Acadia College.

HER HISTORY AND OUTLOOK—A SERMON BY REV. J. A. FORD.

Rev. J. A. Ford addressed a large congregation in Carleton, N. B., on Sunday evening, on "Acadia College, her history and outlook." The speaker based his discourse on the words of psalmist:
"Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain to build it." After explaining the original application of the text and its broad spiritual meaning, he applied it specially to the subject in hand. The psalm teaches that human enterprises secure the largest and truest success only when crowned with the divine blessing; and the lesson is just as true today as when it was taught by the royal bard of Israel. After describing the causes which led to the founding of Acadia, the faith and courage of the "fathers" in undertaking such a work, the self-sacrifice of the people in supporting it, and some of the historic incidents connected with it, the speaker said that the great and growing interests of home and foreign missions were kept constantly before the people, and properly so, but the claims of Christian education were too often regarded as secondary or entirely ignored. Christian education and Christian missions are twin sisters. They are mutually dependent, and neither can successfully accomplish its mission without drawing inspiration and strength from the other. The very birthplace of American missions was the dormitory of a Christian college. It was at Andover that Judson and his friends first dedicated themselves to missionary labor.
It was the president of a Christian college (Dr. Wayland, of Brown's University) who preached that famous sermon on Foreign Missions which did so much to kindle the fire of enthusiasm among American Baptists.
Surely then there should be no antagonism between the two. We do not wish to hear less of missions but more about education. The simple fact is that Acadia College is, under God, at the foundation of our denominational progress in all its departments. She has not only made success possible, but enduring. She has helped our people to a unity, an esprit de corps, which is a recognized factor in permanent progress. During her fifty years of history she has been slowly but steadily tightening her hold upon the sympathies and affections of the people, giving broader scope to the benevolence and creating an intense spirit of oneness. Acadia College is emphatically the daughter of the churches. Higher education in the provinces owes its existence as well as its present hopeful outlook, to colleges founded and equipped by Christian denominations, and these are the colleges that have made most permanent impression upon the intellectual and moral status of the people.
Harvard College, though sadly degenerated in spirit from her original design, was founded by the churches and for years a pensioner on their bounty. Her motto—"Pro Christo et ecclesia"—for Christ and the church, though to-day but an empty phrase, points back to the original design of the founders. Yale, though often an erring child, owes her existence to the churches of old Connecticut. Amherst College was born of the prayers and sanctified with the tears of holy men. And thus it is the spirit of Christianity is ever hospitable to learning. It produces an inquiring laity and demands a thinking ministry.
To the churches, then, Acadia must look for means to enable her to carry on her important and constantly growing interests.
She has a band of devoted men on her teaching staff. She has the largest number of undergraduates of any college in the provinces. Her aim is to properly equip those young men for the highest service. She does not strive to create an "aristocracy of intellect," but an aristocracy of character.
Her purpose is not only to train the mind, but to give strength and symmetry to the life, so that the student may not degenerate into a mere intellectual machine, but become a centre of refining and healthful influence. The training of the mind alone is of doubtful utility, but the training of the man is an employment that angels might covet. . . . Her studies have gained for themselves and their alma mater an enviable reputation both at home and abroad.
They have won distinction both in the American colleges and in the universities across the sea. A son of Acadia enjoyed the honor of being a trusted associate of Prof. Agassiz in his British explorations; a son of Acadia received the degree of Ph. D. from Harvard the second time it was conferred, and the first time upon a Canadian student. A son of Acadia, in a competitive examination, carried off a prize which entitled him to spend three years in a German University. A son of Acadia made the free school laws, both in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, a splendid success. Sons of Acadia have toiled and suffered and died among the benighted millions of India; they have sat in the presidential chairs of colleges, worn the ermine of judges and stood upon the floors of parliament. A college with such a record may confidently press its claim for support upon its constituency. Indeed a college with such a record, a college with one of the foremost educationists in the Dominion as its president should not find it necessary to plead for endowment, but should receive the free will offerings of an appreciative and grateful people without presenting herself in the guise of a needy mendicant. The 43,000 Baptists of the Maritime Provinces should be able to put their college forever beyond the need of urgent appeal for aid. Her coming jubilee should be made a season of unclouded joyousness by a thanks offering that would relieve her from financial embarrassment and give her professors such inspiration and enthusiasm in their God-appointed work that the success of the past would be to the achievements of the future as the morning twilight is to the full orb of sun.
During the last fifty years she has been toiling to reach her present vantage ground.

