Textile Firms Call For Help

By DAVE OANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's wool cloth manufacturers Monday described their marketing position as "tough" and called for sharply increased tariffs to protect them from British and Italian imports.

In briefs and testimony given as the tariff board opened a study of the Canadian textile tariff structure, the industry stressed help is needed if this country's industry is to compete with imports from countries having lower production costs.

Spokesmen said they e another threat for their industry looming on the horizon — the availability of Japanese woolens at much lower prices than those of either European or Canadian manufacturers.

BRITISH OPPOSE BOOST

British competitors countered with a brief that any tariff increases would boost consumer prices and seriously shake the confidence in the Canadian market.

The Primary Textiles Institute said the demand for wool products in this country is rising but there is a continued downward drift in the market share obtained by Canadian manufacturers.

"This industry is in serious danger," said H. Roy Crabtree of Montreal, president of the institute, as he opened argument before the board.

"No country can be economically mature without a textile industry to meet the needs of its citizens, he added. The Canadian industry wanted to be assured of a big enough part of the market to protect the jobs of its 150,000 workers.

REVAMP STRUCTURE

The industry called for a revamped tariff structure providing rate and tariffs based on yarding a general increase, elimination of the ceiling on the British age rather than weight. The mere switch to yardage would boost production since the current trend is toward lighter weight materials.

Examples cited by industry representatives who filed samples of Canadian and non-Canadian woollens, indicated the tariff boost proposed by the Primary Textiles Institute would, in practice, range from about 20 per cent to more than 50 per cent over existing rates.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
