The Montreal Star has taken up one of the schemes outlined at the last meeting of the Methodist general conference. The Star has opened a subscription list for the redemption of St James's church in Montreal, which is liable to be lost to the denomination and to Protestantism by reason of a mortgage. The Star fund already reaches $56,000.

DIED

In this city, on the 29th inst, Elizabeth, daughter of the late Patrick Burke, in her 25th year.

[Funeral at 2,30 tomorrow from cor er of Pembley and Richmond St, to St. Dunstan's Cathedral.]

The Heaviest Thing In the World.

The heaviest thing in the world is the metal osmium, the bluish white metal with violet luster which Mr. Smithson Tennant discovered 90 years ago in the residue from dissolved platinum ores. This metal has a specific gravity of 22.-477; that of gold being 19.265; lead, 11.367; iron, 7.79, and lithium, the lightest, only 0.594.

The French chemist, Joly, determined that osmium is likewise the most infusible of metals. It could never be made to yield to the oxyhydrogen flame which makes platinum and irridium run like water, but Joly has been subjecting osmium to the exclusively high temperature of the electric arc which Moissan has of late employed successfully in the manufacture of diamonds.

Under this fierce heat the rare metal, ruthenium, which used to be deemed all but infusible, readily melts, but osmium remains refractory, there being apparently only the faintest traces of fusion. On this account osmium cannot be prepared in sufficient quantities to make it very useful in the arts, but its alloy with irridium, which defies the acids, is of some value, nothing better having been found wherewith to tip gold pens. Being nonmagnetic, its employment for the bearings of the mariner's compass has been advocated.—Popular Science Monthly.

A Shower of Hats and Shoes.

Charles F. W. Mieglatz contributes "A Boy's Recollections of the Great Chicago Fire" to St. Nicholas. Mr. Mieglatz says:

Once, for a few minutes. I thought it was all over with me. The flames sprang from the middle of the block, on the east side of Wells street between Washington and Randolph, to the middle of the block between Randolph and Lake streets. Here a remarkable thing happened. At the northwest corner of Wells and Lake streets I stopped for a moment to catch my breath and to look back. At the southeast corner there was a boot and shoe shop, which had a glass front on the rear alley, similar to that on the street front, but not so elaborate. The fire struck this alley front with a force that swept the boots and shoes through the shop and into the street in a flash. A tongue of flame shot out, rolled across the street and kindled a tar kettle and a barrel, such as pavers use, bringing with it a shower of boots and shoes. Almost at the same instant the fire threw itself against a hat factory, a few doors east of the boot and shoe shop. It hit the rear of the building with the same impelling force, and the hats flew up into the air like spray.
