DISASTER AT GREENPORT, L. I. The Tribune states that at Greenport, L. I., distant about 92 miles from New York city, on Friday last, at midnight, a party of six men, five or six in number, took Lieutenant Andrew Harrison from his house and threatened his life at the same time.

CATTLE PLAGUE IN THE UNITED STATES.

Late American papers received are filled with the most alarming reports of the ravages of a fatal disease which lately broke out among the cattle of the Western States, and which bids fair, unless some means is found to check its course, to destroy the live stock of that region.

Albert Parker, a clerk in the Erie Transportation office, underneath, and others, heard a noise and looking consequent upon the robbery, but supposed it to be some of the men who were within miles of their locality.

That no system of medical treatment can be relied on or conveniently applied; that prevention is the only way of destroying any foreign cattle from Texas cattle, which should be kept by themselves in proper enclosures; that the winter trade in Texas cattle can go on without the least danger to native stock; and that in all probability the disease is not infectious.

The job was well put up and as successfully executed. It was evidently not the intention of the robbers to resort to the iron bar if the contents of the bag worked satisfactorily.

The furniture of the room upon which the outrage occurred was very primitive. An old carpet was spread loosely upon the floor, not nearly covering it; six new chairs, plain wood, were scattered about in a plain room.

all matters of trade and commerce her treatment of us has been exceedingly liberal. We have been permitted to regulate our tariff as seems best to us, and when she entered into a commercial treaty with the United States the authorities of this insignificant colony were consulted, and its interests were not neglected.

The editor of the Islander to prove, we suppose, the insincerity of the United States Congress in entering into separate negotiations with P. E. Island, proves pretty conclusively that even the protectionists of the States see it to be their interest to enter into free trade relations with this Colony rather than with the whole of British America.

of an alien commonwealth, living under different institutions and having interests diverse from our own. It was monstrous to suppose that the jugglery of statescraft could convert such genial companions, such kindly disposed neighbors, into deadly enemies seeking to destroy our lives and to ruin our country.
