Nervous Prostration

It is now a well established fact in medical science that nervousness is due to impure blood. Therefore the true way to cure nervousness is by purifying and enriching the blood. The great blood purifier is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read this letter:

"For the last two years I have been a great sufferer with nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart. I was weak in my limbs and had smothered sensations. At last my physician advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla which I did, and I am happy to say that I am now strong and well. I am still using Hood's Sarsaparilla and would not be without it. I recommend it to all who are suffering with nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart." MRS. DALTON, 56 Alice St., Toronto, Ontario. Get Hood's, because

THE MEDAL OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

BY A CONAN DOYLE

Now First Published. All Rights Reserved.

The Duke of Tarentum, or McDonald, as his old comrades preferred to call him, was, as I could perceive, in the vilest of tempers. His grim Scotch face was like one of those grotesque door knockers which one sees in the Faubourg of St. Germain. We heard afterwards that the emperor had said in jest that he would have sent him against Wellington in the south, but that he was afraid to trust him within sound of the pipes. Maj. Charpentier and I could plainly see that he was smouldering with anger.

HE WAS STANDING AT THE SIDE OF THE ROOM.

"Brigadier Gerard, of the Hussars," said he, with the air of the corporal with the recruit.

I saluted.

"Maj. Charpentier, of the Horse Grenadiers."

My companion answered to his name.

"The emperor has a mission for you." Without more ado he flung open the door and announced us.

I have seen Napoleon ten times on horseback to once on foot, and I think that he does wisely to show himself to his troops in this fashion, for he cuts a very good figure in the saddle. As we saw him now he was the shortest man out of six, by a good hand's breadth, and yet I am no very big man myself, though I ride quite heavy enough for a hussar. It is evident, too, that his body is too long for his legs. With his big round head, his curved shoulders and his clean-shaven face, he is more like a professor at the Sorbonne than the first soldier of France. Every man to his tastes, but it seems to me that if I could clap a pair of fine light cavalry whiskers like my own onto him it would do him no harm. He has a firm mouth, however, and his eyes are remarkable. I have seen them once turned upon me in anger, and I had rather ride at a square on a spent horse than face them again. I am not a man that is easily daunted, either.

He was standing at the side of the room, away from the window, looking up at a great map of the country, which was hung upon the wall. Berthier stood beside him, trying to look wise, and just as we entered Napoleon snatched his sword impatiently from him, and pointed with it on the map. He was talking fast and low, but I heard him say: "The valley of the Meuse," and twice he repeated: "Berlin." As we entered his aid-de-camp advanced to us, but the emperor stopped him, and beckoned us to his side.

"You have not yet received a cross of honor, Brigadier Gerard?" he asked.

I replied that I had not, and was about to add that it was not for one who hadn't deserved it, when he cut me short in his decided fashion.

"And you, Major?" he asked.

"No, sire."

"Then you shall both have your opportunity now."

He led us to the great map upon the wall, and placed the tip of Berthier's sword upon Rheims.

"I will be frank with you, gentlemen, as with two comrades. You have both been with me since Marengo, I believe." He had a strangely pleasant smile which used to light up his pale face with a kind of cold sunshine. "Here at Rheims are our present headquarters on this, the 14th of March, Very good. Here is Paris, distant by road a good twenty-five leagues. Blucher lies to the north, Schwarzenburg to the south." He prodded at the map with the sword as he spoke.

"Now," said he, "the further into the country these people march, the more completely I shall crush them. They are about to advance upon Paris. Very good. Let them do so. My brother, the king of Spain, will be there with a hundred thousand men. It is to him that I send you. You will hand him this letter, a copy of which I confide to each of you. It is to tell him that I am coming at once, in two days' time, with every man and horse and gun, to his relief. I must give them forty-eight hours to recover. Then straight to Paris. You understand me, gentlemen?"

Ah, if I could tell you the glow of pride it gave me to be taken into the great man's confidence in this way. As he handed our letters to us I clicked my spurs and threw out my chest, smiling and nodding to let him know that I saw what he would be after. He smiled also and rested his hand for a moment upon the cape of my dolman. I would have given half my arrears of pay if my mother could have seen me at that instant.

"I will show you your route," said he, turning back to the map. "Your orders are to ride together as far as Bazoches. You will then separate, the one making for Paris by Oulchy and Neuilly, and the other to the north by Braine, Soissons and Senlis. Have you anything to say, Brigadier Gerard?"

