ELLEN'S DIARY

A Raspberry Pie Is On The Menu For James

"Ellen, I've been expecting you!" an old squirrel - friend of ours and the children, said welcoming us with a pleased air this afternoon when we came to the woodlands across the road from Alderlea. "Your name" she nodded "has been on my mind all day." That's nice "we smiled... It's good to be remembered... pleasantly, that is!"

"I guess" she twinkled "it's the time of year. But the minute I saw that patch of raspberries this morning, your name came to mind. There's enough there for Ellen to make a pie for James, dear man," I said to myself then, and more than once since. And here you are to gather them now!"

"They say" we offered "if you think of someone you wish most to see - if you concentrate on the name often you will be sure to hear from them or see them shortly."

"That's pure phantasy, I'd say" she commented after some reflection. "Though one never knows. Doesn't your coming say that it just might be true? Because "her eyes were solemn" "you were on my mind - there's no question about that. Oh well" she twinkled "we'll leave it."

"To the birds," we laughed, hearing a kingfisher's call above the millstream below.

"It's a warm afternoon, isn't it?" she commented.

"It is. But pleasant here in the shade of the evergreens" we said, gathering a handful of the luscious garnet fruit into our jug.

She sighed. "Not many raspberries to pick of late years - not like there once was. Remember the abundance there used to be, round about here? Ah me, times have changed sadly, haven't they Ellen? But there, what's the need of sighing? I shan't bother you to listen. Pick your berries and make your pie for James! And give him my regards!" she smiled. And when we looked again, there was neither whip nor stitch of her to be seen nor a twig of evergreen bough stirring to show where she had been!

August's tints, green and near-gold were along the valley, and near us was the drowsy afternoon hum of the pifering bees. And all about, that delightful fragrance of fern and fir and woods' plant... and raspberry that belongs to the ripening of the year.

Stars now, the warm and friendly beacons of summer light the August sky against which the lawn - trees stand so dark and still. We saw them moments ago when we came to the verandah to look and listen for a sound we most wished to hear. There it is now, hailed by the dogs' welcoming barks - the Alderlea folks homing from a spell at The Fair.

Until tomorrow—Diary—Good night.

MODERN CLASSICS

BY ALICE ALDEN
SWEATER enthusiasts will find a wonderful array of attractive merchandise when they start their fall shopping. The classics are there, of course, but these, too, have been dolled up with intriguing detail and eye-catching color contrasts. Hadley has come up with creations such as this cashmere slipover in a tiered effect of three-color striped trip. The high-rising neck-line is underscored with bands of sandalwood, black and blond against a sandalwood ground, the trim repeated at the sleeve cuffs.

MR. AND MRS. J. E. FAIRLESS Married At Breadalbane Will Reside In Ontario

Breadalbane United Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday, July 26th., when Doris Frances Marie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Nicholson became the bride of John Edwards Fairless, Guelph, Ont.

The Rev. Anthony Ware performed the double ring ceremony. The church was attractively decorated with potted plants and summer flowers.

Mrs. James Snowey was in charge of the wedding music and accompanied Mrs. Hedley Lowther who sang the "Wedding Prayer" previous to the ceremony and "Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was charming in a floor length gown of white silk organza over taffeta, fitted bodice trimmed with cut-out applique, long sleeves coming to a point over hands. Her lace edged veil was held in place with a bridal lace cap trimmed with sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of red sweet heart roses and feathered carnations.

Mrs. Donald Barlow was matron of honor and Miss Dianne Taylor bridesmaid. Both wore identical gowns of light blue nylon eyelet over taffeta with head pieces of white carnations and carried nosegays of blue and white carnations.

Judy Barlow, winsome little flower girl, was dressed in pale blue nylon eyelet, with flower headpiece and carried a basket of garden flowers.

The groom was attended by his brother Mr. Douglas Fairless. Mr. Garth Toombs ushered the guests to marked pews.

Mrs. Nicholson chose for her daughter's wedding a gown of silver-blue lace over taffeta, with white accessories. Her corsage was red sweet heart roses.

Mrs. Fairless, mother of the groom, was attired in a mid blue lace dress with insets of pleated nylon. She wore white accessories and corsage of pink carnations.

A reception for thirty-five guests was held at Birth Hill Tourist Home where the bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake encircled with lighted tapers.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Irving Toombs (uncle of the bride) and was responded to by the groom.

Mrs. Kenneth Henderson was in charge of the guest book. Amid the well wishes of all present the happy couple left on a honeymoon through the New England States.

For travelling the bride chose a semi-chemise in mint green silk lined with hat to match tan accessories and corsage of white feathered carnations.

Following their honeymoon they will reside in Guelph, Ont. where the groom is Dye Chemist with Harding Yarn Co. and the bride is on the staff of the Royal Bank. (Photo by D. W. Sears, the Read Studio and Camera Shop).

DESPAIR AND HOPE

The following poem by Edward F. Hayden appeared in the Second Parish News of the Second Parish Orthodox Presbyterian Church, Portland, Maine. This church is a member of the Presbytery of New York and New England of the Orthodox Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Hayden is a native of Prince Edward Island. He has been a successful builder and contractor in Portland, Maine, for many years until his retirement several years ago.

No hope beyond, O tragic thought That life should end in one dark blot. This but a lifeless piece of clay In despair and silence laid away.

No hope beyond for those who grieve, For loved ones who have gone indeed Beyond the reach of love and care; Yes, gone indeed, but O, just where?

"No hope beyond," we sadly cry "No hope beyond," we sadly cry With streaming eyes we look in vain For someone to relieve our pain.

No hope beyond—O, can it be That He Whose works so fair to see Should leave our hearts in doubt and pain, Our souls in darkness and in chains

Yes, hope beyond, O, blessed thought That God for us a way has wrought In Him Who is the world's great light. Christ is the way, the Truth, the Life.

Yes, hope beyond for those bereaved Who in His blessed name believed.

Their loved ones gone who trusted Him Are safe beyond the power of sin.

Yes, hope beyond—Let sorrow cease And entrance give the Prince. His hand shall wipe all tears away

And soothe the pain that clouds our day. Yes, hope beyond! So well assured For hearts that doubt and pain endured.

Their souls are lighted from above And freed by Christ's own blood in love.
