SALLY DOWS An After-War Romance OF THE SOUTH BY BRET HARTE

Although this was exactly what Courtland was thinking it pleased him to answer in a distrust sort of fashion:

"I think I won't go in," continued Champney as they neared the house again. "I suppose you'll have something more to say to Miss Dows. If there's anything else you want of me come to the office. But she'll know. And—er—if you're—er—staying long in this part of the country ride over and look me up—don't you know, and have a smoke and a julep; I have a boy who knows how to mix them and I've some old brandy sent me from the other side. Good-by."

More awkward in his kindness than in his simple business confidences, but apparently equally earnest in both he shook Courtland's hand and walked away.

Courtland turned towards the house. He had seen the farm and its improvements; he had found some of his own ideas practically discounted; clearly there was nothing left for him to do but to thank his hostess and take his leave.

But when he felt for more uneasy than when he had arrived; and there was a singular sense of incompleteness in his visit that he could not entirely account for.

His conversation with Champney had complicated—he knew not why—his previous theories of Miss Dows, and although he was half conscious that this had nothing to do with the business that brought him there, he tried to think that it had.

If Miss Sally was really—a—a—distracting element to contagious masculinity, it was something to be considered in a matter of business of which she would take a managerial part.

It was true that Champney had said that she was "not that sort of a girl," but this was the testimony of one who was clearly under her influence. He entered the house through the open French window. The parlor was deserted. He walked through the front hall and porch; no one was there. He lingered a few moments, a slight chagrin beginning to mingle with his un-business—she might have been on the look-out for him—or Sophy must have seen him returning. He would ring for Sophy and leave his thanks and regrets for her mistress. He looked for a bell, touched it, but on being confronted with Sophy, changed his mind and asked to see Miss Dows.

In the interval between her departure and the appearance of Miss Sally he resolved to do the very thing which he had dismissed from his thought but an hour before as ill-timed and doubtful. He had the photograph and letter in his pocket; he would make them his excuse for personally taking leave of her.

She entered with her fair eyebrows lifted in a pretty surprise. "I declare to goodness, I thought you'd ridden over to the red barn and gone home from there. I got through my work on the vines earlier than I thought—one of Judge Garret's nephews dropped in in time to help me with the last row. You needn't have troubled yourself to send up for me for mere company manners, but Sophy says you looked sort of 'anxious and particular' when you asked for me—so I suppose you want to see me for something."

Mentally objugating Sophy, and with an unpleasant impression in his mind of the unknown neighbor who had been helping Miss Sally in his place, he nevertheless tried to collect himself gallantly.

"I don't know what my expression conveyed to Sophy," he said, with a smile, "but I trust that what I have to tell you may be interesting enough to make you forget my second intrusion." He paused, and, still smiling, continued: "For more than three years, Miss Dows, you have more or less occupied my thoughts; and, although we have actually met to-day only for the first time, I have during that time carried your image with me constantly. Even this meeting, which was only the result of an accident, I had been seeking for three years. I find you here under your own peaceful vine and fig tree, and yet three years ago you came to me out of the thunder cloud of battle."

"My good gracious!" said Miss Sally. She had been clasping her knee with her linked fingers, and now leaned backward with affected consternation, but an expression of intense amusement in her bright eyes. Courtland saw the mistake of his tone, but it was too late to change it now. He handed her the locket and the letter, and briefly, and perhaps a little more seriously, recounted the incident that had put him in possession of them. But he entirely suppressed the more dramatic and ghastly details and his own superstitious and strange prepossession towards her.

Miss Sally took the articles without a tremor or the least deepening or paling of the delicate faint suffusion of her cheek. When she had glanced over the letter, which appeared to be brief, she said, with smiling, half pitying tranquillity: "Yes—it was that poor Chet Brooks. Sure! I heard that he was killed at Snake river. It was just like him to rush in and get killed at the first pop! And all for nothing, too, pure foolishness!"

A Good Excuse.—Squire Pillham—"Hillo, deacon! What air you doin' in my henhouse?" Deacon Pullet—"For de Lord, sah, a cue of necessity, sah. Ye see, sah, my wife an' berry sick, sah, an' de doctah, sah, prescribed poached aigs, an' I'm jes' poachin' a few aigs, sah."

