Klondike Trail Days Recalled

By NEIL A. MATHESON... HUGH D. SMITH recalled for me some of his experiences in the Klondike Gold Rush, 1906 to 1909...

HEIR was best man when Milligan was married in Dawson in September 1907 to Daisy Baker, Seattle, Washington...

Hikes 480 Miles In 14 Days

BUT WALKING was the usual thing in those days—usually there was no other subject of today's column did plenty of it. He hiked 480 miles in more than 14 days in February 1909...

The trio mushed an average 35 miles per day, with 45 miles being the biggest day. They put up at night and had noon meals at road houses along the river where men trapped and cut wood for firing the river...

They ate at times in cabins "for a Northerner always leaves his hatchet in the hands of the man who runs out. We went in, cooked the meal, left the price and mushed on."

"Some of the camps were run by one man, some by two, sometimes a wife and one man had two squaws or two squaws. As Service observed in The Parson's Son—"Every man had his squaw and lived a wild, free and fearless life beyond the pale."

Crossing "The Divide" was a problem. Warned not to attempt it if the sun was not shining or a high wind was blowing, the three started on the morning of the 11th and it seemed all right and they had no trouble going up. But the descent was another matter.

Potatoes At $20.00 Per Bushel... FRITZIE and Charlie went their way and he never heard from them again. Mr. Smith went mining at Cleary Creek and expenses ran high for the month of June...

THE BANKER counted out 125 gold pieces each worth $20 which he tried to pack several ways, including a leather belt for carrying coin, which he found too sharp on his hips.

CRIBBAGE BOARD FROM WALRUS Tusk... A PIECE of Walrus tusk about 20 inches long is beautifully decorated by Eskimo artists. This is a cribbage board design in the center, and opposite corners are made of the tusk with many famous names of gold rush days indicated.

BEFORE I leave the Klondike, I want to quote Mr. Smith that one of the characters of that time were wild and woolly. Bobby Crawford who played the harmonica on the boats playing between Fairbanks and Seattle continued in music and became professor of music at the University of Miami some years later.

THE OTHER item concerns the Oxford Down sheep the Smiths raised. They had 39 lambs from 19 ewes in 1927 which weighed more than 3,000 pounds. In 1928 they had 120 and one to 150 pounds. They were born in April and shipped in early November. It was sold. The size of the lambs was purchased from Jim Johnston at Elmendorf.

AND NOW a word of appreciation to Chief Justice Thane A. Campbell and the members of his committee—do not know their names but are mentioned "Across the Island" for consideration for recognition by the American Association for State and Local History. My appreciation goes also to the many people across the Island who telephone or told me some of the most interesting stories to research and develop.

duets that are proven to the satisfaction of the court.

SWINE BREEDERS... special effort will be made to try our farmsteads. It shouldn't be all left until next year now is a good time to start.

BREED MEETINGS... The next two weeks will see a number of annual meetings held by the breed associations. Farmers who breed the same type of livestock have a close similarity of interest and perhaps there is stronger fraternal feeling in such groups of support and encouragement.

A happy feature of the occasion was the presentation for the first time of the "Harold Clay Challenge Trophy." It was a happy coincidence that the first winner, Lloyd MacLeod comes from the community where Mr. Clay grew up.

The cutting demonstration on two sides from "A" and "C" hogs was pretty convincing from the standpoint of proving the extra value of the top grade. The swine people realize the importance of being constantly alert in the matter of quality and quantity of their "treasures."

WINTER KILLING... It is now evident that winter killing in the meadows and particularly in pastures has become more and more a thing of the past. This fact coupled with slow growth making pastures difficult to maintain something less than satisfactory.

With warmer weather the situation should improve and the season redemptive. It is hoped that the winter killing is still behind that of the same period last year by no more than a few weeks.

With cropping pretty well completed the next few weeks probably will see the opportunity for applying makeup to the farm buildings in the form of paint, whitewash, repairs to fences, etc.

It is hoped that the winter killing is still behind that of the same period last year by no more than a few weeks. This is probably one of the most beautiful times of the year, everything is fresh and green and while June beauty doesn't last long it does compensate for much of the rest of the year.

Tignish Man Is Graduate Of White Fathers Seminary

Joseph Melvin Doucette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Doucette of Palmer Road, North R.R. 2, Tignish has completed his college studies at St. Joseph's Seminary in Onondaga, N.Y.

The seminary is operated by the White Fathers of Africa and held its June meeting at the Western Hospital. Arrangements have been made to have use of the women's infirmary hall on June 22 and some entries have already been received.

Mr. Doucette is a former member of Immaculate Conception parish, he was graduated from Tignish High School in Onondaga, N.Y. The main difference between the desert and a pleasant countryside is mostly grass and trees. Where there is sufficient rainfall grass will grow naturally and in many cases trees.

He is now evident that winter killing in the meadows and particularly in pastures has become more and more a thing of the past. This fact coupled with slow growth making pastures difficult to maintain something less than satisfactory.
