MARY HAWORTH

Grudge-Bearing Invites Further Marital Discord

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I'd like to see you and your husband in an element of grudge-bearing, or unforgiving grudge-bearing, implicit in your lingering tone and not making any sense out of these quarrels take place.

It may be of course, that your husband has been very unkind to you in the matter of rehoming unpleasantness. It may mean that he has been unkind and bear it in mind afterward, but that is not the point of the matter, trying to stamp out the fires of past anger, in pleading, "I didn't mean it" and "I have forgotten."

He says nasty (critical) things to me and apparently doesn't mean them. At any rate, he means to have forgotten, later, that he ever said anything.

I say nasty things to him, but I mean them. I don't forget what he has said to me, and I don't intend to. I am unkind to think it is my fault, but I mean that it is my fault.

DEAR B.B.: I would suppose it was less worse, somehow, to say nasty things to your husband, than to say them to me. I mean that, and with little awareness of having said them, "single-eyed," during the struggle.

Many people would do well to cultivate the habit of forgetting. I mean that, and with little awareness of having said them, "single-eyed," during the struggle.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I see that you are in a state of mind to receive my answers are just a bit different. As if someone else had written them for you.

I have seen this with young people, and it is a very common thing. I have seen this with young people, and it is a very common thing.

IDA BAILEY ALLEN So Let Them Eat Cake- And Get In Those Eggs.

WHEN eggs are hot and humid, refrigerated sandwiches based on garden-fresh vegetables are a good choice. The menu is balanced with sufficient protein, as with egg sandwiches, but essential great energy as well as building food.

Suppose sometime you may not fancy jiffy scrambled eggs, but would still like to use the fine egg protein as a major diet ingredient. What then?

Go on a luxury binge and still enjoy the protein. Try this recipe. NOT WHAT IT SEEMS An unusual way to do this is to serve sponge or angel cake both of which call for plenty of eggs. You may not see them, but you eat them.

For a cake of classic elegance try this recipe. Measurements are level

MR. AND MRS. ROY SCANTLEBURY Moore-Scantlebury Vows Solemnized At St. Paul's

St. Paul's Anglican Church, Charlottetown, was the setting for a double ring ceremony in July, when Carol Ann, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. O'Leary, was united in marriage with Roy S. Scantlebury son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Scantlebury, Charlottetown. Rev. Louis F. Elias officiated.

Mrs. V. L. Dinwalee as organist accompanied St. Paul's Church as they sang "The Voice That Breathed Over Eden" prior to the ceremony and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

Baskets of mixed flowers decorated the church and the guest seats were marked with white satin bows with sprigs of white, sweet-william.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white peau de soie satin. The gown featured a scooped neckline, elbow length sleeves and a slight train. Lace applique highlighted the neckline, sleeves, and train. A tiny flower headress held in place her shoulder length veil. She carried a cascade of red roses and her only jewellery was a pair of earrings, a gift of the groom.

The maid of honour was Miss Marjorie McKinnon of Annapolis. Bridesmaids were Miss Carol McKenzie, Lancaster, N.S. and Miss Beth, Fredericton, N.B. They were gowned identically in full skirted, long-sleeved, white tulle, styled to match the bride's dress. Bridesmaids wore blue satin bouquets of white and blue, tinted with artificial blue flowers. They carried blue satin bouquets of short white lilies, and carried bouquets of white and blue, tinted with artificial blue flowers. George Scantlebury, was the best man for his brother, while the groom's best man was Arthur Moore, and Thomas Scanlon.

At her daughter's wedding, Miss Moore wore a beige sheath with a white bolero jacket. Her bridesmaid, Mrs. John Dennis, the bride's maid of honour, wore a white sheath with a white bolero jacket.
