Tiny Irish Town Enjoys 48 Bars

By EDDY GILMORE
DINGLE, Ireland (AP)—High but far from dry, on the westernmost tip of Ireland, Dingle is one of the world's great oases for the drinking man.

With a population of less than 1,000 men, women and children, Dingle has 48 licensed bars.

Although it has a long way to go, statistically speaking, Dingle is drying up. Ten years ago Dingle possessed the almost unbelievable alcoholic content of 54 bars to a population of 912.

"It was sad," sighed James Flahive, 38, "but the owners died off and they left no heirs to run the bars."

Dingle even has bars in butcher shops and groceries. And why not? asked dark-eyed Margaret O'Grady. "Suppose you're in the butcher's. You're waiting for your order. Now, what's more natural than stepping over to the other side of the shop and buying a drink?"

POINTS TO LOGIC
With a quick toss of her shortish black hair, she went on: "And suppose you're in the grocer's for a bunch of carrots. You get your carrots and you meet a friend. What could be more logical than the two of you walking over to the other side of the shop—there by the cabbages—and having a drink together?"

Down by the waterfront there is one little stretch of downtown Dingle where there are nine full-fledged bars, huddling together like old friends supporting one another with nothing to separate them but walls.

Jimmy Flahive's bar is down at the far end, out where the wild Atlantic winds pound in to Dingle Bay.

Why does one small town have so many bars?

"Ah," Jimmy Flahive said, "you're looking at Dingle with prejudice, with a one-sided point of view. Be objective, sir. Look at it logically and say to yourself, 'It's London, and New York and Paris what's wrong? They don't have enough bars. Dingle's got the proportion right.'"

A short, broad-shouldered man, with a face as brown as a whisky bottle, joined the discussion, reasoning: "Look at it this way, sir. With a population just under 1,000, and the number of bars just under 50, we have a drinking place for every 20 souls—men, women and children. But as many of the women don't, and as none of the children do, we figure we've got one bar for every eight full-grown drinking men."

FOREIGNERS IN BAR
Up the road from James Flahive's bar, another foreigner was drinking in Nora Kairivreen's bar. He was from Cahircivreen, a mile across Dingle Bay; and for that reason a foreigner in Dingle.

Dingle lays claim to being the most westerly town in Europe and to being closer to North America than any other town in Europe.

"That's not so," said the man from across Dingle Bay "Cahircivreen's closer to America than Dingle."

A tall man with a rain-soaked overcoat and a blue-tinged nose, looked up from his stout at the far end of the bar and said: "You talk like a fool. All but an idiot would know that Dingle is more westerly than Cahircivreen. Look at the bloody map."

As tempers flared I intervened asking: "I saw a sign down the street. It said, 'Irish tourist office.' I'll go ask there. They'll know. Where is it?"

"It's across the road from the hotel," sang out someone.

SOLD DRY GOODS
Across from the hotel was a shop selling dry goods. On the outside it said: "Tourist Information."

As the door opened, a bell chimed somewhere well back in the unlighted shop. Finally a woman appeared.

"Is this the tourist office?"

"It is."

"You have some information on Dingle?"

"We closed on Oct. 15."

"But you're open."

'OFFICE CLOSED'
"The shop's open, but the tourist office is closed," she said.

"Have you any pamphlets about Dingle?"

"They collected them and took them away," she replied, "but if you want to know anything, just write me a letter."

She disappeared into the gloom of the shop.

Outside an Atlantic storm raged—as no doubt the argument still did—down in one of Dingle's 48 licensed bars.

Soviet Union Reveals Plans For Pavilion At Expo 67

OTTAWA (CP)—The Soviet Union has unveiled plans for a $15,000,000 pavilion at the 1967 world fair in Montreal.

Andrew Kneisler, general manager of Expo 67, said the Russian building will be the largest of any put up by a foreign country at the fair. It will be eclipsed only by the Canadian exhibit.

Ivan Shpedko, Russian ambassador to Canada, told a press conference it is "possible that Soviet spacemen might come to the fair in connection with the display of Soviet space technology at the pavilion."

Visitors to the Russian pavilion will be invited to experience "the weightlessness of being in space," an Expo statement said.

Trade Minister Winter, who attended the press conference in the Parliament buildings, also revealed he has been invited by the ambassador to visit Russia.

He said he hopes to do so, possibly before the fair opens.

Russian officials said the total cost of Russian participation in the fair will be more than the $15,000,000 cost of the pavilion.

The pavilion will be about 100 feet from the U.S. display on Ile Notre Dame, one of three main exhibition sites. Its lot comprises 172,000 square feet and the exhibition space inside the building will be about 140,000 square feet.

A two-storey pavilion with a steeply rising roof level, it will house an exhibit hall, a motion picture theatre seating 600 and a restaurant on its first floor.

Designed by Russian architects and constructed mainly by Italian craftsmen, the pavilion is expected to be completed by the end of this year. A groundbreaking ceremony was held Jan. 5.

Centennial Athletic Awards Are Discussed At Meeting

OTTAWA (CP)—As many as 6,000,000 school children may be running, jumping, swimming, skating or biking next year in the biggest centennial program of them all, in terms of numbers.

Provincial and territorial representatives have met here with the Centennial Commission to offer suggestions for the centennial athletic award program.

Arnold Charbonneau, director of the commission's athletic program, said representatives are enthusiastic about the series of achievement tests scaled for students from 6 to 18.

Retarded and handicapped children will be able to take part to a certain extent.

The program will award gold, silver, bronze and red crests depending on how well children do in tests to be supervised by school or other officials.

Spain Bans NATO Flights

MAJRID (AP)—Spain has informed the NATO governments that their military planes no longer could fly over the country en route to and from Gibraltar.

A diplomatic note pointed to "the risks and consequences to Spain of using Gibraltar as a NATO base."

The notes from the foreign office were delivered to envoys of NATO countries in Spain except for Britain, which owns Gibraltar.

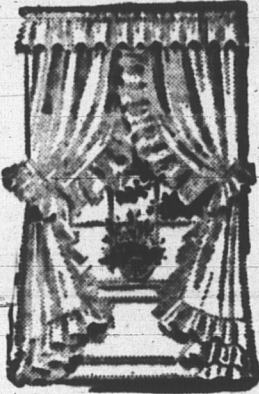

Spain now is engaged in a dispute with Britain over Gibraltar. Spain wants it and has charged that Britain repeatedly violated the treaty under which it holds the Rock.

Spain has long fretted over Britain's reported classification of Gibraltar, on Spain's south coast, as a NATO base. Foreign Minister Fernando Maria Castiella in an outline of the Spanish claims said: "Gibraltar cannot be regarded as a base of NATO, and let that be said with all the consequences this declaration implies."

FORCELANDS SAFELY
PITTSBURGH (AP)—A Canadian flying in a small plane with his wife and two sons made an emergency landing on a football field Saturday during a heavy snowfall. Police called the landing magnificent. Jacques R. Bouchard, 31, of Ontario brought down his single-engine Piper Cherokee on the North Hills High School football field about 12 miles north of Pittsburgh.
