DREDGING CONTINUES - Dredge 115 has begun the work of completing the dredging of the Montague River which has taken two seasons to bring to the final stages. Last year the last course was completed to Shaw's Point, leaving a 14-foot channel almost the whole length of the river. Over 100,000 yards of mud were removed, indicating the substantial fill-in which occurred during the past fifteen years since the river was last dredged. The present work will be a clean-up process, together with the removal of two points at the beginning of the second and third courses which will provide a better sweep to the channel bed. The tugboat Pughwash, which tended the dredge during the past two years, arrived at Montague last week to continue its work. The Glen Livett II arrived in Montague two weeks ago with the second scow, but returned again to Charlottetown. Dredging operations which began on Friday will continue today.

Last year new wallings were placed and also part of the wharf facing. The crib work at the east end was also finished. This year the remainder of the crib work to the rear of the wharf in being done, a difficult task involving the removal of stone and the old crib. However, no difficulties have been encountered and the work is proceeding satisfactorily under the capable direction of Mr. Henry Munroe, who is confident of completing the work within the scheduled time.

Montague Street Project Is Nearing Completion

Poole and Beer Construction Company, Montague, has almost completed the contract of ditching and graveling the streets of Montague. Under the personal direction of Mr. J. F. Beer, the work went forward at a rapid pace, and within one week has been almost completed. The task of ditching presented a considerable problem, with numerous small culverts having to be removed. However, with the whole-hearted co-operation of the citizens the task was lightened and the work proceeded without holdup.

Thirteen trucks delivered pit gravel to the designated streets from Wednesday to Saturday at a constant rate. Mr. Austin Fraser, who directed the destination of the trucks, had each street prepared in advance by Mr. Harold McHeron, capable maintainer operator, so that there would be no delay in the laying of gravel. It was the duty of Mr. Alfred Sorby, checker, to space the loads to provide a thick gravel top. The bulldozer, operated by Mr. Willis Jenkins made the preliminary spread, followed by the maintainer which set up the final spread. Only Queen's Road yet remains to be finished, and this will be completed today.

The streets included in the paving project were the New Road, School Street, the street adjacent to the skating rink, and MacDonald Avenue, a total of 1-1/4 miles. The streets will require more gravel at the time of paving to bring them to the required grade. However, the bulk of the work has now been completed.

THREE MEN FOUND

"Unfortunately we had no guns, so we set out to do our hunting with clubs.

"Until we were rescued we had clubbed three porcupine, a partridge and a beaver, but they made awfully good eating."

Day and night the trio lit signal fires to guide search planes, but searching airmen continued to miss them, Newton said.

They decided it would be better to walk it and Elmen, described as a woods expert, set out. He was rescued early today, 22 miles from the trapper's cabin where the others remained.

by a committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Winnie Lavers and a social time enjoyed.

may be in you." The speaker said that the Christian has the greatest sources for joy known to the world, as he has the knowledge that God is revealed in Christ and that Christ who died for us has promised a life eternal. Applying the teachings to everyday life, Mr. Johnson pointed out that one's greatest joy will come through serving others, and through creating things. We are in this world to be used by it.

Many's joys have never been proportional to the abundance of his possessions but rather in the greatness of his creations—we must develop a positive attitude of doing things—for others.

Mr. Johnson concluded that joy has been the outstanding characteristic of Christians throughout the ages and exhorted the people to have their problems and disappointments, their hopes and joys in the living Christ and through the power of communion with Him we can bear life's trials and attain the joys so richly promised.

The choir, under the direction of Mr. Frank Johnson, A.T.C.L., rendered very beautifully the anthem, "The Lord Is My Shepherd" at the morning service and "Heavenly Light," also "And The Glory of the Lord" at the evening service.

CADETS PARADE

"Today," said the Minister, "I would apply these words of Sacred Scripture to you Cadets, to you boys and girls of our Choirs, to all you young people. You are not yet fifty years old. The legends of the race are full of stories of patient seekers for the fountain of eternal youth, and you have youth, and I ask you to think with me about the importance of that. It means of course, that you are still in the making. When a man is fifty years old, he is pretty well made; it is not easy to change him.

A little child once said to her grandfather, "Grandad, were you in Noah's Ark?" The grandfather, annoyed, replied, "No, of course, I wasn't in Noah's Ark." "Grandad," continued the child, "then why weren't you drowned?" "But memory is tenacious and the old man like that is pretty well finished, but the thrill of youth is that you are still in the making, concerning whom one knows that you might become this, or that, depending on what you do now.

"Over three hundred years ago, the earliest settlers landed in Charlottetown, Massachusetts, now part of the Province of Boston, then was a little village a long way from being fifty years old. A few houses clustered along the waterfront, and straggling paths and cattle tracks reached back into the woods. It would have been easy then to straighten out those by-paths, to survey regular streets and avenues for the growing town, but go to downtown Boston today, and you can see what really happened. Those twisting paths were trampled by many feet into hard roads, and at last were set in asphalt, curbed with stone, and lined with towering buildings. It would be hard to change them now. That is what happens to human lives, so that anyone who watches life closely must feel the immense importance of being young.

Youthful Leaders

"Hannibal was only seven years old when before the altars of his gods, he swore allegiance to his undying ambition to conquer Rome. Joan of Arc was only thirteen years old when her first vision came, calling her to save France. Mendelssohn was not eighteen when he went to work on his first published quartet. Michelangelo was still in his teens when, rebelling against his family's determination to make him a business-man, he apprenticed himself to Ghirlandajo, the painter, and gave himself to the study of his art. Admiral Lord Nelson, was only twelve when he entered the Navy and became a Captain at 21. The more one studies life, the more one feels that the future of the world is always being determined by what happens in the young, remember that other

I am debtor to the Greek, And withal, the Barbarian too; Egyptian, Babylonian, and Assyrian. To them, the Annients, it is true.

From India, China, I gain my store Of Wisdom; and when Truth I seek, In the Market Place and Forum; There, Socrates and Senators, they speak.

In the Pyramid and the Sphinx; Here was a Way of Life, 'tis writ. Laoise and Confucius still we read; In Arabic Desert, the Hieroglyph.

From France and Europe, in the past; Add Britain's culture to the roll. Who could tell the debt I owe? But stay, I may not reach the Goal!

For I am debtor to my God, Who all throughout my humble span, Would guide me in Revealed Way, His Incarnation—Son of Man. C. S.
