FEDERATION NEWSLETTER

Aerial View Indicates Record Island Harvest

By J. LINCOLN DEWAR
In conjunction with the Provincial Department of Agriculture the P. E. I. Beef Producers' Association is planning a tour of a number of corn demonstrations. The date Friday, September 16 at 12:30 p.m. beginning at the farm of Sterling MacRae, Greenvale. Included in the tour will be the Experimental Station and L. P. McIsaac's, Mermaid. Those taking part will have an opportunity of observing varieties, buildings and equipment associated with the corn operation.

This is an invitation from the P. E. I. Beef Producers' Association and the P. E. I. Department of Agriculture to spend an afternoon in the corn business. INCREDIBLE

The writer recently had the opportunity of flying over the province and it is putting it mildly to say that the scenery from a vantage of three thousand or four thousand feet in the air is beautiful beyond description. The most striking feature is, of course, the golden harvest fields and one quickly realizes that we have one of the best harvests on record, a big acreage and tremendous yields. In fact reported yields of barley are so high that even the sceptic must start thinking in terms of barley really being an extraordinary product.

Next the Islands great potato acreage marching over the hills in long straight rows and still in excellent growing condition gives promise of a splendid crop. Pasture fields and the mown hay fields together with wood and stream add their variety to make a picture that would persuade even the unprejudiced Islander that here is a nature's paradise.

DAIRY MATTERS
In the absence of detailed information we are perhaps taking a risky venture in commenting on the federal proposal to increase the support price of a butter.

First of all we had the impression that may be incorrect that this change is conditional upon Ontario and Quebec getting their market structure on the same level. This would either mean Ontario putting in a subsidy provisionally or Quebec taking theirs off, a situation which appears to have some of the aspects of a poker game for Messrs. Stewart and Vincent.

In a general way we think there should be some misgivings over the trend on the part of the provinces to get into the stabilization or price support fields. In the long run it is suggested that the best interests of the dairy industry will be served by leaving his area of endeavour strictly to the Federal people and having the provinces use the money which they may have available for other purposes. If the two big dairy provinces Ontario and Quebec start competing in dairy subsidies, then the producers in other provinces may expect some problems.

EXTENSION
Earlier in the week the writer had the opportunity of discussing with the Maritime Forage Conference at Dalry House some matters related to agricultural extension. Without going into details on each subject we are listing possible new programs of extension which might be considered at the present time. Included were matters related to farm safety and now farming might have some of the built in hazards removed.

Building design and construction could also be the subject of some extra advice and assistance as the possibility exists that some buildings being constructed at the moment will very quickly become obsolete. The farmer needs assistance.

AWARDED HONOR
The Canadian Association of Police Chiefs awarded a signal honor on Supt. A.S. McNeil, former officer commanding L division of the RCMP, Charlottetown.

Supt. McNeil who at present is on retirement leave, was made a honorary life member of the association at its recent annual convention in Vancouver. It marks the first time that a member of the RCMP has been so honored.

Supt. McNeil has taken up residence at Brentwood Bay, a suburb of Victoria, B.C.

on machinery and electrical matters, the latter particularly. Farm beautification, landscaping, wind breaks and a general approach to making the entire province an agricultural park holds possibilities.

Much valuable information contained in numerous farm publications if examined by a competent person for items of particular interest and value to our farmers, could be combined into a type of Farm Reader's Digest.

Finally the farm appears to be in need of a Livestock Extension Service operating in conjunction with public veterinarians and AI technicians.

Butter Production
While there may be some distortion in the figures butter production for the week ending September 3 fell to 132,000 pounds as compared with 163,000 for the same period last year. We suspect that this is probably the smallest production for a great many years and this fact should certainly be a cause for concern. We have a market for butter and there is much to be said for catering to it.

NEW BUILDINGS
Adjacent to the highway over which we travel daily between farm and office a number of new farm buildings are being constructed. These include poultry storages, hog barns and dairy barns and in practically every case the roof is of the curved rafter type built up from boards four inches wide. These rafters are then strapped with two by fours and metal roofs then laid. This type of building is becoming very popular and its advantages appear to be the use of readily available lumber of the cheaper kind, boards and two by fours, the absence of any heavy timber keeps down expense, further advantage is the fact that these buildings can be erected rapidly and inexpensively.

agency that would deal with all the different aspects of subsidizing, moving and storing Western grain for feed in the east. However, federal authorities apparently have been contemplating some changes in the interim, changes which add up to less assistance for the feeder. In any event these matters are being watched and will very likely be discussed with Federal people within the next couple of weeks.

FEED ASSISTANCE
Movement and storage assistance on western grain to the East is always a subject of interest. Earlier it was reported that an act had been introduced in the House of Commons and would be coming up for discussion. This Act was to set up an

Former Rustico Resident Has Fascinating Career

A fascinating career in the field of human relations was revealed here yesterday when The Guardian interviewed Rev. Ronald Blaquiere, OMI, formerly of North Rustico and now living and working among British Columbia Indians.

Father Blaquiere, a son of Mr. and Mrs. (Laura Gallant) James C. Blaquiere, received his early education in his home village and later attended high school and later university at Saint Dunstan's, Turning to the religious life he entered the Oblate Seminary at Ottawa and was ordained to the priesthood there in 1954.

After a year spent in Canada's capital he transferred to the west coast of Vancouver Island to work among the Indians with Nootka as his headquarters. While there he lived on a boat for convenience in reaching the various groups along that side of the island. He later moved to the Island's east coast to work among the Indians at Chemainus before going to the Squamish ada's original citizens in other places.

He said it would surprise the average Canadian to know the extent of Indian interest in the field of education and the way the Indians in British Columbia have extended themselves to improve their own lives and conditions, through this medium. Many are preparing for or have already entered the stenographic and nursing fields while others are going on to higher things.

Noting that assimilation presented no real problem, he said all the advances to date have been based on and because of a much greater trust between the Indian and white races created through mutual understanding. Along with many others who have taken a great interest in the Canadian Indians, Father Blaquiere has organized, with the full co-operation of the Department of Indian Affairs, an Indian Affairs Committee devoted to economic and social improvements — "the religious part of it is a purple personal thing of my own" — and it is aimed at ultimately having all Indian affairs on a reserve managed by Indians themselves in truly democratic fashion. This has already been done on the reserve he has just left.

The energetic priest has returned to Eastern Canada to attend, with one other missionary and four Indians, a special seven-months course in community organization and administration at Saint Francis Xavier University at Antigonish. Prior to the start of the course he is visiting his native province to meet old friends and relatives while he stays at North Rustico with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Alyre Gallant. His parents have moved to live out west with him.
