'Live Your Part' Is Advice To Drama Festival Actors

To carry out a stage role successfully, an actor or actress must learn to live the part; while on stage to actually be the character he or she is portraying, adjudicator Daniel MacDonald of Halifax said last night.

Speaking to the casts of the two one-act plays presented at the Community Centre as part of the current Provincial Drama Festival, Mr. MacDonald said that an actor must visualize the complete background of the character assigned to him.

He must strive to learn his or her reactions to every situation, both on stage and off. Only by such concerted effort is a truly convincing performance possible.

bearing was required by those portraying royalty, he noted.

TOO CAREFUL

Many of the players in the second play—"Orange Blossom" produced by the St. Pius X Parish Club under the direction of H. Lloyd Yeo—were too careful of their enunciation, the adjudicator said.

This group, appearing before an audience for the first time, caught the English atmosphere of the story, and got around the unfamiliar British idioms "very nicely", the adjudicator remarked.

Tonight in the same hall Mr. MacDonald will adjudicate the final presentation of the 1959 festival, "Kitty Kearney from Killarney", a three-act play by Charles George produced by the Seven Mile Bay Players under the direction of Rev. Austin Bradley.
