GROUP OR TEAM WORK IN TREATMENT OF MENTAL CASES

One of the advances in medicine this past few years is what is called "group" treatment of a patient who appears to have various conditions present. Thus, the patient goes into hospital under the care of his own physician who, after an examination, prescribes certain general measures and calls into consultation various specialists connected with the hospital. At the end of three or four days or a week, during which time the patient is checked over by these specialists he may be sent home for further treatment by his own physician or to rest up to undergo operation.

Instead of having him enter hospital, the family physician may have him enter the consulting rooms of a group of specialists where he is checked and rechecked to find the cause of the symptoms.

Just as there are various conditions of the body which require the services of various specialists, so physicians are finding that all diseases of the mind and of behavior are not alike and so various specialists are needed to get best results—neurologists, psychiatrists, psychologists, psychoanalysts and others.

In The Journal of the American Medical Association, Drs. Esther Bogen Tietz and Martin Grotjann, Los Angeles, state that the "best treatment for mental cases should utilize the services of an integrated team of physicians, psychologists, teachers, vocational counsellors, and laboratory technicians, under the direction and control of a psychoanalytically trained psychiatrist with a broad experience in the handling of all types of psychiatric disorders."

By this teamwork method, the psychiatrist can treat many more cases which, in turn, means a reduction in cost of treatment. Treatment would include various methods of shock treatment careful analysis of moods, each psychiatrist working from the standpoint of his own specialty.

Psychiatrists need the help of talented people with special training who are willing to measure and appreciate the work and findings of each member of the psychiatric team.

Further arrangements must be made whereby the psychiatric specialists or specialists in the patient needs most can be made available after the examination is completed. The idea that a mental patient may need a group of mental specialists may be new to us, but a disturbance of the structure of the brain itself which is the special work of the neurologist, is really just a small part of the total symptoms of mental and emotional derangement.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Too Many Beaux Girl Should Be Honest With Both Her Suitors

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: How can I tell a boy I don't love him without hurting his feelings? Roy, 20, and I, 18, are in love and have been going together for some time. We decided not to go steady for a while and during this time I met another boy, Ernie, who fell in love with me at sight. I don't love him, but I do like him very much and don't want to hurt him. He knows about the boy I love, but not that we plan eventually to marry. How can I explain to him that I don't love him, and don't want him to love me, but that he could continue to like me? Should I tell him right away or wait until Roy and I go steady again? SUE

ANSWER: "Oh, what a tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive!" You have stirred up a fine hornet's nest, Sue, and don't even seem to realize it! What is Roy doing all this time? Twiddling his thumbs and watching other boys fall in love with you?"

BE FAIR To do the fair thing to Ernie, who has my sympathy, you'd better tell him at once that he is only second fiddle. Apparently you expect him to take the announcement of his new status very gracefully and be perfectly resigned to changing his feelings from love to fraternity. I think you are a little heartbreaker, Sue, but don't let your fickleness go too far or you'll soon be without boy friends altogether.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am 20 years old and have been married almost three years. I have a good husband but do not love him. I had been hurt by another boy and thought I could make myself love my husband after marriage, but it didn't work. The boy I loved married another girl but I'm not happy with her. He claims he loves me. He drinks a lot and runs around but says he will stop for me. Should I trust him again? D.N.C.

ANSWER: You are a very confused young lady who needs sound counsel from a wise source. I doubt if the few words I can give you will unscramble the situation, but here they are. Stick to what you have, but definitely! A man who hurts one girl, marries another, drinks, philanders and tries to break up another man's home is certainly no source of happiness for you. You have a good husband and once you stop day-dreaming over the romance you think you might have had, you'll realize you aren't so bad off. In the meantime, have a talk with your pastor or some older person in whom you have great confidence.

DEAR MISS DIX: Recently I have kept company with a boy I like very much. I know he likes me, but he is getting very cool because I won't go steady with him. I am 15 and think I'm too young to go steady. Do you agree with me? ELEANOR

ANSWER: With all my heart I do agree. You're much too young to be going steady and your boy friend should be considerate enough to realize this. Let him know that if he wants to continue seeing you it will have to be on your terms.

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to readers, but will answer problems of general interest through her column.

How Can I!!! By Anne Ashley

- Q. How can I remove a ring or stain from a garment that has been caused by using a cleaning fluid? A. First allow it to dry; then hold it over the steam of a kettle until the mark vanishes. Q. How can I prevent sausages from shrinking or breaking when being fried? A. Boil the sausages for about eight minutes before frying. Rolling them in flour before frying will also prevent their breaking. Q. How can I cool an oven that has become too hot while baking? A. Merely set a pan of cold water on the lowest shelf of the oven.

