The New Current Pump.
Agricultural and mining men are interested in a mechanical device known as the "current pump," which has been invented and successfully operated in Montana. This device is the invention of Louis E. Miller of Montana and has been designed to supply water along streams whose banks rise so abruptly and to such heights as to render impracticable all efforts hitherto made to use the water for irrigation or for placer mining. It is simple and compact and can be easily carried from place to place. It requires no preparatory construction work in the way of anchorage, and it needs no power to operate it other than the force of the current of the river in which it is placed. Placed in a stream of water and depending alone upon the current of the stream for power, it will pump 1,000 gallons of water an hour in a five mile current—the quantity of water increasing as the current increases—and will raise this amount of water to an elevation varying from 75 to 100 feet, in proportion to the rapidity of the current. It is asserted by those familiar with the lands in Montana, Idaho and other northwestern states lying along such rivers as the Missouri, Snake and Columbia, that they are almost without exception rich in placer gold and would yield immense profits could they be worked at a moderate expense. Owing to the nature of the banks, however, it has been impossible to work these lands without involving such enormous expenditures in the construction of ditches, flumes and reservoirs as to absorb all the profits resulting from mining. The same truth holds in regard to irrigation. Now, with this simple but effective device, it is asserted that placer grounds may be operated and fertile agricultural lands cultivated at a minimum expense. —Chicago Record.

She Married and Then Rode Away.

A young man, the accepted lover of a buxom maiden, after securing the necessary papers, was united in marriage last Sunday to his adored. The ceremony over, the bride of 16 locked herself up in her bedchamber. The groom could not fathom this proceeding and made strenuous efforts to get at the cause of the trouble through the key-hole of the door, but to no avail. Next morning the wife applied to her spouse for the use of his caysse, and also asked for a little money. Both requests were granted by the loving husband, and he has not seen his wife since.
The story is current that this fair maiden has an unkind father whose treatment of her became unbearable, and to get beyond his jurisdiction she planned the marriage. The father gave her away on the marriage day, thereby relinquishing all control over her future actions, and as soon as the wedding was over the fair maiden, not caring a straw for her husband, left for parts unknown. It is stated that the young wife rode to North Yakima on horseback, fording swollen streams and overcoming all obstacles on the way. When it is considered that the distance is over 100 miles and the Columbia had to be crossed, the bravery of the maiden will be fully appreciated. The mother of the girl is said to reside in North Yakima and will shelter her daughter. —Walla Walla Statesman.
