The Great Race.

"OUR BOY" WINS.

TIME, 22 MINUTES, 5 SECONDS.

One Hundred Thousand People Wild with Enthusiasm.

(Special Cablegrams to the Toronto Mail.)

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, May 5. 2.45, p. m.

—After the men struck water the race was never in doubt, for Hanlan swept away while Hawdon splashed considerably. The latter soon settled down and put in some heavy work, striking as high as 43, while his opponent was swinging along, apparently without exertion, at 35. Hanlan assumed half length of lead in the first four hundred yards. When the Grindstone Quay was reached, Hanlan had drawn clear amid tremendous cheering from the bank. This nettled Hawdon, and he dashed into his work with even greater ferocity, throwing the water like angry surf behind his shell. Everyone expected to see Hanlan get excited and quicken up, but he just seemed to watch his man like a cat, and responded by adding a little strength to his stroke, which seemed to lengthen but not quicken it. At Waterson Works, the Canadian had two lengths of lead and seemed to be going with the greatest ease, while his opponent was showing signs of having had enough of the race. Their stroke was caught—Hanlan, 32; Hawdon, 38. Entering the narrows, between Armstrong's Wharf and the Meadows, Hanlan put on a spurt—his effort being greeted with applause such as never before echoed from the Tyne. Without effort he quickened to 35, his stroke being gigantic. In 200 yards he swept ahead four lengths. Hawdon pursued gamely, but hopelessly, for, from this on, the Canadian amused himself. At the mouth of the Derwent he rested for a moment on his oars to view the scene, and a yell arose from the crowd. Hawdon looked around and made one last effort, but Hanlan resumed and paddled home, with six lengths to good—in 22 minutes, 5 seconds, slow time, but could have been much faster. Weather fine and a fifty thousand crowd.

SECOND DESPATCH.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, May 5.—The morning broke bright but with a strong westerly breeze prevailing, which made the water of the Tyne in unsheltered places very lumpy. The attendance was simply enormous, the lowest estimate placing the crowds who lined the banks and thronged the bridges at a hundred thousand. All the forenoon the streets were densely crowded with visitors from the surrounding towns. The miners in the neighborhood of Delaval, Elswick, Benwell and Scottwood turning out to a man to see their favorite

"WHIP THE YANKEE."

But the whipping did not come off and Hawdon is now a demolished idol. They believed him without a peer with the oars and had fondly dreamed that the day was not far distant when Elliott, the champion, would have fallen before his prowess. But they have been disappointed and Englishmen begin to fear that for the second time the championship will go from them. Twelve steamers most of them small, accompanied the race.

THE BETTING COMMENCED AT 3 TO 1, being occasionally laid on Hanlan. At the start the price was five to two on him, with few takers. John Bright, who has accompanied Hanlan in his practices and through whom the match was originally made, showed the Canadian over the course from the bows of an eight oared cutter. James Percy doing the same for Hawdon. Dr. Luke Armstrong, referee, took his place on board the official steamer precisely at 1.15, but the scullers did not show until a quarter of an hour later. Hanlan with, I am told, his usual never failing luck

WON THE CHOICE OF SIDES

and took the northern station, gaining a slight shelter from the wind for his first half mile. Both men looked in the very

PERFECTION OF CONDITION

when they took their places at the starting boats. Hanlan stripped to the buff and was bareheaded. Hanlan wore a cardigan band round his head, and a blue sleeveless guernsey. They started by mutual consent at 1.40 p.m. Hawdon getting the first cut at the water; his boat getting nearly half a length in front. Hanlan evidently determined at the outset to do or die, dashed away at

A TERRIFIC STROKE

of forty to the minute. Hawdon rowed a light clipping catch of forty-two to the minute. Hanlan, who literally twice as fast as his antagonist, was level at the sixth stroke, and when they had gone fifty yards was leading half a length. It was

A WONDERFUL PIECE OF SCULLING,

and struck the spectators with amazement. The Canadian, with a beautiful, long, clean, measured sweep, then rowed completely away from the Tyne sculler, and led by three lengths when they had gone a quarter of a mile. Hawdon

PULLED WITH ALL HIS FORCE,

and put in the strokes with wonderful rapidity, but they did not seem to tell overmuch on his rival's lead. Hanlan now eased his stroke quite to 30, and afterwards made himself quite comfortable. He did not increase his advantage, but looking round, and waiting until his pursuer almost got level with his row-locks, when he would put in a fast half dozen, and drew away again.

TEN TO ONE

was laid on Hanlan when they had rowed half a mile, and these odds remained on offer. The time to Redlength Bridge, a trifle over half a mile on the journey, was three minutes and forty seconds. To the mile off Clark's Foundry, where the water was very rough, 9 minutes and some seconds; and to the two mile point, at Armstrong's platform, 17 minutes and 50 seconds.

HANLAN SIMPLY PLAYED WITH HIS MAN all this distance, and just after passing the two-mile point, stopped until Hawdon was on a level, then commenced laughing and shot away. One mile from the finish Hanlan stopped and actually BALED THE WATER OUT OF HIS BOAT with a sponge, and then dashed ahead again. He led by eight lengths at Scottswood Haughs, and won by five boat lengths in 32 minutes 52 seconds. Hanlan had the race safely won after the first quarter of a mile, although Hawdon sculled in excellent form and pulled right through to the finish, for the first time realizing the length and hardness of a stern chase. Hanlan was loudly cheered all the way as he went and received an extraordinary reception on his return to Newcastle. Evens were offered that Hanlan beats the English Champion in the forthcoming match; and an offer was made to take 300 pounds to 200 pounds that no one names the winner of that match.

VERY LATEST.

NEWCASTLE, May 5, 11 p. m.—Edward Hanlan was matched definitely to row William Elliot, of Blyth, for Championship, on the 16th June next. A proposition was made on behalf of a London gentleman to match Wallace Ross against Hanlan, the winner to row for the championship, but Ross, who was present, finally withdrew from the match, expressing a desire not to stand between his brother Canadian and the championship. When Hanlan had defeated Elliott, as he felt assured he would do, he (Ross) thought it would be time enough to talk about a match between two Canadians on English water.

Ross's friends here have implicit confidence in his rowing powers, and think he would make an excellent fight against Hanlan, an opinion held before to day's contest, and not, strange to say, weakened by the exhibition the American champion made of Hawdon.

HANLAN'S RECORD.

Edward Hanlan was born in Toronto in 1855. His record is briefly as follows:—

1873—Won amateur championship race of Toronto Bay, defeating Williams and McKay.

1874—Defeated Loudon, of Toronto, at Hamilton, Ont., in a race for the championship of Burlington Bay.

Same year—In a match race between Hanlan and Loudon, Hanlan won.

1875—Won the Governor General's medal in a two-mile race on Toronto Bay, defeating Loudon and Douglass.
