THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Germany Will Open Kiao Chou.

Congratulations of The Times.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The Times this morning says editorially: "We are glad to learn from various trustworthy and mutually independent sources that the rumors of Germany's intention to open Kiao Chou to the world's commerce are well-founded. If this decision is maintained Kiao Chou will possibly become a great busy and flourishing entrepot of the world's trade. The wisdom of this decision cannot be doubted. It will tend to improve the unnecessarily strained relations between Germany and England. It is to be hoped that other nations will follow Germany's example and that the far eastern question may therefore be greatly simplified."

FIXED AGAIN.

Date of Taking Over Drummond County Railway.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—The opening of the extension of the I. C. R. to Montreal over the leased Drummond County and Grand Trunk lines is now fixed by the department of railways for the 1st February.

Russia Ships Watching British Ships.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A despatch from Nagasaki, Japan, says: The British and Russian squadrons are strictly watching each others movements. When the British battleships, the Centurian (flagships) left Nagasaki on Sunday she was shadowed by the Russian gun boat Shoochot.

Obituary.

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—W. J. Withall, a prominent business man and director of the Sun Life Assurance Co., is dead.

Mrs. Sternaman's New Trial.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—The new trial of Mrs. Sternaman is fixed to take place in May next.

A man's health is the rope by which he climbs to success. If he can keep his health he will go on to success. Yet his health is the very thing he neglects more than anything else. It is easier to keep health than it is to regain it. When a man feels himself running down, when he realizes a loss of vitality and energy, he must call a halt. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has helped thousands of men in just this condition. It makes health, it makes pure, rich blood, it forces out impurities and kills germs. It doesn't make any difference what name you call your trouble by—dyspepsia—kidney disease—rheumatism—consumption—skin disease, the "Golden Medical Discovery" will cure it absolutely. None of these diseases can retain hold on the body when it is full of rich, pure blood.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and receive free a copy of Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Canadian Militia Guide by Lieut-Col W. D. Otter, for sale at Hazard & Moores. Price 1.00.

This is a Bookstore

Several other lines of business live under this same roof, each of them the largest of its kind in this Province. But, first and foremost, this is a BOOKSTORE, and especially it is a SCHOOL BOOK DEPOT. All the authorized School and College Books are kept in stock, and a big stock of all School Requisites, and the prices are always as low as the lowest. Need we say more?

PERSONAL.

We are pleased to learn that Dr R. Bruce Shaw, of Royal Victoria Hospital, is rapidly recovering from his severe illness.

The Earl of Devon, at 86 years of age, still preaches and attends to all his duties as prebendary canon of Exeter cathedral.

Mr. Edmund T. Higg, the energetic secretary of the Board of Trade, has returned from a very pleasant trip to Bermuda.

Mrs. William M. Flynn, of Cardigan, who has been visiting friends in Charlottetown during the past week, left for home this afternoon.

A PEARL PIRATE.

A French Buccaneer Who Made a Bold Capture on the Pearl Banks.

Mrs. Frank R. Stockton has contributed to St. Nicholas, under the title of "The Buccaneers of Our Coast," a series of narrative sketches of the buccaneers of the Spanish main. He tells the following adventure:

One of the adventurers who set out about this time on a cruise after gold laden vessels was a Frenchman who was known to his countrymen as Pierre Francois and to the English as Peter Francis. He was a good sailor and ready for any sort of a sea fight, but for a long time he cruised about without seeing anything which it was worth while to attempt to capture. At last, when his provisions began to give out and his men to become somewhat discontented, Pierre made up his mind that rather than return to Tortuga empty handed he would make a bold and novel stroke for fortune.

At the mouth of one of the large rivers of the mainland the Spaniards had established a pearl fishery, for there was no kind of wealth or treasure on the land, underground or at the bottom of the sea that the Spaniards did not get if it were possible.

Every year at the proper season a dozen or more vessels came to this pearl bank, attended by a man-of-war to protect them from molestation. Pierre knew all about this, and as he could not find any Spanish merchantmen to rob he thought he would go down and see what he could do with the pearl fishers. This was something the buccaneers had not yet attempted, but no one knows what he can do until he tries, and it was very necessary that this buccaneer captain should try something immediately.

When he reached the coast near the mouth of the river, he took the masts out of his little vessel and rowed quietly toward the pearl fishing fleet, as if he had intended to join them on some entirely peaceable errand, and, in fact, there was no reason whatever why the Spaniards should suppose that a boat full of buccaneers should be rowing along that part of the coast.

The pearl fishing vessels were all at anchor, and the people on board were quietly attending to their business. Out at sea, some distance from the mouth of the river, the man-of-war was lying becalmed. The native divers who went down to the bottom of the sea to bring up the shellfish which contained the pearls plunged into the water and came up wet and shining in the sun, with no fear whatever of any sharks which might be swimming about in search of a dinner, and the people on the vessels opened the oysters and carefully searched for pearls, feeling as safe from harm as if they were picking olives in their native groves.

But something worse than a shark was quietly making its way over those tranquil waters, and no handitti who ever descended from Spanish mountains upon the quiet peasants of a village equalled in ferocity the savage fellows who were crouching in the little boat belonging to Pierre of Tortuga.

This innocent looking craft, which the pearl fishers probably thought was loaded with fruit or vegetables that somebody from the mainland desired to sell, was permitted, without being challenged or interfered with, to row up alongside the largest vessel of the fleet, on which there were some armed men and a few cannon.

As soon as Pierre's boat touched the Spanish vessel the buccaneers sprang on board with their pistols and cutlasses, and a savage fight began. The Spaniards were surprised, but there were a great many more of them than there were pirates, and they fought hard. However, the man who makes the attack and who is at the same time desperate and hungry, has a great advantage, and it was not long before the buccaneers were masters of the vessel. Those of the Spaniards who were not killed were forced into the service of their captors, and Pierre found himself in command of a very good vessel.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 21.—A special to the Evening News from Washington says: It was a peculiar situation in the national house of representatives when Congressman McLellan, son of Gen. Geo. B. McLellan, in impassioned sentences denounced the United States army as inefficient, top heavy with gold lace and unworthy of this nation. It was utterly amazing, he said, but it was true, that not an officer in the service was engaged in preparing for war. There existed not a single plan of campaign, not a single skeleton order for mobilization, no plan for camps, in fact not one of the preliminary necessities to meet a war crisis. McLellan's remarks were given close attention, and he was liberally applauded when he concluded.
