R.C.A.F. Hoop Team Defeats Schurman's 29-28
The R.C.A.F. hoop team defeated Schurman's at the airforce basketball court last night by the score of 29 to 28. At half time the score was 16 to 14 in favor of the airman and it looked as if it were going to be a close struggle all the way but Charlie Linkletter and Earl Smith, two of Schurman's ace players, fouled out and the R.C.A.F. piled up a commanding lead in the final half. Smith and Billy Stewart led all point-getters with 15 each, while Green of the Flyers was two below with 13.

SINGAPORE, March 5—(Reuters)—Vampire jet-fighters have arrived in Malaya to replace Spitfires in operations against the terrorists, a spokesman of the British Far East Air Force said here today. Vampires are also replacing Spitfires in Hong Kong but there was no present intention of employing them in Korea, he added.

Death in S'ide Sunday of Mr. Hugh Hanna
The death occurred in the Prince County Hospital on Sunday following a short illness of about three days, of Hugh Hanna, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, in his 80th year. Mr. Hanna suffered an attack of congestion of the lungs, and at his age had not the strength to fight it off.

He came to Prince Edward Island in 1912, having been a civil engineer in Scotland, and for some years was engaged in the fox ranching business, first residing at Alberton, and coming to Summerside about 20 years.

He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and a member of the Loyal Orange Lodge, and a man held in the highest esteem by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance.

His wife predeceased him about six years ago. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Eric Madsen, with whom he made his home of late.

The funeral service will be held at their Pope Road home this afternoon with interment in the People's Cemetery.—S.

School Parade Returns To Air
Schurman's School Parade returned to the air last Friday evening at 7:30 p.m. over radio station CJRW. This interesting program will be a weekly feature and will bring together school children from all parts of the Island.

The first part of the program was filled with real performers. They presented their readings, group singing, vocal solos, and piano solos with the finesse of professionals. The special feature for the second portion of this hour program was the first installment of the interscholastic spelling contest. Last Friday night brought together Central Beque and West Devon schools.

Six rounds of spelling were given and Central Beque school emerged victorious by a score of 23-19. The following students represented the two schools: West Devon, Pearl Robinson, Fay MacDonald, Stella MacNevin, Doris MacNevin, Norma Craig, Central Beque, Terrance Fraser, Myrna Green, Roland Dawson, David Schurman, Clara Johnson.

This program is being sponsored by M. F. Schurman Co. Ltd.—S.

Let's Talk It Over

A Prince County Viewpoint

This is Education Week. The spotlight is focussed on the various aspects of education as it affects the pupils, the teachers, the parents, and indeed everybody else in the community. The modern trends of education are put under the microscope of public examination, and the strengths and weaknesses are assessed for what they are worth. At least, this is the primary purpose of Education Week, and its use to the community will depend to a large extent on whether we are to probe the weak spots of our educational program and try to find remedies, or whether we are to get together in a spirit of complacency and pat each other on the back for the wonderful things that have been accomplished. We like Leonora Speyer's summing up of the pioneering spirit, when she tells of the man climbing up the mountain of accomplishment to reach a high position:

"Nor knows he stands on these, Or knowing, does not care, Save to climb on from there."

That Education is making steady progress seems obvious. In Summerside, as in other Island centres, we are getting away from the old system of training all our children for universities which a good deal less than 10 per cent will ever enter. We are striving to give the more than 90 per cent something of value which they can take away with them as they cope with the complicated business of adult living. We have made an encouraging start in this direction, but the fact that in Canada 59 per cent of our boys and 51 per cent of our girls who start junior high school (Grade VII) fail to complete junior matriculation or its equivalent would seem to indicate that we still have a long way to go. We are still trying to press many of our pupils into the same mold, trying to pound square pegs into round holes.

One of the most significant changes in our modern high schools is the introduction of vocational guidance and career counselors. The aptitudes of students are carefully studied and they are helped along the lines to which they are most fitted. Where this innovation is introduced into a school and carried out with energy and consistency results have been encouraging. Where it is carried out half-heartedly and spasmodically results are naturally disappointing. For all naturally-achievement depends on steady application to the project in mind rather than flitting from one bright idea to another like a rustic swain on his first visit to Coney Island.

We had occasion recently to listen to a broadcast of instruction given to a commercial class in Summerside High School. We were struck with the wide scope of practical training given. Commercial courses such as this give a fine preparation for the work the students will do after they leave school. In the high school program it is impossible to aim as directly as this at the many positions that will some day be filled by the students now attending school. But aptitudes and capacities for different fields of work can be noted and developed to give some preparation for the work ahead, and thus to give more meaning to the student's efforts.

