Plan Big Salt Production Increase In Pugwash Area

PUGWASH, N.S. (CP) — The Malagash Salt Company's new mine here is scheduled to start tapping a 200,000,000-ton salt deposit this fall.

The company hopes to hoist double the production of its other 1,000 tons of salt a day or almost shaft at Malagash.

A nearby Amherst, the Dominion Salt Company hopes to produce "at least as much" as its 76,804 tons in 1955. The Amherst company, which employs about 90 men, spent heavily in 1953 to increase production and its expenditures hae been paying off.

The Malagash company is investing $1,000,000 for new buildings, machines and marketing arrangements.

Its Malagash, N.S., shaft, whose reserves are depleting, will be closed when the Pugwash mine begins operations. A pioneer rock salt producer, its history dates back to 1918.

General Manager John L. Cavanagh says the new mine will employ the 130 old employees, however.

SEES 100-YEAR SUPPLY

Mr. Caanagh beams when he speaks of the new development.

"Last year, we turned out 153,000 tons of rock salt in our Malagash development," he says.

"We should produce 250,000 tons a year at Pugwash at least a 100-year supply under normal conditions."

The salt will be mined from underground beds in the same way coal is mined from deep seams. Rock salt is mainly for chemical and comercial ue.

At Amherst, evaporated salt is produced. Water is pumped into the beds, where the salt dissolves and is pumped back to the surface in the form of brine.

This type of salt is used on the table, in the fishing industry and by farmers for cattle.

Last year the Malagash and Dominion companies set a Nova Scotia production record of more than 250,000 tons.

This year, officials expect the new Pugwash mine alone to match that figure.
