Parliamentary Divorce Seen As Session Issue

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliamentary divorce threatens to be a big issue again when the new parliament meets this fall.

An effort has been made to place before Prime Minister Diefenbaker a proposal for a royal commission study of the system of Parliament granting divorces to residents of Quebec and Newfoundland, only provinces without divorce courts, Arnold Peters, one of two New Democratic Party members who fought for a change in the system in previous parliaments, has made one unsuccessful attempt to see Mr. Diefenbaker to discuss a royal commission, informants said Thursday.

The prime minister's heavy schedule of meetings and appointments prevented the member for Timiskaming from receiving an interview this week. Mr. Peters and Frank Howard, NDP MP for Skeena, successfully used procedural roadblocks against passage of divorce bills before the last parliament was dissolved in April.

327 BILLS OUTSTANDING

A total of 327 divorcee bills were left on the commons order paper, after having been Mosk of these inelly will be back before the new parliament, approved by the senate.

Most of these likely will be back before the new parliament. There are indications that another 300 to 350 new divorce bills will be added to the jam.

Mr. Peters has indicated that he and Mr. Howard will continue their procedural delaying tactics unless steps are taken to alter the divorce procedure, or at least make a study of it.

Not since the 1926-27 session had Parliament wound up a session with divorce bills unpassed. Normally such bills would die and have to be reintroduced, but tentative steps have been taken to get around the costly and time-consuming procedure of rehearing the evidence on which the bills are based.

Massive Federal Assistance To Be Sought For Libraries

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of Canadian librarians have agreed to abandon their traditional attitude of caution and initiate steps to obtain "massive federal assistance" for libraries across the country.

The decision was made at an open meeting of the Canadian Library Association's planning and action committee.

An outspoken appeal for some "dramatic and newsworthy" action from an elderly librarian from Paris, Ont., sparked a note of urgency to the session.

H. J. Haire, who is not a committee member, proposed that the Canadian Library Association request the federal government to establish a commission with funds totalling $5,000,000 to be spent during a five - year period for extending and improving library services.

"Caution is the one great fault of our organization," he said. "We are afraid to move lest we offend someone."

"If we don't get busy right away and work up public opinion, we won't get to first base."

CAUGHT IMAGINATION

His motion was defeated but the principle appeared to catch the imagination of other delegates.

Delegates reached no agreement on exactly how much money should be sought from the federal government with suggestions ranging from $5,000,000 to $500,000,000.

It was finally decided to introduce a resolution for approval at today's general meeting, which would ask the association's executive council to prepare a statement announcing the CLA's conviction that "massive federal government assistance to libraries is required for development and support of Canadian library services."

Importers See Wrong Policy Taken By Gov't

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Importers and Traders Association says in its current weekly bulletin that the import surcharges on imports imposed by the government in its recent program is "the wrong policy at the wrong time."

Over the last four years, the association says, the excess of imports over exports accounted for just over 11 per cent of the total imbalance of payments.

"Under these circumstances," it says, "attempting to solve our imbalance of payments problem by treating imports as the chief cause is like a surgeon who treats a sprained wrist but does nothing about a broken arm."

The association presents figures for the years 1958 to 1961 to show that the total adverse balance on merchandise trade during the four - year period was $567,000,000 compared with an adverse balance on non-merchandise items of $1,841,000,000.

"In 1961, it says, there was a favorable balance on merchandise trade of $179,000,000 and an unfavorable balance on non-merchandise of $1,168,000,000.

The additional duties added to a dollar that has already been considerably devalued, the association continues, will inevitably result in higher prices. It adds:

"To deliberately introduce legislation that will cause higher prices at the very moment when we need lowest prices in order to compete in world markets is a complete negation of logic."

The bidding:

Opening lead — two of spades.

In every hand declarer plays in a suit contract he is faced with the problem of whether or not to draw trumps. There is no accurate general rule to guide him to when to tackle trumps and when not to. The declarer can solve this problem only by weighing the factors that prevail in the particular hand he is playing.

One of the most important of these factors is timing. The order in which various plays are made may prove to be decisive. For example, study this hand where South is in four hearts and West leads a spade. East takes the ace and returns the queen of diamonds.

South is faced with the problem of avoiding a loser in each of the four suits. He cannot afford to tackle trumps at once because the defense would take the ace and lead another diamond, which would establish the setting trick and lead to sure defeat.

So South wins the queen of diamonds with the ace and leads the ten of clubs. He wants to set up the clubs in dummy so that he can obtain a valuable discard of a diamond on one of the clubs. If he saves the diamond loser, he makes the contract.

Let's say East ducks the ten but then wins the next club with the ace. He returns the jack of diamonds, taken in dummy with the king.

Declarer now leads a high club, hoping the suit is divided 3-3 and that he will be able to discard his diamond loser. But East ruffs with a low trump and South has to overruff to escape immediate defeat.

South then trumps a spade in dummy and leads still another club. This time the fifth lead is successful. East is faced with an impossible choice. If he ruffs with the ace, South sheds his diamond; thus, telescoping two losers into one. And if East discards on the club instead, South discards on his diamond loser and then loses only a trump trick, thus making the contract.

Private Action Against Doctors Seen Possible

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto lawyer Edson L. Haines, solicitor of Ontario Medical Association, said here Saskatchewan residents could in certain cases, sue doctors who ceased to treat them.

He said doctors in Canada cannot legally leave serious cases untreated.

Mr. Haines was elaborating on an article in this month's issue of the OMA review, with reference to the threatened strike of Saskatchewan doctors scheduled for midnight tonight.

"Under law he has a continuing obligation to patients under treatmen. If he leaves hem he will be considered to have abandoned them and would be liable for damages."

However, Mr. Haines added, "I'm perfectly sure that doctors in Saskatchewan will continue to look after their continuing patients, whatever they say now."

Westinghouse Co. Receives Order

HAMILTON (CP) — Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd. has received an order for more than $600,000 worth of electrical apparatus from Shawinigan Water and Power Company.

Westinghouse said it will build two 185,000 - kilovolt - ampere power transformers that will increase the voltage of power generated at Shawinigan's new generating station at Tracy, Que., to 225,000 volts from 16,000 volts.

A third transformer of 10,000 kilovolt - ampere will be used to provide power for start - up and auxiliary services at 4,160 volts.

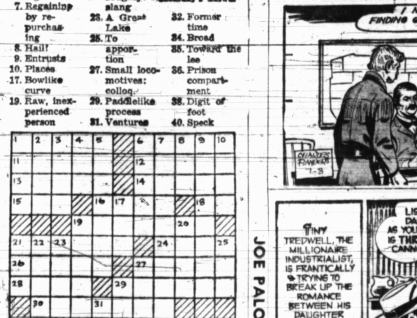
Saturday's Answer



DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X E B L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