The cultural aspect of school life must not be forgotten, however. The student must be taught how to live as well as how to make a living.

STELLARTON, N.S., March 5—(CP)—A fighting St. Francis Xavier Varsity team defeated Stellarton Royals 9-7 here tonight to take the first game in the best-of-five final series in the Antigonish-Pictou-Colchester Senior Hockey League.

Scores were 2-2 at the end of the first period and 4-4 when the whistle blew to end the middle session. But the collegians, with power plays, had the margin of victory in the third.

OTTAWA, March 5—(CP)—Estimated quantity of milk produced in Canadian farms, excluding Newfoundland, was lower during 1950 than in the previous year, the Bureau of Statistics reported today.

Cumulative total for the year was 16,436,988,000 pounds against 16,843,345,000 in 1949. Sales of fluid milk and cream rose during the 12-month period to 4,157,077,000 pounds from 4,063,735,000 in 1949.

Dairy butter fell nine per cent, amounting to 46,897,000 pounds compared with 52,852,000 in 1949. Cash income from the sale of dairy products declined from $327,742,000 from $351,955,000 in 1949.

Fluid sales in 1950 represented a farm cash income of approximately $150,000,000, followed by butterfat at $129,000,000, cheese milk $25,000,000 and manufacturing milk $21,000,000 and dairy butter at $2,500,000.

Window boxes. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President—Mrs. Basil MacDonald; Vice-President—Mr. James P. Hughes; Secretary-Treasurer—Mrs. William Power. A vote of thanks was tendered the retiring officers.

It was decided to hold the next meeting during Education Week and to have a guest speaker present.

The meeting adjourned with the singing of the National Anthem.

S'side Rotarians Hear Address On Education

Mr. Clarence Mercer, superintendent of the Summerside High School and Academy was the guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Rotary Club of Summerside at the Olympia Restaurant yesterday. He chose a theme in keeping with "Education Week" now being observed.

In the course of his talk he noted one change in education brought about by payment of Family Allowances, that of making attendance compulsory especially on the high school level. "This poses a problem," he said, "since all are compelled to attend school whether they are interested or not. Steps should be taken to give these pupils a more practical education."

He then outlined the present plans of the Summerside High School which consists of a basic education for all up to grade ten and then a three way option, namely, a two-year academic course leading to matriculation into universities, a two-year commercial course leading into business life and a two-year technical course leading to the trades.

He suggested that there should be a fourth option in evidence all the way through the grades for slow learners to take the academic work according to their stride.

He commended warmly the proposed change being considered by the Department of Education in the course of study for grades eleven and twelve for it would bridge that gap now existing between grades ten and eleven.

In closing he invited the members of the club to attend the educational exhibition being held this week in the auditorium of the Summerside High School.

Guests were Rotarian Austin Scales of the Charlottetown club, Mr. David Scales of Freetown and J. W. Lecky, Summerside.—S.

Nova Scotians Eat Most Fish; P. E. Islanders 7th

OTTAWA, March 5—(CP)—Nova Scotians eat more fish than anyone else in Canada, with British Columbians a close second. This was shown today in a Government return tabled in the commons in reply to questions by Thomas Klekham (L-Kings). It showed per capita consumption of all types of fish in Nova Scotia at 16.88 pounds and in British Columbia 13.22 pounds.

Figures for other Provinces were Quebec 9.68 pounds; New Brunswick 9.56; Manitoba 9.04; Ontario 8.26; Prince Edward Island 7.45; Alberta 7.12 and Saskatchewan 4.26. No figures were available for Newfoundland.

The return said a survey showed the people of Halifax consumed fish at an annual per capita rate of 36 pounds. This compared with 17.95 pounds for Montreal and 17.88 pounds for Toronto. Figures for other cities were not available.

Canada's national per capita rate is 12.7 pounds, compared with 11.1 pounds for the United States, 29.9 pounds for the United Kingdom and 83.3 pounds for Japan, the world's biggest fish consumer.

Most of the wounded were victims of grenades rather than small arms fire and are expected to rejoin the unit.

While the Chinese regularly evacuate their dead and wounded, at least 50 bodies were counted when the Canadians reached their objective. Reports indicated that several hundred enemy troops had been killed by combined infantry, artillery and air attacks.

Here is a day-by-day summary of the Canadian operation north-east of Yoji.

Feb. 19—The Patricias advanced 1,000 yards unopposed and Lieut. Ned Page of Edmonton led the battalion's first patrol dash into the village of Kudun.

