Honor Memory of Great Statesman In English City

(Canadian Press Staff Writer) BIRMINGHAM, England June 1—Preparations are being made to celebrate in July the centenary of the birth of Joseph Chamberlain, Birmingham's greatest citizen. The city council will hold a special meeting, to which members of the Chamberlain family will be invited, and an oration is to be delivered in memory of Chamberlain's municipal life and work. Wreaths will be laid on his memorial in Chamberlain Square, and an exhibition of Chamberlain mementoes held in the Art Gallery.

Salisbury. Chamberlain reached the peak of his fame. By his admirers he was hailed as the statesman who had swept the dust and cobwebs from the dingy Colonial Office and brought the true meaning of empire before its citizens. By his enemies he was anathematized as a jingo, whose ambitions were largely responsible for the South African War.

It was even alleged against him that his sudden epouza, in 1903, of Tariff Reform was but a device to gloss over the loss in South Africa of life and money, and of national prestige in the world at large.

Joseph Chamberlain's residence at King's Heath, known as Highbury, has been converted into a home for aged women, but part of the premises are reserved as a Joseph Chamberlain museum. A portion of the great statesman's political library was given to the Parliament Buildings, Ottawa. Although Joseph Chamberlain's name is indelibly associated with Birmingham he was not a native of the city. He was born in London July 8, 1836, but at 18 he went to Birmingham to take over the screw-making business of Nettletons with which his family was associated. At 38 he was able to retire with a comfortable fortune. From that day until the present the name of Chamberlain has had a legendary glamor in the industrial capital of the midlands. Chamberlain entered the Birmingham town council and served as mayor in 1873-5. Birmingham's civic spirit in those days, like that of many other large English industrial towns was at a very low ebb. Chamberlain initiated the municipalization of the gas and water supplies, and in other ways organized civic efficiency.

For three years he travelled the country preaching a fiscal doctrine for which the country as a whole at that time showed little appetite. At the end of this campaign, in 1906, he received an overwhelming ovation in Birmingham on his 70th birthday. Almost immediately afterwards he was seized with a paralytic illness. He retained his seat in the Commons, but his appearance there, a helpless invalid, merely to sign the roll, was distressing to friend and foe alike. He died July 2, 1914, within a week of his 78th birthday. Chamberlain married three times. His first and second wife were cousins, members of a noted Birmingham family named Henrick. Sir Austen Chamberlain, whose many famous achievements have included the Foreign Secretary, the signing of the Locarno Treaty, was a child of the first marriage. Like his father he still affects the monocle, the tall hat and the fower in his buttonhole. Neville Chamberlain, who lately produced his fifth Budget, and who is confidently expected to become Prime Minister in the event of Stanley Baldwin's resignation, was a child of the second marriage. The peculiar aquiline stamp of features are not so noticeable in him. Joseph Chamberlain's third wife was an American, a daughter of Judge Endicott, whom he met when he was a British plenipotentiary to the United States to discuss certain fishery disputes. Two years after Chamberlain's death, Mrs. Chamberlain married Canon Carnegie, Rector of St. Margaret's, Westminster, and Chaplain of the House of Commons.

In 1876, at the age of 40, he became a colleague of John Bright, another famous mid-Victorian personality, in the parliamentary representation of Birmingham. "Joe" was a red-hot Radical at that time, almost a Republican in fact. His speeches received the open disapproval of Queen Victoria.

It was "Joe" Chamberlain who first taught English political parties how to organize a big-scale caucus. Nothing of the kind had been known here before Chamberlain and his Birmingham lieutenant, Schnadhorst, organized the old Gladstonian-Liberals on a national basis.

