No Time For Timidity Finance Minister Says

By DON HANBRIGHT OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Gordon said here the economic challenges facing Canada require a willingness on the part of both government and industry "to take chances. "This is not the time for a timid, cautious or faint-hearted approach," the minister said in a speech to about 300 Ottawa accountants.

Mr. Gordon said he hopes the Economic Council of Canada in its year-end report on economic prospects and problems up to 1970 will be "brave enough" to indicate in a general way the kind of policies it considers necessary. Meanwhile, he said preliminary indications are for a "very substantial" increase in Canadian capital investment in 1965. This year anticipated investment was up 16 per cent over 1963, largest year-to-year gain since 1956.

N.Z. Troops Make History

LONDON (Reuters)—A contingent of New Zealand troops made history here by mounting the first full ceremonial march by a non-British unit at Buckingham Palace.

A detachment of three New Zealand regiments took over as palace guards from the tall, colorful Welsh guards in their flamboyant scarlet tunics. On alternate days for the next 12 days the familiar black busbies and scarlet uniforms of the Guards Regiment will be replaced by the berets and tunics of 150 men from the Royal New Zealand Armoured Corps, the Royal New Zealand Artillery and the Royal New Zealand Electrical and Mechanical Engineers.

New Spray For Budworms Reported Fatal For Birds

By BEN WARD OTTAWA (CP)—A research report on the use of phosphamidon against spruce budworms in New Brunswick says the chemical kills birds and should be used "with extreme caution." Although it pointedly avoided condemning phosphamidon, an insecticide now available in most parts of Canada, the report outlines some striking results noted last June when 100, 000 acres of forest land in central New Brunswick were sprayed from the air with the chemical. Dr. David Fowle, head of biology at Toronto's York University, wrote the preliminary report of findings made in a detailed experiment conducted in the spray area. It was released Friday by the Canadian Wildlife Service. The experiment was sponsored by the New Brunswick lands department, to coincide with the first large-scale use in Canada of phosphamidon, a Swiss product derived from a wartime nerve gas.

REPLACES DDT

It was used in place of DDT along salmon streams because, unlike DDT, phosphamidon loses its toxic effects when diluted by water. In the past DDT spraying had caused a heavy death toll among young salmon.

Dr. Fowle, assisted by Dr. Graham Cooch of Ottawa, set up five study areas where bird activity was carefully assessed before and after spraying. "A number of dead birds were found after spraying," the report says. One area was near Bellisburg. A comparison of bird counts four days before and four days after spraying showed these examples: Flycatchers, 19 before and one after; Tennessee warblers, 27 and eight; thrushes, 12 and five; robins, 10 and three; white-throated sparrows, 36 and four.

ADVISES CAUTION

Dr. Fowle stressed that the findings were not conclusive. "The results of this study should not be used to condemn phosphamidon because it killed some birds," he wrote. The accurate statement is that it killed some birds under low operational conditions in 1964.

"We know nothing of what might happen if the dosage was altered, if it were applied earlier in the year or sprayed in the evening instead of the afternoon. We do not really understand how the birds pick up the poison. The results suggested that the compound be used with extreme caution until counting capital had benefited Canada. But it created problems. The changing nature of Canadian society. More and more people were in the cities and fewer on farms. These people would have to find jobs and would put more pressure on governments for social security, including pensions. The need to work always for total unity. Quebec separatism had been exaggerated. The people of Quebec had just decided to get the kind of education and interests that would allow them to take a bigger part in the affairs of the province.

Pravda Warns Soviet Gains Of Wild Parties

MOSCOW (AP)—The newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda warns nice Soviet girls to stay away from wild parties in country districts. The young Communist league organ issues the warning in a discussion about "dacha excesses" among Soviet youth.

The comment, published in the form of letters from readers, suggests the problem of unchaperoned drinking and sex is fairly widespread. The discussion was touched off last summer by a letter from a Moscow girl named Svetlana who innocently accepted an invitation to a party in a suburban summer house. She said the nice young man who invited her got drunk and made advances. She slapped his face and walked out.

Toy War

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Customs officials are waging their annual pre-Christmas war against smuggling of toys from the U.S. into Mexico. The haul so far this year is officially estimated at $80,000. Border authorities seized $8,000 worth of toys after an smuggler's truck was involved in an accident.

Separatist Gets 10-Year Term

MONTREAL (CP)—Andre Ouellette, 25, who said he robbed a bank to raise funds for Quebec's separatist movement, has been sentenced to 10 years in penitentiary on a charge of robbery with violence. Conducting his own defence, Ouellette made a plea for leniency in which he brought up the bank robbery operations of North African nationalists and referred to the prison records of Gandhi, Nehru, Castro and others.