Feb. 20—A clean-up day on newly-won positions. Lieut. Rick Constant of Calgary led a patrol into Kudun which discovered two Chinese wounded.

Feb. 21. In a cold, dreary downpour, worse than anything encountered in Italy, the battalion cleared seven miles across country toward the village of Sogu. The Patricias' first casualties were soldiers injured in falls from treacherous, ice-clad rocks during the night.

Feb. 22—Soaked to the skin and miserably cold, the Patricias continued to advance through the hills while a patrol under Constant moved up by road to clear Sogu.

Constant's patrol made the first contact with the enemy and soon a company under Major Vince Lilley of Hamilton was locked in combat. A platoon led by Lieut. Murray Edwards of Kelowna, B. C., launched five attacks before the enemy withdrew.

Twelve of Edwards' men had their parkas pierced by bullets but there were no casualties. The battalion advanced two miles.

First Battle Casualties
Feb. 23—companies under Maj. Bill Stutt of Calgary and Maj. Jack George of Edmonton launched the first assaults on Hill 419. They were beaten back, receiving the first battle casualties—four killed and five wounded.

Feb. 24—Hill 419 was bombarded with napalm (jellied gasoline) bombs after the Patricias had pulled back slightly. Stutt had to fight his way back into his positions, which the Chinese had re-occupied.

Stutt then launched another fruitless attack. Casualties by then totalled nine killed and 29 wounded.

Feb. 25—Lilley's company took over forward positions on Hill 419 while Stutt's and George's men rested. The Patricias' commander, Lt.-Col. J. R. Stone, used phosphorous bombs to set fire to the hill and machine-gunners under Capt. Andy Foulds of Vancouver shot up the Chinese as they tried to put out the fires.

Feb. 26—The Patricias sat tight, patrolling vigorously and watching air attacks on the Chinese positions ahead.

Feb. 27—Australian troops, east of the Canadians, cracked the Chinese delaying line. Foulds' machine-gunners and mortars under Capt. Lloyd Hill of Kentville, N. S., opened up on groups of fleeing Chinese.

Feb. 28—Hill 419 was taken by George's company and Hill 500 by that of Maj. George Flint of Montreal in bloodless assaults. Intensive air and artillery attacks and the Australians' flanking action had rendered both hills unworkable and the Chinese withdrew.

March 1—The Patricias sat tight, patrolling actively.

Gives Review Of Canadian Action On Korean Front

(While Canadian troops in Korea rested after their first front-line operation, Canadian Press correspondent Bill Boss wrote the following review of their campaigning since Feb. 19 to put the Canadians' action into perspective.)

By Bill Boss
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WEST CENTRAL SECTOR, Korea, March 5—(CP)—The first Canadian front-line action in the Korean war, which ended last week, was a 12-day campaign in which they advanced eight miles against firmly-entrenched Chinese opposition.

(In an accompanying note, Boss explained that the eight-mile gain was reckoned as the crow flies. It involved considerably greater advances by road and over rough, hilly terrain.)

While the tactical gain was achieved primarily through Chinese withdrawals, the initial campaign of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry demonstrated their physical toughness and ability to take it under enemy fire.

The Chinese defences, stoutly manned and well placed and camouflaged in mountainous country similar to a treeless version of Alberta's foothills, effectively stalled the Canadians' advance as long as the enemy willed.

But the Canadians braved a combination of colder winds and more drenching rain than any Italian campaign veteran had to contend with, yet proved able to lock horns with the Chinese despite sodden gear, slushy mud and the aching cold.

Under withering small-arms fire and hailstorms of grenades, they crawled on hands, knees and bellies within five yards of Chinese positions, only to be defeated by the thick scrub and briar.

They were unable to come to close quarters with the Chinese. The defenders' machine-gun fire stitched the underbrush at waist level. Kept under the cover, the Canadians were unable to fire grenades at the Chinese weapon-sites.

That the grenades would bounce back and explode in their own ranks.

These conditions frustrated repeated Canadian assaults, despite the full weight of New Zealand artillery and United States mortar and air support.

Though the battle was often intense, casualties were surprisingly light and by the time the enemy withdrew from hills 419 and 500, the toll was 11 killed and 24 wounded.

(Individual casualty reports officially announced to date from Ottawa total six dead—five men killed and a sixth dead from wounds—and 14 wounded, 10 in action and four in a battle accident.)

Victims Of Grenades
Most of the wounded were victims of grenades rather than small arms fire and are expected to rejoin the unit.