Dr. J. Wier, Dorchester, says: "Have prescribed Putnam's Emulsion with good results in pulmonary, scrofulous and wasting diseases. Especially applicable to children being so easily taken."

The poet who wrote of the "frowning precipice" had evidently been studying the "brow of the hill."

In reply to oft repeated questions, it may be well to state, Scott's Emulsion acts as a food as well as a medicine, building up the wasted tissues and restoring perfect health after wasting fever.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS Mrs. Winsloe's Soothing Syrup has been used by millions of mothers for their children while cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best-known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winsloe's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. 1yr

HOME NEWS FROM ABOARD.—We take the following from the St. John Gazette:—One hundred and seventeen years ago a man and his wife travelled from P. E. Island to Truro. After reaching Truro, sleeping on the water they walked to Truro, sleeping one night in the woods. They also carried their little boy two years of age. There being no Presbyterian minister in P. E. Island at the time, they wished to hear a sermon and receive baptism for their child at the hands of Daniel Cook, who had just arrived in Truro from Scotland.

USE SKODA'S DISCOVERY, the great blood and nerve remedy.

PAY YOUR BILLS.—You will be better able to do it, if instead of allowing your system to run down to the breaking point, you take a timely course of Haker's Liver Pills and Tonic. And then the Doctor's bill will not be on the list of those to be paid.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria. Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children. Da. G. C. Osmond, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Castoria. Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me. H. A. Archer, M. D., 111 Co. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

JOHN NEWSON. Charlottetown, Feb. 25, 1892.

AWFUL HEADACHES.

2 YEARS OF SUFFERING. LIFE A TORTURE.

Kendrick Outwater, of Tiverton, N. S., says: For several years I suffered from severe attacks of biliousness, which came on periodically, about every ten days. I had awful headaches, and the smell of anything cooking turned me sick. I became weak and nervous, and had no ambition or strength to work. I passed many sleepless nights, and for days could not retain food on my stomach. I suffered a constant torture to me. I became so weak that my friends were up all hopes of my recovery. My brother brought me a bottle of

HAWKER'S NERVE AND STOMACH TONIC, and a box of HAWKER'S LIVER PILLS.

I had not taken them long before I commenced to improve and in a short time I was completely cured. I grew strong and vigorous, my appetite returned, I slept well and gained weight. I have not suffered from biliousness since, now 2 years, and as an average man's health is any man could wish to be. I firmly believe that

HAWKER'S NERVE AND STOMACH TONIC AND LIVER PILLS Saved My Life.

I hereby certify the above statement is correct in every particular.

The Telephone Company OF P. E. ISLAND.

PARTIES using the Telephone would find talking much more satisfactory if they would observe the following rules:—

1st. Speak with the mouth about four inches from the transmitter. 2nd. Speak in a moderate tone of voice, not too loud, and distinctly.

3rd. Place the telephone so as to cover the ear, just as if you wished to shut out all other sounds. Do not press too hard on the ear.

It is possible to talk and be heard when standing back two or three feet from the transmitter if you speak loud enough, but it is not a pleasant mode of conversation, is entirely unnecessary, and is a useless waste of wind and lungs, besides being very annoying to all within range of your voice.

ROB ANGUS, Manager.

MRS. JENNIE CALPATRIC. Suffered Seven Years with Constipation, Bowels Bloated, Feet and Ankles Swollen, Distress in Her Stomach.

Castoria. For 7 years I suffered every thing but death from my bowels. I was so bloated, my feet and ankles were swollen. The distress in my stomach after eating was terrible. Two doctors gave me up to die. This was my condition when I commenced to take Groder's Botanic Dyspepsia Syrup and today I am well; my bowels are regular, my feet and ankles are all the world's good qualities of your medicine. I would most gladly do it, as it has brought health and happiness to me. Yours most sincerely, Mrs. Jennie Calpatric.

Oct. 12, 1892. I have been suffering from the above named complaint for seven years. I have tried all the remedies I could get, but the only one that has done me any good is Groder's Dyspepsia Cure. I feel like a new man.
