ARIZONA RATTLER.

Known as a Side-Winder, and Has a Head at Either End.

Captain W. C. Pidge, the superintendent of the Inyo marble quarries, near the lake, has two jars of alcohol in which are to be seen objects of unusual interest, says The Register of Bishop, Cal. The most conspicuous at first sight is a tremendous tarantula. This great hairy and hideous-looking spider has its legs much doubled up for lack of room in its present quarters, but manifestly when he had a chance to spread himself it is safe to say he could cover a circle with his extended legs of not less than five inches diameter. In the same alcoholic swim with his big tarantula is a scorpion of like gigantic proportions, and and a mighty ugly and dangerous looking object he is—more forbidding in looks, perhaps, than the tarantula, yet the bite of the latter is far more dangerous than the sting of the scorpion.

Mixed up with these two terrible-looking insects is another no less terrible, though hardly so formidable in looks.

This is one of the little rattlesnakes known as the "side-winder," because of his peculiar method of progression, which is sidewise, one end at the time rather than straight ahead, like other reptiles. The side-winder is found in great numbers in the hot deserts, and during the warmer summer nights keeps moving all night, unless he happens to fetch up in a comfortable place, like the folds of a blanket. It there happens to be a prospector or other person in the blanket all the better for the side-winder. He will wrap himself up alongside and stay there till morning if permitted to do so. It is said that his bite is certain death; nevertheless, we never hear of any deaths from that cause. The captain's specimen was one of seven he found under the same rock near the quarry.

With these is another snake a foot or so in length, which for certain power and peculiarities can challenge the reptile world. This little snake has a perfect head on either end of his body—not only that, but during his lifetime he could and did go in either direction without turning, just as readily one way as the other. As a reptile he is as complete a double ender as one of these double-ender ferryboats, or even more, since his reversing gear works quick as a flash, and no matter which way he goes he has a complete lookout astern as well as ahead. This specimen was found under a rock which had been turned over. He would dart ahead a foot or two at a time, then as suddenly stop. Then when a cane or stick was put in front of his eyes he would reverse and dart right back, the other end or head first, precisely as if that were the only head he possessed, and as if that were the front end he had depended on all his life. Then, when an obstacle was placed in front of that end, back he would go, the other end first, as if that were the only head he possessed. This is considerable of a snake story, and some of the snake editors may not believe it, nevertheless it is given as the actual truth.

The captain not long since made another capture, that of a transparent—or translucent—lizard, which in that respect was quite as much of a curiosity as this double-ended snake. This lizard was almost six inches in length, of a white or pale green color, and so transparent in his tissues you could see through him plainly enough to make out the outlines of objects beneath him and see the general plan of his interior arrangements. This lizard got out of the sack in which he had been caught or held while the captain was looking up a suitable jar in which to pickle him like the others, and so made good his escape, very greatly to the regret of all who had seen this wonder.

A Woman's Conclusion.

I said if I might go back again
To the very hour and place of my birth,
Might have my life whatever I choose,
And live it in any part or the earth.

Put perfect sunshine into my sky;
Banish the shadows and sorrows of doubt;
Have all my happiness multiplied,
And all my sufferings stricken out.

If I could have known in the years now gone
The best that woman comes to know;
Could have had whatever will make her blest,
Or whatever she thinks will make her so,

Yes, I said, if miracle such as this
Could be wrought for me at my bidding, still
I would choose to have my past as it is,
And let my future come as it will.

I would not make the path I have trod
More pleasant, or even more straight or wide,
Nor change my course the breadth of a hair,
This way or that way, to either side.

My past is mine and I take it all;
It's weakness—it's folly if you please:
Nay, even my sins, if you come to that,
May have been helps, not hindrances.

If I saved my body from the flames
Because that once I burned my hand,
Or kept myself from a greater sin,
By doing a less—you will understand.

It was better I suffered a little pain,
Better I sinned for a little time
If the smarting warned me back from death,
And the sting of sin withheld from crime.

Who knows its strength, by trial will know
What strength must be set against a sin;
And how temptation is overcome
He learns who has felt its power within.

So let my past stand just as it stands,
And let me now, as I may, grow old,
I am what I am, and my life for me
Is the best—or it had not been, I hold.

—Phoebe Cary.

His Carriage Driven by Naphtha.

C. L. Simonds, of Lynn, has made a steam carriage for his own use that will make ten miles an hour. The carriage weighs only 400 pounds, and can carry two persons at a time. It has the appearance of an ordinary carriage in front, except there are no provisions made for a horse. The wheels are of cycle make and four in number. The hind wheels are 43 inches and the front wheels are 36 inches, with rubber tires. The boiler and engine are just in the rear of the seat, and give the carriage the appearance of a fire-engine. The steam generates in what is called a porcupine boiler, which weighs 100 pounds. The steam is made by naphtha flames from three jets. The naphtha is kept in a cylinder, enough to last for seven hours, and there is a water tank that will hold ten gallons. The steering part consists of a crank wheel on the footboard, so that the engineer can steer and attend to the engine at the same time.—Springfield Daily Republican.

Unabridgeable.

"I am tired to death," remarked a Streater avenue lawyer as he wearily ascended the front steps of his mansion. "You look tired," said his spouse, in a sympathetic tone. "What's been the matter?"

"I've been making my speech for the defence for three days now, and, tired or not, I've got to go right along with it tomorrow and perhaps the next day."

"Can't you cut it short?"

