ELLEN'S DIARY

Monday's Work Quickens After Peace Of Sabbath

Sunday on this farm brings us that quiet which comes from having the everyday routine of the work lessened in respect to it. True "the ox and the ass" — the animals, of stall and sty and fold, must be fed and made comfortable. But even these seem to approach their meals with a fitting solemnity... Surely this is only fancy, born of our childhood when the Sunday atmosphere was mostly solemn. Tempting fate indeed then was the young miss who would presume to sew a gown for her doll — even to thread a needle, or take down the scissors from their hook. And woe to her, if forgetful, she chanced to sing a snatch of some everyday song! Her elders were concerned, and above them, when they scolded her, she could clearly catch Heaven's frown.

Sunday's peace and quiet pace however with the day. Not that we are forgetful of Heaven throughout the week days, we farm - folks, who see its miracles daily wrought about us. But there is work to be done. There are mouths to feed, and roofs to keep. So on Monday morning, steps once more quicken. Plans not to be even considered yesterday, are furthered today...

James recalls a memory of a former Minister of the "old Kirk" at the Corner, in the long ago. When he later ministered to a charge on the Mainland, he returned one summer to revisit this, and be the guest - preacher at a Sunday service here. It happened that he was entertained at this house over the weekend. It seems he arose early that Sunday morning to walk down by the millstream, amid surroundings he knew. His words left an indelible imprint on the lad's mind.

"Try as I would not to allow worldly thoughts intrude on my Sabbath" the visitor related at breakfast to the family" old memories would return to mind there — memories of happy Island days."

Sun of this morning, and a gentle wind blowing, promised the housewives the favor of a pleasant washday.

One of the number of sparrows, it pleases Seampie to bark from this or that shrub, to sheltering heights above, came to the edge of the garage - roof, there where Papa Starling comes to chat with us, when we come to spread our wash through the summery days. He wore an impish grin.

"Where are your Starlings now?" he queried.

We remembered Papa Starlings last communnieation - written in intriguing invisible ink with a quill pen.

"It's nice here" he wrote "We have plenty to eat and drink. The weather is similar to that we have up North in the June - time, though with more flowerings. Mama is well. Quite chipper, in fact. I heard her wonder the other day, if the heron would soon be back to the stream! A little wistful, she was, you see. It's a leisurely spot — this, a come-day, go-day sort of place. And there is always something interesting here to see or do. She's away at the moment, but I know she joins me, in sending all there own warmest regards."

"I see here, Ellen" James says, from the old arme hair "that the dairy - farmers made fine showings with their sendings to the factories. Yes, did well! Milking is a chore, but as I say, you always see something for your work Aand like-by will, it would appear" he nods.

And now "Our day is past and over."... And by this, it comes to mind, the March - month is comes.

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.....

Family Party Honors Couple At Murray Hbr.

Kensington Variety Concert Recaptures Old Time Mood

KENSINGTON: A variety concert in the mood of days gone by, was staged before a large and appreciative audience at Kensington Regional High School Tuesday night.

Sponsored by the Band Auxiliary of the Kensington Lions Club Band, it was produced by the Cavendish Resort Association.

Holding special appeal for older and for many younger members of the audience, was "Three Sons of Yesteryear in Pantomime, by Cavendish." While the old time songs were sung by a mixed chorus, a second group acted the themes in charming costumes.

Dances included the Highland Fling by Marilyn Wyand, and the Sailor's Hornpipe, by Sylvia McInnis. Two dialogues Taking the Census" and "Wanted — A Divorce", were staged.

Vocal numbers included The Kensington Trio, Elizabeth Waugh, Astrid Johnson and Myrna Moore, songs by the Cavendish Male Chorus, solos by Billie Andrews, duets by Eddie and Garth Matthews and solos by Jean MacKay.

The "Surfin' Rebels" entertained with music of a more modern style, and Darrell Gallant entertained with piano solos.

A reading by Bert Murrant, had a surprise ending.

Basil MacCoubrey was master of ceremonies, and Mrs. James Murphy, president of the Band Auxiliary, thanked the entertainers and addressed the audience briefly, stating that the aim of the Band auxiliary was to send every child in the band to the music camp at Mt. Allison this summer, and that the auxiliary would be holding events almost every week for a while to help to increase the fund.

Drawings were made on ticket numbers for two prizes, one donated by the Resort Association and one by the Kensington Feed Service. Winners were Hodge Montgomery and Garrit Kiper. The lucky tickets were drawn by Margaret Ruth MacEwen and Malcolm Peppin.

South Lake WI Entertained By Mrs. A. Fraser

A number of articles were turned in for layettes; also several pairs of mittens.

It was decided to start a travelling apron, and to solicit mail - order houses for yard goods remnants.

The program, in charge of Mrs. Kermit Bruce, was a continuation of last months contest "Know our Island" and was won by Mrs. Elmer Fraser, who received a valentine pin cushion as a prize. Lunch was served by the hostess.
