

Two Maids.

They were two young maids that wandered away And one wore a silken gown, And ruffles and ribbons and lace so gay.

The other walked, in homespun clad; Her face—it was scarcely fair; No ribbons, ruffles, nor lace she had—

That dainty maiden gathered her lace From the beggar's touch aside; She frowned at the child's small, tearful face;

"Now listen," said she of the yellow hair, "Do you hear the sheep bells ring?"

Then that dainty maid in vex'd despair Said the marsh had wet her feet; But Yellow Hair, with the happiest air,

"The sun's so hot?" on the meadow crest "Cried the maid so daintily bred;

And ever to one the woods were dim, And the troublesome thorns detained, There was mud by the river's crystal rim

When questioned, "What have you seen to-day?" Then the dainty maiden cried, "Thorns, spiders, a marsh: so hot the way!"

And off and off to myself I say, O maid with the haughty grace, You'll go through life in the selfsame way;