"Not until the jury have had time to forget the evidence against my client."—

"An ounce of prevention, &c. Do not neglect that cough! One bottle of Puttner's Emulsion (the cough medicine par excellence) taken now, may save you weeks of illness, and a long doctor's bill. Large bottle, only 50 cents.

They Do Not Despair.

An utter loss of hope is no not characteristic of consumptives, though no other form of disease is so fatal, unless its progress is arrested by use of Scott's Emulsion, which is Cod Liver Oil made as palatable as cream.

NEGROES STARVING.

Men, Women and Children Driven into the Streets by a Big Storm.

An Augusta, Ga., despatch of the 31st, ult., reads as follows: "Further and more horrible news of the disastrous work of the hurricane at Port Royal were received tonight. The number of dead has been increased from 100 to 600. The figures are given, after careful calculations and reasonable estimate by Receiver J. H. Averill, of the Port Royal & Augusta railroad, who is now in Port Royal.

News has been heard from Helena island, just off from Beaufort, that the dead there alone number 120, which is more than the total number of lost in that vicinity first given.

The people are now suffering from a food famine, and 7,000 negroes who have been driven to Port Royal by the storm from surrounding islands and rice and cotton plantations, are starving. They are so destitute and so badly in need of something to eat that they have resorted to fighting among themselves for food. Several negroes were killed in a squabble for provisions.

Gov. Tillman, of South Carolina, who passed through Augusta to-day from Chicago, on his way to the capital at Columbia, has been appealed to for aid to alleviate the suffering of the hungry negroes; who are getting more and more daring in their struggle for food to keep their wives and children from dying from starvation. Many of them have not had a morsel to eat since Sunday, and they cannot stand the privation much longer, and declare they will resort to severe means to get provisions unless aid is quickly given and their wants supplied.

The dead are being so quickly recovered that there are not enough coffins to be had for proper burial, and many bodids are being hurriedly interred in the potters' field without caskets.

The scene is reported by those who have just returned from Port Royal, as being gloomy and heartrending. Men, women and children pitifully stand in the streets pleading for something to eat, and listress is pictured in their faces. The white people in Port Royal are doing all in their power to relieve the suffering, but their efforts alone cannot begin to ameliorate affairs, and those who are not given relief become more rebellious, and it is a difficult task to keep the sufferers in subjection. As soon as one negro gets some little supplies he is attacked for his share of provisions by his brothers in black, and considerable food has been wasted by these fights.

The loss to Port Royal and its surroundings foots up $2,000,000, and that estimate is considered low rather than exaggerated. Out of 700 killed not more than 25 were whites and only five were women. Most of the negroes drowned were adults, though at least 200 helpless children are counted among the dead.

The body of a white lady was recovered this morning and clasped to her breast was her baby, who went down to its death with her. A number of bodies are still missing, and many are known to have been drowned and are not yet recovered and are supposed to have been carried out to sea by the strong current.

The Test of Time.

William Holder, sailmaker, St. John, writes: "This is to certify that for nearly a year I suffered with dyspepsia, indigestion and severe bilious headaches. I lost flesh and became very weak. I was recommended to use Hawker's Tonic and Pills, and am pleased to say that they completely cured me. I gained flesh very fast, and became hearty and stronger than I had ever been, and have never suffered since, now over one year." .....

M. de Villiers' statement, as a prominent citizen of the Transvaal, that he favors and looks forward to a realization of Cecil Rhodes' united South Africa idea, is an important one. There is indeed, little doubt that there will eventually be a Federation there, as well as in Australia, and somewhat after the Canadian model. Mr Rhodes is the Sir John Macdonald of British Africa.

W. H. ROGERS.

AMHERST, N. S., May 27, 1893.

THE GRODER DYSPEPSIA CURE CO.

GENTLEMEN:—I am 71 years of age. Have been afflicted with sick headache most all my life, which developed into Dyspepsia of a mild type about twenty years ago, and has continued to grow worse until during the past seven or eight years I have not been able to take a drink of cold water or milk, as they would produce severe pains and sometimes vomiting. I have been subject to severe pains in the chest, with dizziness, which have been more frequent during the past three or four years. My mouth was furred up in the mornings, accompanied with bad breath. My case was yearly growing worse.

During all this long period I have tried many popular medicines, as well as prescriptions from the regular medical practitioners, but without producing any improvment.

In the fall of '92 I concluded to try a bottle or two of your medicine and such were its effects that I continued it and now I can drink cold water or milk without any inconvenience. Those dizzy pains are all gone and my mouth is as sweet as a baby's. In short, your medicine has cured me and I am sure that all Dyspeptics can be cured by its use.

(Signed) W. H. ROGERS,
Late inspector of Fisheries for Nova Scotia.

LIFE A TORTURE.

Kendrick Outhouse, of Tiverton, N. S., says: For several years I suffered from severe attacks of biliousness, which occurred periodically, about every ten days. I had awful headaches and the smell of anything cooking turned me sick. I became weak and nervous, and had no ambition or strength to work. I passed many sleepless nights, and for days could not retain food on my stomach. I suffered intensely with piles and hives, and my life was a constant torture to me. I became so weak that my friends gave up all hopes of my recovery. My brother brought me a bottle of

HAWKER'S NERVE AND STOMACH TONIC, and a box of HAWKER'S LIVER PILLS.

I had not taken them long before I commenced to improve and in a short time I was completely cured. I grew strong and vigorous, my appetite returned, I slept well and in a few months had gained 30 pounds in weight. I have not suffered from piles or biliousness since, now 2 years, and am as strong and hearty as any man could wish to be. I firmly believe that
