

AVOIDS TRUCK BUT HITS POLE

Avoiding a collision with a small truck yesterday morning in Summerside, a car from Ontario went out of control, blew a tire after striking the cement curb, and sheared off this electric light pole.

causing the car to go out of control and continuing along the curb and sidewalk area until crashing head-on against a telephone pole which was sheared off by the front of the car.

LET'S TALK IT OVER

Perhaps We Should Count The Troubles We Haven't

We've had a bad winter, we've had a usual Maritime spring which is not good, we are having a bad summer. Is everyone properly in the dumps now let's list what we haven't had.

stalemate has very obvious disadvantages. It takes away a certain freedom of action which governments should have to pursue their policies efficiently.

We haven't had any destructive hurricanes. (Audrey barely threw a sinister hiss in our direction). We haven't had floods. We haven't had heat waves which keep people awake nights. We haven't had Hungary's blood bath or Korea's famine. To some people here "Khrushchev" is the name of a fruit sale, and "Nasser" at best is only a name in a headline.

There is always an element of uncertainty which is not conducive to the encouragement of our system of free enterprise in the business world. But there are advantages to a stalemate, though they are probably outweighed by the disadvantages. The Opposition becomes more than a body which advises, criticizes and emphasizes weaknesses in the government policy. It becomes a watch dog which not only barks, but if the occasion demands it, also bites.

Maybe it is a little uncomfortable down there on the beaches, but let's admit it, we're a pretty lucky people after all. Let's thank our lucky stars if all we have to complain about is goose pimples. STALEMATE

Under such surveillance a government might be extra careful to legislate in the interests of the people. Arrogance should give away to humility and a desire to serve. France's experiences, however, argues against stalemate as a good condition of government.

Fears have been expressed that in the next Dominion election another stalemate may result, and certainly there seems a 50-50 chance that this might happen. Government in a condition of majority would seem to be better.

Stewart of Charlottetown, speaking last night at the annual meeting of the East Prince Progressive Conservative meeting held in Summerside, in referring to the forthcoming convention of the party to be held in September at which a new provincial leader will be elected, said that while his name had been mentioned as a candidate he had not yet made up his mind whether or not he would accept "a heavy responsibility to the people of Charlottetown as Mayor of the city," he said. "I know too, what the responsibilities of leadership are but I hope to reach a decision in the matter within a week and if I do decide to throw my hat in the ring I will be out to throw all the Grits out of this Province."

CNR Investigators Find Juveniles Responsible

WINNIPEG (CP) - Canadian National Railways investigators, assisted by RCMP, have determined that tampering by two youngsters with an improperly secured siding switch caused Sunday's wreck of a CNR Continental passenger train.

It was learned today from a CNR source that the juveniles were brothers, aged six and eight. It was not known whether charges would be laid.

Sixteen of the 86 persons injured in the crackup still were in hospital today. Two persons earlier on the critical list were reported out of danger. Damage to the train itself was estimated at $225,000 by a CNR car repairman. Repairs to 350 yards of twisted track and splintered ties were completed Monday morning.

Railway officials, who declined to be named, said the two boys were out picking blueberries when they happened upon the switch. It apparently had been left unlocked.

They said the youngsters watched horrified from nearby bushes as train No. 3, speeding on its way to Vancouver from Montreal and Toronto, piled up on the CNR main line at Nourse, 36 miles east of Winnipeg.

J. R. McMillan, CNR western region vice-president, said in a statement Monday: "Evidence has been obtained that the switch lock was removed from its position and the switch handle raised by juveniles immediately prior to the approach of the train, causing the derailment."

In a later statement he said "two juveniles have been interviewed in the presence of their parents."

Mr. McMillan, who personally supervised the investigation, told The Canadian Press the youngsters "were not seen" tampering with the switch, "but we have evidence they did."

He confirmed that main-line switches are by regulation supposed to be kept locked.

The railway said the train was travelling at 60 miles an hour when it cracked up. It was five hours late heading into Winnipeg. Twin diesel units and one of the train's 22 cars made it across the switch and stopped one-quarter mile down the track.

The second car's wheels caught the loose siding switch and 15 heavy metal cars behind flipped around like matchwood.

Twelve of the derailed cars carried passengers. Four were express and mail cars.

RAILMAN'S ESTIMATE D. E. Gable, 37, a railway car repairman from Biggar, Sask., who was returning from a holiday visit to Ottawa, estimated cost of repairing damaged cars at $225,000. He was riding in one of five rear cars that were not derailed.

He said damage to each of eight zig-zagged cars would be about $20,000 and between $5,000 and $10,000 to eight other derailed cars that had ground their undercarriages into track and roadbed.

The train carried 400 passengers.
