America's Newport.

Newport is unquestionably the "queen of the American watering places"—the chief summer resort of wealth and fashion. Yet the first inpression that it makes upon the tourists is very disappointing. One enters a dingy old colonial town, with narrow streets and old-fashioned wooden houses—a characteristic seaport of a hundred years ago.

A short walk takes one into the new and fashionable part of the town—the famous Bellevue avenue, with its elegant shops, rivaling in richness of contents those of New York or Paris, and further on, its large and handsome summer villas, each in its spacious and well-kept grounds.

In this avenue during the fashionable hours, from five to seven, will be seen a stream of elegant carriages, luddas, dog-carts, drags and four-in-hand, rally-ho coaches, not to be surpassed in Hyde Park or the Bois de Boulogne.

It is the ambition of the American millionaire to have his villa at Newport, and many of the foreign ambassadors and wealthy West Indians and Southerners make it their summer homes.

Hotel life is quite subordinate to that of the "cottages," or "mansions," as many of them ought rather to be called.

Most of these are of that peculiar American architecture which consists largely of piazzas, bay windows, dormers, pinnacles, and fretwork; though many of them are substantial brick or stone structures, and some are elegant Eastlake and Queen Anne designs. They are scattered along the picturesque and rugged shores, and on either side of the avenues, often without dividing fences, and surrounded by turfy lawns, brilliant with flowers and foliage plants. By a happy law or prescriptive right, there is a path always left open for foot passengers along the cliffs between the villa grounds and the sea. It is like a walk for miles through a continuous park, and commands a most magnificent view—on the one side the ocean surges rolling in against the tempest-worn crags, on the other the broad lawns, trim parterres, and handsome houses on the land. At intervals, as at the "Forty Steps," one may descend to the shore, and at low tide wander beneath the cliffs at the water's edge.

The bathing beach is at some distance from the town, and here at the fashionable hour assembles a great concourse of carriages, whose occupants come more we suspect, to see and to be seen than to bathe. The ladies' toilets are very elegant and defy male description, and the coachmen and footmen are magnificent specimens of gentlemen, in the finest of brocade, and the shiniest of hats and whitest of neckties. There is a splendid surf, which buffets one about most unceremoniously, and extorts screams half of terror and half of delight from the merry bathers. There is something wonderfully exhilarating in the impact of the breakers on the person, and in the gay excitement of the scene.

On Elopements.

Elopements have been particularly active in Canada during the past few months, consequently the following remarks are offered on the subject:—

It is not an injury to society for two unmarried people to elope, for society is entitled to early information as to who are the fools within its borders, and an elopement is proof positive regarding at least two people.

A married woman may be desperately tired of a husband who is too healthy to meet her views by dying early; nevertheless, she should scrupulously avoid eloping with a man younger than herself, for a young man who will steal one married woman will not hesitate to steal another when opportunity allows.

A man who elopes with a married woman for the sake of the portable property which the lady thinks she can remove from her husband's possession should insist upon having a schedule of the property in advance. Terrible mistakes have occurred through neglect of this rule, for a married woman whose mind is full of a man who is not her husband is not as particular as she should be about material affairs, so some men who have imagined themselves eloping with a large package of government bonds have found the supposed treasure to be gorgeously executed certificates of non-dividend paying oil stocks.

If a married man wants to elope with an unmarried woman he should be careful to select one who has no brothers, for as such a man is always a coward common sense should teach him to have some regard for his peace of mind.

A girl who elopes with a married man should select one who has no children, for under the law her lover will be responsible for the support of his children while they remain minors, and what chance is there for her to gratify the expensive desires peculiar to her class if the man on whom she is dependent must support a ready-made family before she can legally demand money from him?

We commend these few practical hints to the increasing number of people who have taste for irregular partnerships.

Compliance with them will save them as well as the community from such deplorable annoyance.

French Views of English Move- ments.

The press comments severely upon the British occupying the Suez Canal. The "Steele" describes the seizure of the canal as the act of a thief. The "Telegraph" urges the Canal Company to sue England for damages. Gambetta's paper declared that if the policy of Gambetta had been followed, the country would have been spared the humiliation of seeing the Canal made a branch of St.
George's Channel. The "Temps" believes that England will permanently remain mistress of the canal, but is inclined to acquiesce in such a settlement as will be advantageous to European interests. The "Journal Des Debats" says as the Chambers declined to allow France to co-operate with England, we have no right to reproach England with exclusiveness.

"La France" devotes a leader to pointing out that England's action with regard to the Suez Canal may one day be used against her by the United States in support of their claims to exclusive control of the Panama Canal.

The Winnipeg Boom.

There is quite a demand for mechanics and laborers in Winnipeg at present.
Farmers want men to help with the harvest, but it is almost an impossibility to get them. As high as $45 per month and board is being paid to farm hands.
In the city good wages are paid to any one who can lay any claim to being any sort of a mechanic. The clerks, however, are crowded to excess, and young men destitute of means and unskilled in trade will do well to reach slowly a determination to move West.

War on Sparrows.

The sparrow war that has been so long threatened, says the Witness, lowers over us again. For all the sparrows are so common no one seems to be able to assert anything certainly concerning them. Some say they eat insects, some that they do not.
It is generally agreed that the offensive caterpillars that infested the shade trees of American cities and drove humanity from the parks, have disappeared since the sparrows came. Some say they devour the grain, but one would think if they did much of that we should soon know it, as they are not given to secrecy in their operations. Some say they drive out other birds, others deny this. Some think their pretty juddering and fighting all winter is full recompense for all we have to suffer in the way of dirtied gutters, while others do not. Judging from what we can observe of the people of Montreal as much attached to their sparrows as the Siamese to their white elephants. At all events the human enemies and champions of the sparrows are likely to fight over them something in sparrow fashion. Sentence of death should not pass until there is undeniable conviction of evil doing.

Walt Whitman on the Moon.

No one ever gets tired of the moon.
Goddess that she is by dower of her eternal beauty, she is a true woman by her act—knows the charm of being seldom seen, of coming by surprise and staying but a little while, never wears the same dress two nights running, nor all night the same way, commends herself to the matter-of-fact people by her usefulness, and makes her usefulness adored by poets, artists, and all lovers in all lands; lends herself to every symbolism and to every emblem; is Dana's bow and Teucrian mirror and Mary's throne; is a sickle, a scarf, an eyebrow, his face or her face, as looked at by her or him; is the madman's hell, the poet's heaven, the baby's toy, the philosopher's study; and while her admirers follow her footsteps and hang on her lovely looks, she knows how to keep her woman's secret—her other side unguessed and unguessable.

Mammoth Remains.

Dr. Harkness, of the Academy of Science of San Francisco, has lately made some interesting discoveries in the city of Carson in Nevada. In excavating for the foundation of a new State prison a ledge of sandstone was struck, in which were found some mammoth remains of surprising portions, as may be judged from the assertion that there are among other things footprints, which are magnificent fac similes of the human foot and which measures twenty-two inches in length. Casts of the bones are to be taken, and slabs of the sandstone with the footprints to be carefully preserved. The region seems too remote to admit of the explanation that has been maliciously suggested that some of the Chicago women have been down there barefoot.

Matrimonial.

A society, styling itself the "Matrimonial Aid Society," ostensibly to induce young men to join the benedict ranks, has recently been formed in Toronto. In speaking of the society, the Brockville Recorder says:— "Its proprietors advertise that they will give each of its members $1,000 to $5,000 in the event of their taking a partner for life. It costs $6 to join the institution and $4 per year for fees. It is run on the mutual plan and claims to have 610 members in Toronto."
