Heavy Voting In Greek Election

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 9 - (AP) - Unprecedented numbers voted before noon today in a heated parliamentary election which will decide the political color of the next Greek government.

The big question is whether strong-arm field Marshal Alexander Papagos will lead his newly-formed and staunchly-royalist Greek rally party to victory over the old groups which have shuffled power among them in 25 governments since the liberation seven years ago.

A survey of a score of precincts in Athens showed more than 50 per cent of the electors had voted before noon. Nearly 2,000,000 Greeks are eligible to vote.

A definite trend in today's election is not expected to become evident before tomorrow. The polls closed at sundown.

The first unofficially reported returns, from 13 Athens precincts, gave Papagos' party 2,097 votes to an even 2,000 combined total for the candidates of six other parties.

Farm Federation Meetings In Progress

Over one hundred members turned up for meetings called by the Federation of Agriculture at Eldon on Thursday night and on Friday morning.

The Eldon gathering at which William Beers, Belle River, acted as chairman, heard D. A. MacDonald, Chairman and Manager of the Potato Marketing Board outline the results of the first year's operations and the plans of the Board for the coming season.

J. L. Dewar, Provincial Secretary of the Federation, discussed the developments of the farm organization and explained the importance and necessity of a strong organization supported by the farmers.

At the Fort Augustus meeting, where Mark Brazier was Chairman, the meeting was addressed by the above mentioned speakers and also Earl Ings, President of the Queen's County Federation, and Father T. P. Butler.

The importance of marketing legislation as a means of giving Agricultural bargaining power in the sale of farm products was clearly explained by A. MacDonald with Messrs. Ings and Dewar emphasizing the importance of the Federation and the responsibility of the farmer, both in his own interest and the general welfare to actively support the Federation.

Similar meetings are planned for Beedee on the 11th and Brookfield on the 13th of September.

Living Costs Not Due To Farmer Says Federation Leader

ORILLIA, Ont., Sept. 9 - (CP) - The farmer is not to blame for high food prices, H. H. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, said here on Friday.

If the farming industry was to adopt hours of work and rates of pay for farm labor comparable to those of industrial labor, the public would have to pay much higher prices for their food, Mr. Hannam said in a speech prepared for the summer conference here of the Young Liberals' Association of Ontario.

"The consuming public," he added, "is very critical of the high cost of living. That unfavorable consumer opinion is not justified if directed at prices and returns received by the farmer."

"If carried to the extreme, it could result in market situations and national policies discriminating very unfairly against the farm family."

The head of the 400,000-member Federation added that farmers had no real control over prices because of their food, Mr. Hannam said.

They cannot, said Mr. Hannam, by their own efforts raise prices or maintain prices in a favorable position.

Major Debate On Cost Of Living Shaping Up

OTTAWA, Sept. 9 - (CP) - A major debate on the cost of living is shaping up for the fall session of Parliament opening Oct. 9.

The Progressive Conservative, C. C. F., and Social Credit Parties are all preparing to attack the government's attitude toward the cost of living and inflation.

Prime Minister St. Laurent said last Tuesday the Government does not plan to impose price controls now.

Possibly the first opportunity members will have to discuss the government's position will be during the traditional debate on the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

Once the mover and shifter of the address have been heard, the floor will go to George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader.

He will be followed by Prime Minister St. Laurent, M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, and Solon Low, Social Credit leader.

The speakers will be able to deal with practically any topic. Mr. Drew has said he considers the cost of living one of the major problems facing the Canadian people. He has advocated limited controls to hold prices in line until production can catch up with demand for goods.

Church and Welfare

desires to push logic to its extremes, no difficulty has arisen over this inherent particularity. But that is not to say that never will, and a dozen circumstances can be imagined in which the Welfare State took some action contrary to Catholic principle which it innocently imagined that all to find when it was too late to withdraw it.

The Church of England, and other parts of it, could not accept that day, if it comes, will be bad for Church and State alike.

The third point is more subtle and still more dangerous. Whether one looks at it from a Catholic or Protestant point of view, Christianity remains an ineradicably sacrificial religion. Very near the heart of it lies the sacrifice of Christ and all that follows from it, and its whole ethical system stands on the basis of the many-times repeated teaching of Christ that he who saves his life loses it, or in other words, that at the heart of all creativeness lies self-sacrifice. It is impossible to teach Christianity without at the same time teaching the idea of sacrifice.

But in proportion as a Welfare State succeeds in its aims, the idea of sacrifice as being universally necessary to the good life becomes less and less real, since the whole purpose of the Welfare State is to make it more and more unnecessary.

Under the old system you did not need to be a Christian to know that you must sacrifice in many ways to provide for your old age, to give the children a better educational chance, and the like.

Teaching of Christ which starts with the universality of sacrifice, but raises it to higher levels than these, was therefore not initially incomprehensible. But now even to talk of sacrifice as necessary to the achievement of a social purpose like health or education is becoming a kind of treason against the Welfare State; and in proportion as it still remains necessary under the Welfare State to achieve these ends, it is the recording of a judgment that it has either not yet fully succeeded or else that it has failed.

The whole sacrificial idea is, in fact, an implied criticism of the Welfare State. When a generation has grown up to which the Welfare State is, so to speak, second nature, a part of the obvious and accepted order of things, how are we going to be able to preach about sacrifice? Already there are signs that many practising and well-taught Christians are more at sea over this matter of sacrifice than over any other part of Christian theology.

It is at these points that the strain in the relationships of State and Church and Welfare State will appear.

It is in the interests of both that the Welfare State should succeed, and it cannot do this without what the Church can bring to its help.

U.S. To Keep Troops In Japan Under Pact

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9 - (CP) - The United States and Japan Saturday signed a security treaty giving the U.S. the right to maintain its armed forces "in and about" Japan indefinitely.

The 14-minute signing ceremony, following by a few hours the 49-nation conclusion of a Japanese peace treaty, took place in San Francisco's famed Presidio by the Golden Gate.

Secretary Dean Acheson, principal signer for the U.S., hailed the treaty as a means "to bulwark freedom with military strength."

Japanese Premier Shigeru Yoshida, speaking in English, said "this pact insures the security of the unarmed and defenceless Japan."

The pact is a supplement to the peace treaty. Its practical effect is to make possible the retention of American forces in Japan after the peace treaty ends the present military occupation.