Modern Etiquette By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it necessary for a hostess to rise when greeting a guest who has just arrived, and other guests are already present? A. Yes, always. A hostess is very discourteous who does not rise to greet each guest, and also when taking leave of each departing guest. Q. When one is a guest at a dinner served in a hotel dining room, or a restaurant, should one leave a tip for the waiter? A. No; this is the obligation of

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

Horses have been turned out to pasture, their harness put by for the week-end. The tools and machinery of the haying is idle as might rest now in a cool dimness over the "ha" lands. At Alderlea, most of these have been shorn of their beauty since only one smallish mowing remains to be done. We fancy, the fairy-folk whose chore it has been to spread the dew over the fragrant loveliness of the blossoming fields are mournful tonight as are we for the lush summer days that are past. The sunny days of June and July - of maturing grasses and opening field-flowers. Lovely the season is still, but ripeness now sees the bloom off the countryside. Already we find signs of Autumn's shadow. Were the blackbirds not congregating in a neat meadow today? And the swallows' small fry trying out their new wings? And the days shortening? Carolyn spoke of this this evening, "I'm choring" past with her two and are laughing, we watched the "shadowing" fields for a sight of today's last loads of hay entering the farm-lane. "The days are getting shorter" she remarked, "I've been noticing this lately." She laughed but there was regret in the tones, "I wonder where the long ones have gone!"

But the hour as sweet, calm and softly lit by the afterglow and day's and night was in sight. The cows already were aware of this and had settled to their rest on the night-pasture close by. A lamb leaped lonely in the field across the creek and hearing it, granddaughter sighed and yawned and guessed she "might as well go home and have my bath and go to bed." So barefooted she padded off to the house across the lane, with lingering and regretful "Good-byes." And now the loads came in sight, moved by tractors. Quietly we watched them move along the farm-lane... last loads of the week. "The kittens are missing you, Jamie" Gage offered, thoughts ahead to the homing. "Yes, they look real lonesome..." and are they cute now and playful? Jamie nodded, "I'm grave emotions torn between two desires - two homes. "There will be more haying here the first of the week!" Karolyn offered more to herself than the lads, but to Jamie her words gave promise of an early return. "And we'll be riding home on the tractor." Gage said, eyes pleading. Presently they were off, the black and white dog following, obviously pleased with the turn of events which tonight had given him all of that family to escort again.

There is no denying it, this has been a busy week for us at Alderlea. Those willing to assist at the haying, which included all but the small ones, assisted, and between times did with such dispatch as they could muster other chores that came to their hands. Meals disappeared, "eat with the sauce that is hunger yet with... I'm as hungry as a bear" was a frequent plaint. There was no begging "Now eat it up dear, it's good for you!" but sometimes "prised: "What -not again!" when slices of bread must be used to supply bread-meal wants. A... happy week it has been for us, as doing as best we could the work which lies nearest, we reached in truth another round on a... range fascinating ladder of living.

"Unto each mortal who comes to earth, A ladder" given by God at birth, And up this ladder every soul must go. Step by step from the valley below; Step by step to the centre of space. Until Monday -- Diary -- Good-night...

Cook's Corner BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

The pans for these muffins should be greased with special care, to overcome a slight tendency of the muffins to stick. Blueberries are nicely suspended through these muffins and they would be an admirable accompaniment for a fruit salad. If they are to be served for breakfast it is a good idea to mix the dry ingredients the night before. Yield-10 average size muffins. 14 cups once-sifted pastry flour or 1 1/3 cups once-sifted hard-wheat flour 2 teaspoons baking powder 3/4 teaspoon baking soda 1/4 teaspoon salt 4 tablespoons chilled shortening 1/2 cup whole eggs well-beaten 1/3 cup fine granulated sugar 1/2 cup fresh blueberries, washed and well drained 1 egg, well beaten 2/3 cup sour milk 1 teaspoon vanilla Measure and sift together three times, the flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt; add the shortening and cut it in finely. Mix in the wheat flakes, sugar and blueberries. Combine the well-beaten egg, sour milk and vanilla. Make a well in the dry ingredients and add the liquids all at once; combine lightly. Turn batter into well-greased muffin pans, filling them two-thirds full. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees, about 26 minutes. The host.

Nurse's Valor

(Dedicated to Evelyn Henry) Across the Strait from Torment-line She braved the wind and tide, Until she reached the Borden shore Upon the Island side. The cheering crowds applauded her From boat-rail and the shore, And sea-gulls dipped and screamed delight As overhead they'd soar. The tides were running high and fast And waves were beating strong, As onward Evelyn stroked her way To victory with a song. Of woman's triumph over odds That men did always shun In Waters rough and deep and cold, In wind and rain and sun. So here's to Evelyn Henry's feat That we so much adore In swimming from New Brunswick's coast To our Prince Edward's shore. May fate be ever kind to her And patients' health restore Through inspiration that she gives Within each ward and door. That prove the meek and mighty strength Of nurses' valued traits, That tend the sick and weak and old Or swim the surging Straits. -PETER A. REILLY, August 1, 1951.

Morning Smile To His Advantage

A grocer had difficulty with a doctor who was backward in paying his bill, so he put the matter in the hands of a collector. The man returned looking worried. "What's the matter?" asked the grocer. "What did the doctor say?" "Well," replied the collector, "I said I wasn't looking well, examined my tongue, and advised me to remain indoors for a few weeks."
