbank all of Bradford were witnesses that the said she then had on were of his providing & allowing upon her
 WILLIAM BALCH, Minister of ye Gospel.
 It is noted by the same writer that in all cases of smock marriages that have come to his knowledge the brides have been widows.
 It is thought that during the reign of George III there were many smock marriages in Maine, then a part of the province of Massachusetts Bay, chiefly in Lincoln and York counties or in the territory which is now so known. There is nothing to show that the practice outlived the Revolution. In Maine up to 1852 a husband was liable for debts of his wife contracted before marriage, and no such subterfuge as the smock marriage could relieve him.—New York Sun.
