War in The Transvaal

Particulars of the Struggle in South Africa.

SOLDIERS AT THE FRONT.

Out of the Frying Pan.

The parents of Private Daniels, of the 2nd Royal Rifles, who was reported missing after the Battle of Glencoe, have received a communication from him which was written at Pretoria. He says: "We got a very good reception in Pretoria. We had a very good time of it. I was captured and made a prisoner of war, and I am now in the race-course until all is quiet again. We are having good food, etc. Little did I think I would be here when I left home. I am very sorry we cannot receive any letters from home yet while this affair is on. I dare say you thought me dead with receiving no letters from me. I had not a scratch on me, although I was in a very dangerous position for six hours, and when I looked round I found the battalion had gone. Then I ran for safety, but instead of safety I ran into the enemy's hands."

Looting at Belmont.

According to Private F. Byers, of the 1st Northumberland Fusiliers, who was wounded at Belmont, there was plenty of loot after the battle. "I wish I had been able to get up that hill," he says, "as one of our company got £50 and two gold watches, and another got a marble clock. One of the Boer wounded had £1,400 in gold and securities when he was brought in, but he died soon after. We got well looked after in hospital, and chicken, strawberries and cream, etc., seem rather a high diet after a man has been roughing it."

A Sickening Sight.

Private Thompson, of the 1st Scots Guards, writing to his friends in Leeds remarks: "Then came the hardest affair we have yet had. We set out about half-past three, and attacked the Modder River. We marched straight into their hands. They had dug a trench in the middle of a great plain, and we were within 150 yards when they opened fire on us. For the first time in our three fights we had to retire, and then our artillery started to shell them out, and it was a sickening sight. We were fighting until ten o'clock next morning. We got a telegram from the Queen. Then we were ordered to have a rest, and so settled down in camp."

Eating a Dog Biscuit.

This is from the letter of a private in the 1st Scots Guards, under Lord Methuen: "I thought I was done for, they were falling on both sides of me." We were walking up talking of anything but the war and I was eating a dog-biscuit when all at once there came at least 1,000 rounds at our Maxim gun. I was just behind it I did not stop to eat my biscuit, I can tell you I dropped down as if I were dead, and was lying there for over three hours, not daring to move. If I had done so I should have been shot." In a postscript it is asked that the dirty papers be excused, "as I had not had a wash this week yet."

Half Famished.

"The Nubia was by no means a transport of delight," writes a sergeant in the Northamptons. We were actually glad to eat the carrots for the horses on board, which were about the only wholesome things on the ship. Surely the government can afford to treat us better than this. We landed at Cape Town about half famished."

A "Peppered" Private.

A private of the 2nd Northamptons, writing from Wynberg hospital, says: "I am lying here peppered all over. I had a bullet in my left leg, another in my left arm, another through my wrist, and part of my left ear is blown away. Still I have reason to be thankful for I have at least got some decent food. I fought at Belmont and Graspan on an empty stomach and could get no water for love or money. There are 700 patients here, and I can see funerals of poor chaps every day."

Precious as Gold.

"Water was precious as gold," writes P. C. Newberry, of the Northamptons, from Belmont. When we do get any it is a khaki color, and full of sand. We fought at Belmont with our bellies full of dog biscuit dry as saw dust, and I am looking forward to the time when we can have a good meal in peace. Our general tells us we are not fighting ignorant savages this time, but our own equals, and we cannot afford to give them a peg." The writer was severely wounded at Graspan two days later.

Ragged, but Tough.

Sergeant Medland Newsham, of the Durban Light Infantry, writing to his parents at Northampton from Frere, says: "We are a very ragged-looking lot now, far different to when we started. The general however, tells us that if we are ragged looking we can shoot straight, and are tough. We cannot always get a wash; the longest I have been without is three weeks. I have not slept without my boots for a month, and am just getting used to it."

Fighting Against Rocks.