Long Parliamentary Career
 During his prolonged parliamentary career, Chamberlain smashed in succession both of England's historical political parties. He split the Liberals over Home Rule and 20 years later split the Conservatives over Tariff Reform. As Colonial Secretary under Lord

VANCOUVER MAYOR SAFE IN NEW YORK TO SEE QUEEN MARY
 (C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire) NEW YORK, June 2—Mayor G. G. McGreer of Vancouver is safe and sound in New York and saw the Queen Mary come in, in fact he was aboard her as she came up the harbor this afternoon. Reports of his disappearance while flying from Ottawa to New York were "greatly exaggerated," the Mayor said. "I cannot understand how such reports went abroad," he said.

Heavy Flood Loss In British Columbia

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) VANCOUVER, June 1.—Rivers of British Columbia today surged over two great sections of the province, a 100-mile area east of Prince Rupert and the full length of the waterways network from the Rocky Mountains to the southern coast. A heat wave over the interior which melted snow on the mountains brought the flood. Towns were under water and isolated Indian villages were reported in distress. Buildings swirled down the rushing waters; highways were inundated and all telegraph and telephone communication cut off. Railways reported many washouts. The worst floods in 30 years were reported along the Skeena River in the North while the Revelstoke district experienced the worst flood condition since 1894. Railway authorities in the North said they feared lives may be endangered by the rampaging waters and police boats were ordered into the flood zone.

Will Serve Warrant On Ann Harding In England

NEW YORK, June 1—An attorney for Harry Bannister who charged his former wife, Ann Harding, screen actress, with abducting their seven-year-old daughter Jane, indicated tonight an abduction warrant sworn out by Bannister will be served on Miss Harding when she reaches England. While the actress, her daughter and a manager were speeding toward England on the liner Duchess of Atholl, Bannister's attorney, Stanley J. Harte, communicated with English legal representatives. The blond actress, who eluded her former husband's attempts to serve a warrant detaining her in Canada, said she was going abroad to make a motion picture.

DUCE DIVIDES EMPIRE INTO FIVE COLONIES

Native Chiefs Eliminated From Government In Plans For Ruling Italian "Empire."

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) ROME, June 1—Races, or native chieftains, were eliminated from the government of Ethiopia except in a consultative capacity today by a comprehensive administrative decree approved by the cabinet. Italian East Africa was divided into five colonies. The Ethiopian Coptic Church was again brought under the jurisdiction of the Patriarch of Alexandria. The division of Premier Mussolini's "empire," including the colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland, was made in this fashion: Eritrea—Capital, Asmara. Amhara—Capital, Gondar. Galla and Sidamo—Capital, Jimma. Harar—Capital, Harar. Somaliland—Capital, Mogadiscio. A viceroy will rule Ethiopia, with Addis Ababa as the capital. The viceroy will have a consultative council composed of six Italian resident merchants, farmers and manufacturers and six native chieftains. In addition to the consultative council, there will be a governor's council, made up of leading officials in East Africa. The viceroy will be aided in Ethiopia by a viceroy-general and the chief of the general staff, who will direct the army. "The greatest guarantee" were declared for the Mohammedan religion. A gesture toward Egypt was seen in the restoration of the Coptic Church of Ethiopia to the patriarchal see of Alexandria and the Egyptian Coptic Church. The connection had been broken in recent years. Generals of the African armies were nominated as governors of the new colonies.

Icebergs Scarce In Transatlantic Lanes

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire) HALIFAX, June 2—Icebergs are scarce in the transatlantic shipping lanes this year and the international ice patrol will be ended about June 10. Commander Lucas of the United States cutter Pontchartrain said today when he arrived in port for supplies. "This has been the mildest ice patrol season since records were first kept in 1913," he reported. "No ice has come as far south as latitude 45 and there is no prospect that there will be any. Last year was most abnormal and this year is just the reverse." "The absence of ice indicates that the ice patrol will be over by June 10. The patrol season is normally from April to the end of June and sometimes goes into early July. One year it ended early in August. Steamships automatically moved down to "track B" for the transatlantic route to New York on April 10, but ice conditions were so favorable they could have used "track C," the northern route, all season.