I am a rough soldier, but I have words and ideas. I had begun to speak about glory and the peril of France when he cut me short.

"And you, Maj. Charpentier?"

"If we found our route unsafe, are we at liberty to choose another?" said he.

"Soldiers do not choose. They obey." He inclined his head to show that we were dismissed and turned round to Berthier. I do not know what he said, but I heard them both laughing.

Well, as you may think, we lost little time in getting upon our way. In half an hour we were riding down the high street of Rheims, and it struck twelve o'clock as we passed the cathedral. I had my little gray mare, Violette, the one which Sebastiani had wished to buy after Dresden. It is the fastest horse in the six brigades of light cavalry, and was only beaten by the duke of Rovigo's racer from England. As to Charpentier he had the kind of horse which a horse grenadier or a cuirassier would be likely to ride, a back like a bedstead, you understand, and legs like the posts. He is a hulking fellow himself, so that they looked a singular pair. And yet in his insane conceit he ogled the girls as they waved their handkerchiefs to me from the windows, and he twirled his ugly red mustache up to his eyes, just as if it were to him that their attention was addressed.

When we came out of town we passed through the French camp and then across the battlefield of yesterday, which was still covered both by our own poor fellows and by the Prussians. But of the two the camp was the sadder sight. Our army was thawing away. The guards were all right, though the young guard was full of conscripts. The artillery and the heavy cavalry were also good if there were more of them, but the infantry privates with their under officers looked like schoolboys with their masters. And we had no reserves. When one considered that there were eighty thousand Prussians to the north and a hundred and fifty thousand Russians and Austrians to the south, it might make even the bravest man grave. For my own part I confess that I shed a tear until the thought came that the emperor was still with us and that on the very morning he had placed his hand upon my dolman and had promised me a medal of honor. This set me singing and I spurred Violette on until Charpentier had to beg me to have mercy on his great snorting, panting camel. The road was beaten into paste and rutted two feet deep by the artillery, so that he was right in saying that it was not the place for a gallop.

I have never been friendly with this Charpentier, and now for twenty miles or the way I could not draw a word from him. He rode with his brows puckered and his chin upon his breast like a man who is heavy with thought. More than once I asked him what was on his mind thinking that perhaps with my quicker intelligence I might set the matter straight. His answer always was that it was his mission of which he was thinking, which surprised me, because, although I had never thought much of his intelligence, still it seemed to me to be impossible that anyone could be puzzled by so simple and soldierly a task.

Well, we came at last to Bazoches, where he was to take the southern road and I the northern. He half turned in his saddle before he left me, and he looked at me with a singular expression of inquiry on his face.

"What do you make of it, brigadier?" he asked.

"Of what?"

"Of our mission."

"Surely, it is plain enough."

"You think so? Why should the emperor tell us his plans?"

"Because he recognized our intelligence."

My companion laughed in a manner which I found annoying. "May I ask what you intend to do if you find these villages full of Prussians?" he asked.

"I shall obey my orders."

"But you will be killed."

"Very possibly."

He laughed again and so offensively that I clapped my hand to my sword. But before I could tell him what I thought of his stupidity and rudeness he had wheeled his horse and was lumbering away down the other road. I saw his big fur cap vanish over the brow of a hill, and then I rode upon my way wondering at his conduct. From time to time I put my hand to the breast of my tunic and felt the paper crackle beneath my fingers. Ah; my precious paper which should be turned into the little silver medal for which I had yearned so long. All the way from Braine to Sermoise I was thinking of what my mother would say when she saw it.

I stopped to give Violette a meal at a wayside auberge on the side of a hill not far from Soissons—a place surrounded by old oaks, and with so many crows that one could scarce hear one's own voice. It was from the innkeeper that I learned that Marmont had fallen back two days before and that the Prussians were over the Aisne.

An hour later in the fading light I saw two of their vedettes upon a hill to the right and then, as darkness gathered, the heavens to the north were all glimmering from the lights of a bivouac.

When I heard that Blucher had been there for two days I was much surprised that the emperor should not have known that the country through which he had ordered me to carry my precious letter was already occupied by the enemy. Still I thought of the tone of his voice when he said to Charpentier that a soldier must not choose but must obey. I should follow the route he had laid down to me as long as Violette could move a hoof or I a finger upon her bridle. All the way from Sermoise to Soissons, where the road dips up and down, curving among fir woods, I kept my pistol ready and my sword belt braced, pushing on swiftly where the path was straight and then coming slowly around the corners in the way we learned in Spain.