William Gasson, of the Royal Marine Artillery, who was badly wounded at Graspan, writes to his parents from the Royal Naval hospital at Simon's Town: "You will have seen the account of our fighting at Belmont and Graspan. It was like fighting against rocks more than anything. We couldn't see scarcely any of them till we started charging with bayonets. Then they fly in thousands. I got nearly close to them when they picked me off. Had four shots strike me, but only one did much damage. They went through the water bottle completely riddled it, and tore my clothes and traps away, but I got one in the knee."

A Pitiable Sight.

"We were two days lying out in the open, then two days in the train," The same letter continues. It was a pitiable sight when we got here. All the town turned out to meet us. It didn't make us feel none the better, as nearly all the women started crying—a great contrast to going away with the band playing 'Soldiers of the Queen' All the officers came and us and gave us great praise for what we had done, but we won it dearly. My company got it stiff, only 16 out of 48 were able to go on, and some of them wounded slightly; captain of the company shot dead for commencement, all the non-commissioned officers got wounded and we lost our commander the same time. Such a nice chap."

A Bothered Boy.
 I wonder why it is that girls are always told that they should do just like their mamas do in every single way?
 It's awful easy for a girl to get along, becuz they praise her up fer actin' just the way her mamma duz.

I wonder why it is that boys can't go and do the way their pas do and still not get licked or lectured every day?
 Their pas, they nearly always smoke, and many of them chew,
 And wunst my pa he got so mad I heard him swearin' too!

I wish somebody'd tell me why it's always dreadful wrong fer boys to do things that their pas keep doin' right along;
 I wish I knew why girls can act just like their mmmas do
 And, what is more, git loved a lot and praised up fer it too!

A Bilious Letter

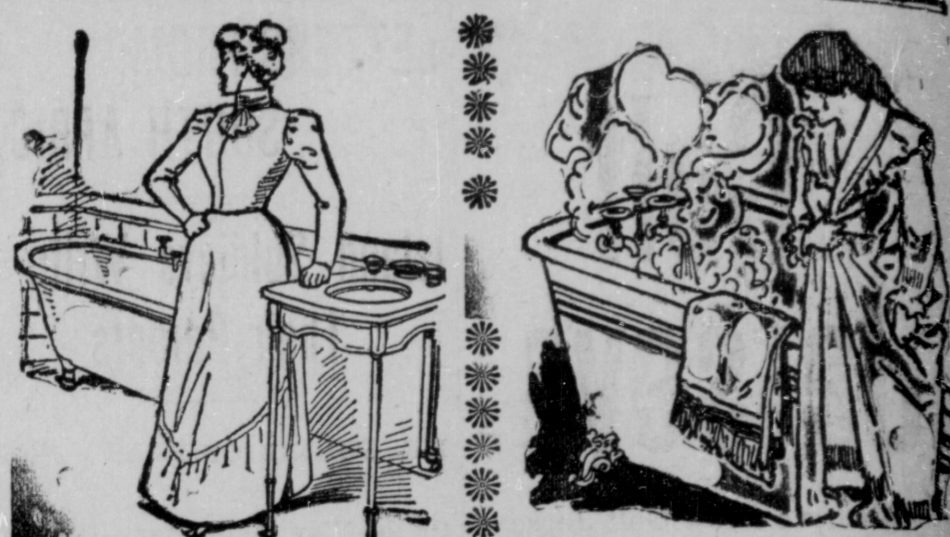

Thursday evening we dropped a bill in the Post Office for a prominent gentleman of this town. The next morning we had the pleasure of receiving it. This is what we call promptness. (Oh, that others would do likewise.) We have been dropping, dropping, softly dropping a number of bills in the Post Office; and we are waiting, waiting patiently, to have the pleasure and to give the pleasure of receiving them.

Please do not all come together; but if you do, what a happy, happy gathering it will be. We have a number of bills to pay, and a large number of small bills that should be paid us. Kindly pay yours and we will be in a position to do likewise.

Yours very truly
