Extra finished, 150.00; 10) F to C, 175.00.

To which will be added the Colonial style only. This beautiful Musical Instrument, the Mellodeon is now as well known, that we deem it unnecessary to give a lengthy description of it. We will only state that it is played upon the same as the Piano Forte, the key-board, being precisely similar. Any one who plays upon the Piano, will be able to perform upon the Mellodeon with ease and confidence. There are three points attended to; one of those, that to the right, is used to apply the bellows with wind, and the other two are for the purpose of raising the latter, a most beautiful crescendo and diminuendo may be produced.

We particularly invite attention to the newly improved "MODEL MELLODEONS" as we think they will be found to be superior in many respects to any other. There is no elaborate mechanism, and besides their paying attention, among other things, to the following points, viz: Their superior quality of tone—Their great power of tone—Their perfect equality of tone. 4th—Their power and ease action. 5th—Their beautiful style of workmanship. 6th—Their excellent and durable construction. 7th—Their cheapness. 8th—Their elegant appearance. 9th—Their great facilities in the manufacture of those instruments. We, MASON & HAMLIN, have probably had more actual practical experience in the business than any other man, having been constantly engaged more than six years past in the trade of every superior Melodeon and mechanical instruments of the United States. We have a large stock of all the best of mechanics in the different departments of manufacture, and having worked at this business for many of the most eminent makers, from Patents and the construction of the instruments. We may say that our first great principle, that every instrument we offer to the public, is made to order, and each one, in order leaving the instrument, and a close examination from both of the partners; and we are allowed to go forth, in which the slightest defect, either in the case, or in the instrument, cannot be detected. By adhering strictly to this principle, they tend to secure the confidence and patronage of the public.

Every instrument is carefully packed in a neat and secure box, and fully warranted. The following opening is made in the "Model Melodeons" from distinguished musicians, we select for publication: [From Lowell Mason] "After having carefully examined the Melodeons of Messrs. Mason & Hamlin, I am enabled to say, that in my opinion, they are decidedly superior to any others with which I am acquainted."

LOWELL MASON, [From William B. Drabury] Messrs. MASON & HAMLIN,

As the heart and the basis of your commerce, the manufacture of Melodeons, feeling assured that you would be able from your practical and scientific acquirements, to make such improvements in these instruments. Having now had an opportunity of examining the Melodeons of Messrs. Mason & Hamlin, we are very much disappointed in the result. You are certainly producing Melodeons, which, in all desirable characteristics, are far superior to any others. As an Instrument possessing, as you may perceive, facilities for playing on so many locations, it is well adapted to the parlor and the church, and I am satisfied that you can supply the market with the superior merit, and at the same time, your only trouble will be to apply the demand.

WILLIAM B. DRABURY, [Extract from an Editorial Notice in the "New York Annual Review" of May 11th, 1824]

Having seen the Melodeons of Messrs. Mason & Hamlin, and the careful and extensive preparation of the different partners, as well as the wants of the public, we are satisfied that you are able to supply the market with the superior merit, and at the same time, your only trouble will be to apply the demand.