Heavy Fall in Securities.

CAUSED BY THE TRIPLE ELECTION OF GENERAL BOULANGER.

The recent triple election of General Boulanger has caused a heavy fall in securities on all the bourses in Europe. If, as is supposed, the Emperor William had in view the Boulangerist agitation when he made his recent notable speech, warning the French of the consequences of aggression, it is evident that His Majesty is better informed than those who have thought General Boulanger politically dead. It seems to be the general tendency, however, to exaggerate the significance of the General's successes. It must be borne in mind that all the constituencies he contested were strongholds of reaction. Charente Inférieure in 1885 elected five reactionaries and two Republicans; Somme returned six reactionaries and two Republicans, and Nord is always believed to be Bonapartist, although before General appeared, the Republicans had won a few successes there at by-elections. For the purpose of comparison, Nord is the most important, because General Boulanger had previously been elected there. Against a majority of 97,000 obtained in April, he has secured only 20,000 majority in August. By another such victory he would be rejected. A correspondent who accompanied General Boulanger in Somme gives him credit for consum-mate skill in electioneering. He kissed all the women and babies, distributing, besides bread and butter, tin snuffboxes, and broadcast, delivered telling phrases of no definite meaning with theatrical effect. "He ought to have been an actor," was the very general comment on his proceedings. The immediate result of the revival of Boulanger-ism will be to strengthen M. Floquet's cabinet. All but those who aim at the destruction of the Republic, will close up their ranks and support the existing Government. The Paris Temps says the results of the election in Somme, Charente and Nord are a humiliation to the good sense of the nation, but need not disgust Republicans, as the victory was due solely to reactionary coalition.

soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind. [April 1 '88

She now stands prepared to enter the opening fields of increased usefulness. Last year her halls were crowded with 300 students in all departments. Since then the class and lecture rooms have been enlarged to accommodate the increasing members. There has been advancement all along the line, and if she is to hold her own she must be equipped by her friends so that she may keep pace with the times.
She has no millionaires to endow chairs or establish bursaries; she leans for support upon the benevolence of the Baptist people to whom she has so often appealed and not in vain.

Are we proud of Acadia's past record and present outlook? Then let pride take tangible form in generous donations toward her support. Do we rejoice in view of the spiritual blessings that have fallen upon her? Then let our prayers ascend with stronger faith and deeper fervor, that the fifty years before her may be years of greater success and more abundant spiritual refreshing.
Above all let us not forget that the spirit of the text has to do with men as well as with buildings, with individuals as well as with temples, with the spiritual as well as with the material—the temple is nothing without the altar and sacrifice; the institution is nothing without the presence and approval of God. Similarly those bodies are nothing only as they are the habitation of the soul, and unless God is taken into account, the soul itself is false to its highest design, and life is lived in vain. We are all builders. Life is largely what we make it. Alone and unaided we will make clumsy work of it, but with divine guidance, with the loving co-operation of the Great Architect we can rear such a temple as might entice admiring angels to pause in their flight to brighten our toil with the sunlight smile of heaven. We are rearing a stone into life's structure every day. Let us see to it that each stone is stamped with "Holiness to the Lord," and by and by, when life's temple is completed, with its foundation fast and sure upon the "Rock of Ages," with its form constructed after the divine pattern, its spire will pierce the skies and glow with a radiance imperishable and divine. In the home, in the church, in the college, let Christ have the premier place, and in the end we will not be forced to grieve over wasted years and work performed in vain.
