

For Safety's Sake

Take the Danger out of Darkness with an EVEREADY FLASHLIGHT

BE sure to take an Eveready with you on your vacation trip. It makes night travelling on water or land safe; pilots the way over slippery places; finds lost paths; instantly floods the tent or cottage with light when strange noises awaken you.

Go to any electrical, hardware, drug, or sporting goods store and get the style of Eveready that you like best. Get a supply of Eveready Batteries too.

INSIST ON EVEREADY

THE BRIDGE TO SHOE ECONOMY lies in our shoe repairing. Why pay the high costs of new shoes when for a small fraction of the cost we can make your old ones serve for months longer? It's a sound business-like argument. When the uppers are good, we can make the "lowers" as good as the "uppers." Prove this on your next worn pair.

The Wall Flower

A REWARD Chapter 76.

In life even more than in fiction, people often work at cross purposes and make a muddle of days and weeks that might pass happily with mutual understanding. So with George and Gloria. And so was Pan deceived. Gloria was in a curious mood. Pan had never known her to react in any usual manner before. When the average woman is worried half to death she is irritable or depressed or on the edge of tears.

When Gloria was worried, she flew to an excited gait, false of course, but most receptive. When she was tired and things were going wrong, she went from occasional bursts of temper into an exaggerated patience.

I was never Frankie's naughtiness that annoyed her, his pranks and disobediences amused her, his little impudences made her laugh. She grew impatient now and then over a long period of anxious goodness on his part—over the day when he preferred a book and the couch to play, when he was good to the point of meekness.

"I want a tomboy, that's my trouble," she apologized once when she told him sharply to be a real boy and go out and play with his friends.

But Gloria these days had the normal reaction of the most ordinary sort of woman to everything that happened.

"Frankie's 'I'm a run away loco motive, mother,' accompanied by sardonic as piercing as only a small child can make them, brought a sharp:

"Stop that, Frank, or I'll send you to bed."

This rebuke so astonished her boy that he forgot his locomotive entirely and retired to play mouse and cat with himself in the next room.

Pan went to the hotel phone and called for tea. Gloria laughed then and said:

"Are you going to soothe me with hot drink and food? I am a cross patch today. Pan as usual, you're an angel. I suppose I'm tired and I'm wretched too. Did George say he was coming around?"

Pan said yes—for George was around every evening and often for dinner as well.

"Darling George! My temper worry him. I'll try to be decent by the time he comes. I don't know what any of us would do without him."

George is awfully in love with you," the girl observed. She wondered if Gloria would tell her anything about this.

"Is he?" And Gloria laughed. "He's certainly never said so. I'm afraid I've known George too long and too well for him to fall in love with me. He's much more likely to fall madly in love with you, darling. You're his type."

"With me? No, he likes clever people." "Oh does he? He also likes to be much the cleverer of any cleverest. And he adores ordering people around—oh, he does it nicely, of course, but he does it just the same. I find even myself falling into the way of taking directions from him—it's fatal, we all do it more or less. George likes the soft, yielding type of woman—you're type, Pan. I shouldn't be in the least surprised if he wasn't attracted a little smitten."

"Her quick eyes searched Pan's face for any sign. But Pan was simply in earnest when she said so quickly.

"Oh no, I know better."

"Well, you are a awful young, of course—though there's only 11 years difference between you. George seems a bit older, you a bit younger than your real years."

"He thinks I'm still in love with—"

"I know. Of course, that would put a man off, though we've all assured him you're quite forgotten. Morton, Lord, Pan, what a different person you are from the scared rabbit who came to live with me last winter."

"I know, it's all due to you—and a little to George," the girl answered, and touched Gloria's hand lightly for a moment. "I feel as though he sun came out last winter for the first time, and began to warm me through. Before that, everything was dark and damp and chilly, and every face a threatening hunder cloud."

"I don't know what I'd do without you. But George says you're apt to marry—I shouldn't go back to the old life. I'd get a position in the city."

"So George is having me married, is he?" Gloria was quick to resent. "In view of everything that's happened, he's a little quick with his judgment. But even if I should, Pan, and I don't intend to, I'll tell you that—even if I should, you must stay with me. If you need me for my mental stimulation, I need you for the physical comfort you give me and my home, and the care you take of Frank, who adores you and for the mass of details and worry you save me."

"That was Pan's reward and all he reward she wanted."

"That was her niche in life, to care others. And she had found it with Gloria, she was satisfied—or thought she was. She wanted Gloria happy—even if she married George."

Tomorrow—Paris.

ROD AND GUN

"Men of the Hudsons Bay Company" is the title of a new continuing feature which starts in the July issue of Rod and Gun in Canada. It is by N. M. W. J. McKenzie, a man who spent many years in service of the company, and who by reason of his long term of service, is able to present a narrative of absorbing interest, full of reminiscences of the days and the events of the North of bygone days. It will be continued in future issues of the Magazine, and is certain to prove an intensely popular feature. There is a fish story entitled "Shooting Fish," which is old in a humorous vein, by that well known writer Maximilian Foster. H. Mortimore Batten, whose work has become very popular with Rod and Gun readers, is at his best in "Firepoint," a thrilling tale. Then there are other features and articles which are well up to the standard. The departments are of generous size and high quality, and altogether the July number is one of the best ever published.

Rod and Gun in Canada is published monthly at Woodstock, Ontario, by W. J. Taylor, Limited.

Feels It His Duty To Tell Facts In Case

Dartmouth Citizen Says He Suffered For Years From Indigestion But Was Finally Restored Completely. by Tanlac.

"In telling how Tanlac helped me I feel I am only doing my public duty," declared Peter Nielson, highly respected citizen of Dartmouth, N. S. "For nearly fifteen years I was troubled with indigestion. My food would form gas that caused the sharp pains across my chest and almost cut off my breath. My kidneys also were out of order. I had a pain in the small of my back and if I stooped over I could hardly straighten up again."

"Of late years my chief trouble was rheumatism. Sometimes I could not use my arms and shoulders. Then it seemed to settle in my legs. I got so bad I could not walk to business."

"Finally I decided to try Tanlac and today I am a well man. My rheumatism is gone and I am able to walk back and forth to work. My indigestion has been overcome and I feel just fine. I overtake Tanlac is a wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

SEMI-ANNUAL EXAMINATIONS

The semi-annual examinations, of St. Mary's School No. 174, took place in the school house on Friday, June 23, at 1.30 p. m.

There were a large number of parents and visitors present, showing the great interest, which the rate payers of St. Mary's take in their school. The teacher, Mr. Martin was assisted in examining the classes by Rev. W. V. McDonald, Patrick Walsh, B. A., Michael Pineau, Moses Gallant and Mrs. Peter Pineau, teachers.

At the close of the examination, complimentary remarks on the excellent progress made during the year were made by Rev. W. V. McDonald, Mr. Patrick Walsh, Moses Gallant and Michael Pineau.

The following programme was carried out. Opening Chorus, "Blen Venue"; Recitation, "Grandma's Glasses" by Lucie Gallant; Recitation "Lecho" by Annie Pineau; Song, "My Own Little Girl," by Dina Dolron; Recitation, "A Little Boy's Trouble" by Joseph A. Rogers; Chorus, "In Acadia Errant"; Recitation, "The Owl and the Pussy Cat" by George Gallant; Recitation "The Story of Grumble Tone"; Song "Grandma Fanchon" by Dina Dolron; Chorus, "O Canada."

Prizes given by the St. Mary's Debating Club were distributed to the pupils.

The singing of the National Anthem brought this successful examination to a close. (Patriot please copy.)