When I came to the farmhouse which lies to the right of the road just after you cross the wooden bridge over the Crise, near where the great statue of the Virgin stands, a woman cried to me from the field saying the Prussians were in Soissons. A small party of their lancers, she said, had come on that very afternoon and a whole division was expected before midnight. I did not wait to hear the end of her tale, but clapped spurs into Violette and five minutes later was galloping her into the town.

Three Uhlans were at the mouth of the main street, their horses tethered, and they gossiping together, each with a pipe as long as my saber. I saw them well at the light of an open door, but of me they could have seen only the flash of Violette's gray side and the black flutter of my cloak. A moment later I flew through a stream of them rushing from an open gateway. Violette's shoulder sent one of them reeling and I stabbed at another but missed him. Pang, pang, went two carbines, but I had flown round the curve of the street and never so much as heard the hiss of the balls. Ah, we were great, both Violette and I. She lay down to it, like a coursed hare, the fire flying from her roofs. I stood in my stirrups and brandished my sword. Some one sprang for my bridle. I sliced him through the arm and I heard him howling behind me. Two horsemen closed upon me. I cut one down and outpaced the other. A minute later I was clear of the town and flying down a broad white road with the black poplars on either side. For a time I heard the rattle of hoofs behind me, but they died and died until I could not tell them from the throbbing of my own heart. Soon I pulled up and listened, but all was silent. They had given up the chase.

Well, the first thing that I did was to dismount and to lead my mare into a small wood through which a stream ran. There I watered her and rubbed her down, giving her two pieces of soaked sugar in cognac from my flask. She was spent from the sharp chase, but it was wonderful to see how she came round with a half hour's rest. When my thighs closed upon her again I could tell by the spring and swing of her that it would not be her fault if I did not win my way safe to Paris.

I must have been well within the enemy's lines now, for I heard a number of them shouting one of their rough drinking songs out of a house by the roadside, and I went round by the fields to avoid it. At another time two men came out into the moonlight (for by this time it was a cloudless night) and shouted something in German, but I galloped on without heeding them and they were afraid to fire for their own hussars are dressed exactly as I was. It is best to take no notice at these times and then they put you down as a deaf man.

It was a lovely moon and every tree threw a black bar across the road. I could see the country side just as if it were daytime, and very peaceful it looked, save that there was a great fire raging somewhere in the north. In the silence of the night time and with the knowledge that danger was in front and behind me, the sight of that great distant fire was very striking and awesome.

WORD FROM KOOT ENAY.

Good Mining Prospects for the Year and Increased Facilites to Miners.

NELSON (Special) Oct. 21—The mining prospects for next year in this locality are excellent, and a large influx of prospectors is expected. Miners and others coming in have been in the habit of bringing with them large quantities of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which they all swear by and whose virtues they have extolled to such an extent, that the druggists throughout the section have become alive to the necessity of laying in large supplies to meet the greatly increasing demand. The remedy is generally regarded as an indispensable part of a miner's outfit both for it's portability and a value in preserving health which cannot be overestimated.

Mr. Farquharson, of Ivercauld, has decided to restore and render habitable Old Mar Castle, Braemar, the building in which the Jacobite rising in 1715 was hatched.

A Remarkable Cure—J. W. Jennison, Gilford—Spent between $200 and $300 in consulting doctors; tried Dixon's and all other treatments, but got no benefit. One box of Chase's Catarrh Cure did me more good than all other remedies, in fact I consider myself cured, and with a 25-cent box at that.

Octroi duty was charged at Lillie on the water brought from Lourdes by returning pilgrims. The officials classed it as mineral water, but their decision has been appealed from.

It is understood that the postal officials in Washington have asked the Dominion Government for permission to run United States' mail cars, with clerks on board, through Canadian territory, and they are sanguine that the permission will be granted.

Austria has put a stop to pool rooms; book-making is to be allowed only on the race courses. The reason for the action is the shameless way in which agencies have been swindling the public.

Kidney Foots.

