

Springhill No. 4 Shaft Is Now Virtually Deserted

By DON HOYT
Canadian Press Staff Writer
SPRINGHILL, N.S. (CP)—The Cumberland No. 4 mine, which for four days was the centre of a gripping rescue epic, is virtually deserted Tuesday.

A few company employees talked quietly together their voices hushed as if in reverence for 26 miners lying dead in a mine underground. A solitary company ambulance stood silently near the pithead where scores of anxious relatives waited for news of loved ones caught deep in the underground workings by an explosion of undetermined cause. Eighty eight were saved.

Stores and shops are open but the mine is lifeless.

It will be two months before the colliery, sealed off by the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation to prevent further explosions, will be re-opened. An official of the United Mine Workers District 26 said Tuesday it was improbable an investigation of the disaster will begin until early next year.

WON'T GO BACK
Among the groups gathered on street corners and before the memorial to 125 men who died in an explosion here 65 years ago, are remnants of the 113-man working crew caught beneath the surface by the explosion Thursday night.

It was the same story everywhere. Young men vow they will not re-enter the mines again and several said they planned to leave for Ontario.

"You don't get another chance like that one," said one of the 13 who was rescued through the efforts of draegermen and fellow miners, in many cases headed by Harold Gordon, chief of Dosco's coal operations.

The older men — particularly those with children — felt they had no choice but to risk their lives again by returning to the coal seams which makes the mine one of the deepest in the world.

"WHAT ELSE?"
"What else can I do?" a survivor asked a group around him. There was no answer.

Here and there in the town, a military vehicle is parked. Emergency feeding stations are closed. A stranger arriving here unknowing of the four days of terror, tragedy, happiness and prayer would think the miners were simply taking a holiday.

Two months of waiting lie ahead for the families of the 26 dead men, left far beneath the ground in order to prevent the loss of further lives by attempting to recover bodies while gas and fire pose a constant threat of explosion.

The company decision to shut off all air passages into the No. 4 shaft was announced Monday by Mr. Gordon who said he realized the feelings of bereaved families would be "indescribable."

There was no indication when the adjoining No. 2 colliery would be open. It was from there that rescue workers made their way into the blast-ridden No. 4 to bring up the 88 survivors.

lans and others are quite willing to talk over such problems with the livestockmen and poultrymen to help in preventing disease loss. Prevention through good management steps up efficiency and increases profits.

CARE OF MACHINERY
It is always wisdom to protect an investment and the outlay on farm machinery. It represents a considerable portion of the capital expenditure on the high mechanized farms of today. It takes considerable patience and time to put a moldboard, cultivator shovel, seed drill or one-way disc into satisfactory condition if the working surfaces have been allowed to rust for any length of time. Rusty bearings, shafting steel chains or slip clutches may cause more wear in the first hour of operation, after a season's storage, than will occur during the entire operating season.

Rust is found on iron or steel after exposure to moisture in the presence of air and to remove it from any surface that is to be polished, some of the iron or steel has to be removed. Various oils and lubricating materials may be used for rust prevention, but unfortunately most farm equipment receives no treatment of any kind.

Time spent in cleaning up farm machinery and applying an effective rust preventative is far from wasted. Hours of irritating work may be saved when equipment is used again in the spring.

QUIT PLEASE
Scientists have known that blood spot can be caused when hens jump off high roosts or give themselves a severe jolt. Until recently they didn't know that loud noises also cause blood spots.

Professor Stadman, Washington State College, noticed that during the time when he was remodeling a laying house, the number of blood spotted eggs increased. He further tested this idea by recording different noises such as engines, guns etc. sure enough hens subjected to his dislocating loud more spotty eggs than undisturbed hens. Further tests are being made to find out more information about effects of noise on hens.

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS

NOVEMBER THOUGHTS
November!
Gray skies; gray waters. A cold high wind driving flocks of small birds from bush to bush, tearing the last clinging leaves from the trees — a wind, lamenting, always lamenting —

Or so it seems to us these days filled with violence, tragedy, with disaster — So has Man always injected his own emotions into Nature.

"Paradise Lost" Milton sings: "Earth felt the wound; and Nature from her seat Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe That all was lost."

Yet Nature simply follows its own rules: in the movement of the heavenly bodies, the changing seasons — a mine explosion!

Heart-breaking as is the calamity that has befallen our near neighbors in Nova Scotia, at least for us who have lost no one, or have watched for no one in dreadful suspense at the pit-heads, it doesn't bring the blight to the spirit carried by the news from the East and the Middle East. It is easier to accept disaster brought on by forces of Nature, than by the warring of Man against Man.

Man is a fantastic creature! He is capable of the utmost evil, yet such unlimited capacities for good lie within him. Exceptional humankind, in laboratories, working among the maimed and the mangled, selfless and loving. But such a crisis as that at Springhill reveals the nobility in ordinary folks.

"There were more volunteers than we called for," said one mine official. Yet going down into the depths of the mine was a very dangerous and trying ordeal. And there was no assurance that the men found there would be alive.

Of the generosity and kindness that is coming and will come to the aid of the sufferers at Springhill and their families, there is no need to speak. Whatever can be done at such a time, will be done in such instances.

Some day — if we survive, the forces of nature will be completely conquered — it seems. There will be no mine explosion — and of course, it will probably not be necessary at all for men to work underground in coal mines. Atomic power will take care of our heating problems, as well as of so many now hazardous occupations. Can we be so sure that the splendid qualities in man will some day function at all times?

As I write another day has come. The sun is shining on my paper. The sky is azure velvet. The water is an innocent rippling blue with rose tones. And the wind is not lamenting — just murmuring gently. At Springhill more men have been brought up alive. Perhaps this is all a happy omen!

Nfld. Fishermen Vote To Abandon Quintal Measure

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Newfoundland fishermen have voted to adopt the pound as a measure of fish and discard the historic quintal.

The pound is favored because it is in general use in Canada. The quintal, used for hundreds of years to measure Newfoundland codfish, is considered cumbersome. A quintal equals 112 pounds. The fourth annual convention of the Newfoundland Federation of Fishermen passed a resolution Saturday calling for the government and the trade to adopt the pound in the purchase and sale of saltbunk and fresh fish, and for a drive to have dry salt fish measured by the pound.

The representatives of Newfoundland's 10,000 fishermen also passed resolutions to petition the federal government for a clearer definition of the boundaries and territorial waters of Newfoundland; to enforce the quality of salt supplied to fishermen; for arrangements to give fishermen in all parts of the province similar returns.

They also passed a resolution disapproving of a report of provincial Fisheries Minister John T.

Mine Inquiry Is Scheduled

MONTREAL (CP)—The federal mines department will begin an inquiry soon into the Springhill, N.S., mine disaster, Lionel A. Forsyth of Montreal said Monday.

Mr. Forsyth is president of the Dominion Steel and Coal Co., which operates the No. 4 colliery of the Cumberland Coal Co. at Springhill, where an explosion trapped 113 miners underground last Thursday. Death toll has been set at 26.

"We will give authorities all the help we can in order to determine the cause of the blast, and prevent the recurrence of such a disaster," he said.

The Dosco president praised the work of volunteers at the mine site, where rescue workers toiled for four days to bring 88 of the trapped miners out alive.

"Words can't do justice to the vital work done by volunteers," said Mr. Forsyth. "It was a magnificent demonstration of fortitude."

Cheeseman's speech in the Nov. 2 Evening Telegram. The report was called "strictly misleading and not in agreement with the text of the address."
