WARTS MAY BE CURED

THE NEW AND SUCCESSFUL PLAN IS TO HYPNOTIZE THEM

And Just Have Them Told to Go Away—Suggestion That Succeeds—Excrescences That Are Unnecessary.

The influence of the mind over the body is a subject which includes within its limits a variety of topics of the most interesting character, both to the physiologist and to the thoughtful lay reader. It is, of course, a bare truism to assert the influence of the mental side of us over the physical side, and it is an equally true remark to assert that the mind in its turn may and does take its temporary color, so to speak, from the state of the body. No better example of the re-action of body upon mind can be found than in the influence which a deranged or disordered liver exerts on the mental life. Everything appears grewsome to the "liver" subject. His surest schemes assume a visionary aspect; his most solid successes are tainted with the leaven of disappointment, and his whole mental being is warped so long as his hepatic arrangements exhibit their incongruous features. It was an appropriate knowledge of such facts which made the ancients derive the term "melancholy" from the words "black bile;" for all human experience teaches that life is the reverse of pleasant to look upon when our thoughts are tinged with biliousness. The phrase "tinged" may be of a more real und literal character, perchance, than we are given to suppose.

MIND AND BODY.

Turning to the other side of the relations between the brain and body, there can be no doubt of the tremendous influence a man's mental concepts exert on his physical mechanism. I should like to add that this influence is much more clearly demonstrated in certain types of minds than in others, and I regard this latter point as of very great importance when people begin to discuss the body and mind question. So many of us are apt to assume that, because certain effects are not produced on ourselves, the statements of our neighbors regarding their experiences are therefore to be utterly discountenanced and rejected. This is just as illogical as if these neighbors insisted that everybody should exhibit their susceptibilities and their peculiarities in this matter of mind influence over body.

Naturally, this topic brings us into the domain of hypnotism, because we find many of the most remarkable instances of mind-influence wrought out (on persons of susceptible temperament) through the "suggestion" of the hypnotist. That which has specially led me to select this subject for remark is the letter of a correspondent who alleges that he has had warts "charmed" off his fingers by an old woman. His affliction is alleged to have been of a highly intractable character. The old lady practitioner touched the warts, mumbled some incantation over them, and from that moment they began to disappear. They finally and have never reappeared. My correspondent supposes I shall laugh at his statement. He himself has been subjected to ridicule when he has stuck to his guns in the matter of crediting the "charm" with a remedial effect. I am very far from indulging in any light sarcasm whatever at my correspondent's statement. On the contrary, I regard his case as illustrating once again the influence of mind (in certain subjects) over the bodily belongings. In this way we may bring within the domain of science that which otherwise is left to be the marvel and wonder of a superstitious and credulous generation.

There seems to be no doubt whatever that warts may be made to disappear by "suggestion," for that which the operator accomplishes is really to be called by the latter term. The "charming" process is the essence of the whole procedure. It impresses on the facile and believing mind the occult (and effective) nature of the cure. Then the mind so impressed acts on the body. Just as a fright, which is a purey mental phase, is followed in some cases by very distinct results on the digestive system, lungs, heart, blood vessels, and the like, producing temporary alterations and derangements of their work, so the "charming" process, by parity of reasoning, produces its effect on the special parts on which the attention is concentrated.

SUGGESTION SUCCEEDS.

That "suggestion" is at the bottom of the whole proceeding seems to me to be clearly proved, not only by the mere circumstances of the case, but by other facts chronicled by those who practise hypnotism. Thus I find Dr. Bonjeanl of Lausanne, telling us that an old lady, a relative of his own, was a wart charmer, and had even operated successfully on the doctor himself. The old lady was wont to bandage the eyes of her patient—this act itself, like the initiatory bandaging of the novice in a mysterious rite, being calculated to bring the esoteric side of the operation well to the front. The patient was carefully instructed not to touch the bandage or the wart while the "charming" process was proceeding. The old lady's daughter then came upon the scene as a kind of deputy priestess of the mystic art, and touched the wart with some object, which, as Dr. Bonjean remarks, could have no curative properties about it at all. The warts then disappeared slowly, and a cure was effected in about three weeks. The doctor noted the proceeding of his old lady friend, and rightly diagnosed the whole affair to be one of "suggestion." He has cured warts by a similar mode of treatment. All he does in reality is to impress the patient firmly and effectively with the suggestion or notion that the warts will die. It is only those of "little faith" with whom wart charming is likely to be unsuccessful.

The records of physiological science contain cases of allied character, but of actually more wonderful nature than the "charming" away of skin growths. Cases are recorded in which all the appearances of a burn have been produced through "suggestion" conveyed during the hypnotic state. Little wonder is it that "miracle cures" are reported as often as they are in these latter days. The wonder to those who know anything of the facility with which impressions can be conveyed to a certain class of minds is that such "cures"—if cures they be—are not multiplied a hundredfold.—Dr. Andrew Wilson in the Illustrated London News.

A Graduate of Toronto University Says

"My children have been treated with Scott's Emulsion from their earliest years. Our physician first recommended it, and now whenever a child takes cold my wife mmediately resorts to this remedy, which always effects a cure."

PECULIAR GROUND FOR DIVORCE.