In Jan. 1892 my son was taken with Kidney disease. Though attended by theee physicians, and change of climate he grew worse and by '93 had fallen from 195 lbs. to 95 lbs. In 10 days from starting to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills we were able to move him home. In 4 months he gained 50lbs. and was fully restored to health by the use of this medicine Jno. S. Hastings, 23 St Paul St., Montreal.

England's wheat area was diminished by 510,000 acres, or over 226 per cent., last year, while at the same time the number of pigs was increased half a million, or 21 per cent. It is evident that the country cannot profitably produce its own bread stuffs, but no reason has yet been found for the turn toward pork.

This is Concentration.

One pill a dose, one box 25 cents. One pill relieves constipation. One box cures an ordinary case. One pill taken weekly neutralices formation of uric acid in the blood and prevents Bright's Kidney Disease and Diabetes. True only of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills.

Scott's Sarsaparilla

ACUTE Inflammatory Rheumatism is produced by an excess of uric acid in the blood. Paralysis is nearly a dead circulation produced by impure and impoverished blood. So-called neuralgia of the thigh is sciatic rheumatism; scrofulitic rheumatism is hereditary; syphilitic results from syphilis; gout is caused by high living; sluggish circulation affects the heart.

"THE KIND THAT CURES"

Thus the whole line of rheumatic diseases owe their being to an affected circulation of impure blood. No person can suffer a rheumatic pain that has a free and equal circulation of pure blood, and this accounts for Scott's Sarsaparilla curing the supposed incurable cases. It eradicates all rheumatic poisons and acids from the blood and equalizes the circulation.

Hands and Ankles Raw.

For years I have been a great sufferer from itchy skin trouble and salt rheum. My hands and ankles were literally raw. The first application of Dr. Chase's Ointment allayed the burning, itching sensation. One box and a half entirely cured me. It is also instant relief for chilblains Henry A. Parmenter, St. Catharines, Ont.

Sir Henry Irving has received his arms from the Heralds College. The shield is sable, with four swans argent, and a laurel wreath in the center.

WHY SO PALE?

Are You Nervous, Weak and Run Down?

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND MAKES RICH, PURE BLOOD, AND DRIVES OFF DISEASE.

See That Your Dealer gives you the Right Medicine.

No good reason can be advanced why women should live a truly miserable life, with pale faces, jaded looks, nervousness apparent at every step, and almost quite broken down in constitution.

The seeds of lurking disease must be banished, the blood must be purified and enriched, the nerves made strong, and the flesh and muscles built up.

In order to accomplish this great and necessary work, Paine's Celery Compound must be used without delay. Substitutes and the common advertised medicines of the day cannot give the slightest relief indeed, they tend more toward aggravating the disease and impoverishing the blood.

Let no specious arguments of dealers and storekeepers influence you when you decide that you MUST use Paine's Celery Compound. Other preparations are often recommended because they pay larger profits than Paine's Celery Compound, and become bad and unsaleable stock when not quickly got rid of.

Read what Mrs. Beverly Vincent, of Adelaide Street, St. John, N. B., says about the medicine that cured her:—

"I am happy to let you know what your Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I suffered many years from nervousness, and my constitution was all run down. I tried many medicines, but received no benefit from anything until I used your Paine's Celery Compound. It is a medicine that has given me grand results. I can recommend it to all who are sick and suffering."

A boquet of frozen lilies has arrived from New South Wales as a present to Queen Victoria. The flowers travelled in a block of ice, and look as if freshly gathered.

ORILLA, Feb. 10th, 1894.

EDMANSON, BATES & Co.

Gentlemen,—About three or four weeks ago I had an attack of Itching Piles. I tried two or three different remedies recommended by druggists as the "best and only cure," etc., but got no relief. About the time I was beginning to despair of finding any relief, with some slight misgivings I bought a box of your pile cure, which I am pleased to say gave me almost instant relief and permanent cure. I consider your Dr. Chase's Ointment a God-send. ALF. J. DEAN.

Queen Victoria's aversion to the employment of electricity as a motive power is a further evidence of her curious conservatism in not viewing with immediate favor new adaptations of the forces of nature. Thus the Queen in early life was highly apprehensive of travelling by rail, and, although now quite at her ease in a long railway journey, she, unlike the Prince Consort, who took immediately to conveyance by steam, preferred for many years to travel by road between Windsor and London.

POOR DICESTION leads to nervousness, chronic dyspepsia and great misery. The best remedy is HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.