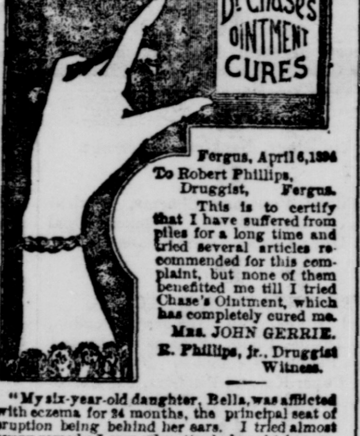
The Original Plea of a Wife Who Has Been Haunted by Her Predecessor.

When Miss Theresa Rippledeane married Mr. Philip Baldwin of Lanark Junction, Ills., he was a widower. Mrs. Baldwin has now brought suit for divorce on the ground that the ghost of Rosamond Baldwin, his first wife, insists on jointly occupying the house and interfering with her matrimonial happiness. Mrs. Baldwin alleges that she was once a cheerful, healthful woman, and that she is now in a nervous, distressed condition of mind, altogether owing to the persecutions of the ghost of Rosamond Baldwin.

When she returned from the wedding tour, Rosamond stood in the doorway dressed in white. She asked her husband who the lady was, and he insisted there was no such lady present. She thought he was jesting, aud on describing her looks the maidservant gave way to emotion and declared it was none other than Mr. Baldwin's first wife. Since that time the ghost has not only continued to inhabit the house, but follows her about with angry, threatening countenance, pinches her, pulls her hair frequently in the presence of her husband and sometimes obliges her to cry out before guests.

To collect further evidence, Mrs. Baldwin, the living, sent for her sister, Anna Belle Rippledeane—a young girl—without telling her that the former Mrs. Baldwin was living in the house. And Anna Belle ran to her sister one day and told her she saw a woman in white in Mrs. Baldwin's room, and Mr. Baldwin was made to go and look under the bed. In her suit for divorce Mrs. Baldwin says she has once heard her husband speaking to some one whom he called Rosamond, begging her for goodness' sake to go away and leave him in peace. It sounded just like a man addressing his wife. Mr. Baldwin on being interviewed refused to speak.

But the matter has been brought to an issue by Mrs. Baldwin's suit for divorce. This will determine whether Mrs. Baldwin is entitled to a divorce, or whether Mr. Baldwin is committing bigamy by having under one roof both the quick and the dead. Mr. Baldwin, it seems, had promised the first Mrs. Baldwin not to marry again. The suit is regarded with extraordinary interest in Illinois, as its settlement will establish a precedent.—New York Evening Sun.



Dr. Chase's OINTMENT CURES

Fergus, April 6, 1896
To Robert Phillips, Druggist, Fergus.
This is to certify that I have suffered from piles for a long time and tried several articles recommended for this complaint, but none of them benefitted me till I tried Chase's Ointment, which has completely cured me.
MRS. JOHN GERRIE.
R. Phillips, jr., Druggist Witness.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. Finally, a week ago, I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the first application showed the curative effect of the Remedy. We have used only one-sixth of the box, but the change is very marked; the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured. (Signed) MAXWELL JOHNSTON.

Chinese Telegraphy.

All the principal cities of China are now connected with one another, and with Pekin, the capital, by telegraphy. It seems, however, that telegraphing in that country is a laborious and an expensive process, and the lines are a charge upon the State treasury, instead of a source of revenue.

As the Chinese have no alphabet—their literary characters, numbering many thousands, being partly ideographic, and partly phonetic—it is impossible to invent telegraph signals that would cover the written language. A cipher system, therefore, had to be adopted. The sender of the message need not bother himself about its meaning. He may telegraph all day without the slightest idea of the information he is sending, for he transmits only numerals.

It is very different with the receiver, however. He has a code dictionary at his elbow, and after each message is received he must translate it, writing each literary character in place of the numeral that stands for it. Only about an eighth of the words in the written language appear in the code, but there are enough of them for all practical purposes.

Delicious Ginger Wafers.

Ginger wafers may be made by creaming a quarter of a pound of butter; add half a pound of brown sugar, one desertspoonful of ground ginger, the grated peel and juice of one lemon. Beat thoroughly, then add half a pound of flour and a pint of golden syrup; beat thoroughly and vigorously. Butter your pan, and spread the mixture in each as thin as possible and yet perfectly even and smooth. Bake in a rather brisk oven. When they are partly done draw the pan to the oven door and roll each wafer into a tiny cylinder. This must be done very expeditiously. Then return them to the oven until they become crisp and brown.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A MESSAGE TO MEN.

Proving that True Honesty and True Philantrophy Still Exist.

If any man who is weak, nervous and debilitated, or who is suffering from any of the various troubles resulting from youthful folly, excesses or overwork, will take heart and write to me, I will send him confidentially and free of charge the plan pursued by which I was completely restored to perfect health and manhood, after years of suffering from Nervous Debility, Loss of Vigor and Organic Weakness.

I have nothing to sell, and therefore want no money, but as I know through my own experience how to sympathize with such sufferers, I am glad to be able to assist any fellow-beings to a cure. I am well aware of the prevalence of quackery, for I myself was deceived and imposed upon until I nearly lost faith in mankind but I rejoice to say that I am now perfectly well and happy once more and am desirous therefore to make this certain means of cure known to all. If you will write to me you can rely upon being cured and the proud satisfaction of having been of great service to one in need will be sufficient reward for my trouble. Absolute secrecy assured.
