The Dog Nuisance.
APPROPOS of the dog nuisance, a reader of THE EXAMINER calls attention to an article in the American Trotter of the 4th inst., from which we quote as follows:—
"Not long since a lover of a good horse at a long price secured a stepper for his own private driving. The horse has a mane low down in the 20's, but is said to have given exhibition heats far below 20. Not only for his speed was he valuable to the gentleman, but also for his level head, kind disposition and a thousand other praiseworthy qualities. Everyone enjoys the first snow. This stepper was out with the rest of the 'talent' one afternoon. The gentleman started home at about a three-minute clip, when without any warning, and unobserved, and unheeded, a large brute of a dog rushed to the side of the horse and of course startled him. On the impulse he jumped sideways, upset the cutter, ran several blocks, marked his passage by portions of the wrecked cutter, was finally caught, and tumbled like a leaf through perfect fright, and didn't recover from the shock for three days. For comfortable future driving purposes the injury done that horse cannot be estimated, and all through a worthless man's brute. Sue the owner, some will say. Yes, the owner may not be worth as much as the dog, and he is a negative quantity."
"We were on two occasions visiting in towns at different parts of the State, and we saw two grand looking stallions driven by careful men. The one horse was attacked by a dog, scared, perfectly terrified, and with the driver nearly a mile before he could be controlled. Was fearfully uneasy even then, broke out into a perfect lather before he could be gotten home, took cold before he could be covered, and it was only through care and nursing that pneumonia was ward off."
"The other horse we saw was scared, jumped, reared, cut his quarters with his legs, so that it will take quite a while to put him in the condition he was that day. The value of these two horses together would likely be $20,000. How many dogs would be required to pay for any injury they might sustain. Of course it is the privilege of every man to own a dog; yes, but it is also the privilege of every other man not to be annoyed by that dog, and when a dog becomes a nuisance he should be despatched, no matter what the owner's privileges may be."
"But," one will say, "his are our children's pet and we can't part with him."
"Well, your pet must not destroy other people's property, or put their lives in danger."
"But our dog never bites anyone!"
"He may not be vicious and yet scare a horse just the same."
"But he is such a good watch dog."
"Well, watch your watch dog that he does not annoy others." The idea that people in cities need a watch dog. Rot!
"But we pay license." Well, you don't receive a license to keep a nuisance on thoroughfares.
"But ours is well bred." Well, keep him out of the company of mongrels, where breeding dogs are bred, and you will not corrupt good morals. Your dog will be judged by the company he keeps.
Who is it that owns many of the worst nuisances? There is a homely old saying that "a poor man owns two dogs, a poor man owns three or more."
A sportsman keeps a hunting dog, and men of that calibre usually see that their dogs annoy no one; it is the class out and the edges skimming around for foider that do most of the injury. It seems a great mystery why people who are unable to provide for themselves and family will keep several dogs. There are some families who receive their rations, such as groceries, coal, etc., from the county poor master, and who keep in stock from one to five dogs. We don't know whether the county makes any appropriations for such stock or not, but instances have been known where the county has paid four hundred dollars for sheep killing by just such causes as we speak about.
Why are these nuisances tolerated? Why do horsemen have to be pestered with them? Would not the brutes be better off in dog heaven? If an accident should happen you could not prove the guilty one. If you could prove up you might find it worse than useless to endeavor to procure any damages. Start a crusade against them that their number may at least be decreased.

Against Sport.
(The Week)
Lady Florence Dixie, in the January number of the Westminster Review, protests against "sport." The article might have been labelled the "Confessions of an English Sporting Lady." It is the pathetic and remorseful wail of a "female Nimrod," who, from being an ardent lover of the chase, has "come to regard with absolute loathing and detestation any sort or kind of form of sport, which in any way is produced by the suffering of animals." Such a relation to experience as the following is touching in the genuineness of the sorrow manifested:—
"Many a keen sportsman, searching his heart, will acknowledge that at times a feeling of self-reproach has shot through him as he has stood beside the dying victim of his skill. I know that it has confronted me many and many a time. I have been over my fallen game, the result of, alas! too good a shot. I have seen the beautiful eye of the deer and its different kind glaze and grow dim as the bright life of my shot has arrested in its happy course sped onward into the unknown. I have ended with the sharp yet merciful knife the dying sufferings of poor beasts who had never harmed me, yet whom I had laid low under the veil of sport; I have seen the terror-stricken orb of the red deer, dark, full of tears, glaring at me with mute reproach as it sobbed its life away, and that same look I have seen in the eyes of the glorious, noble gamecock of Patagonia, the timid, gentle gazelle, the graceful and beautiful koodoo, springbok, etc., of South Africa, seemingly, as it were, reproaching me for thus lightly taking the life I could never bring back. So, too, I have witnessed the angry, defiant glare of the wild beast's fading sight, as death, fast coming, deprived him of the power to wreak his vengeance on the human aggressor before him. I say this. The memory of these scenes breeds no pleasant thoughts in my mind. On the contrary, it haunts me with a huge reproach, and I faint (sic) I never had done those deeds of skill—and cruelty."
"Sentiment and nonsense!" we fancy many a sport-lover amongst our readers to exclaim. Others will, perhaps, concede that this proves that the delights of the chase were never designed for soft-hearted women. And yet, when one comes to look at the thing calmly, and with a mind abstracted from the excitement of whatever quality it may be, which gives the pursuit its zest, most will perhaps admit that there is just room for a doubt whether what we call "sport," in its various forms, and apart altogether from any consideration of necessity or utility (which of course would make the killing no longer sport) is just the kind of amusement or recreation best suited and most honorable to the "paragon of animals"—whether the steadily creeping animal, or the ruthless hunting down, with horses and hounds, a host against one feeble fugitive, is really quite the thing to ennoble the lord of creation. But we do not mean just now to argue the point.
We quote Lady Dixie's confession and recantation as an interesting human experience, too suggestive to be passed over in silence, and possibly worthy of more than a passing thought, or contemptuous sneer, which most readers will, we suppose, give it. It is all the more suggestive by reason of the fact that Lady Florence Dixie's repentance and remorse seem to have been in a large measure the offspring of the disgust caused by the reading of the letter of a British nobleman, writing from a distant land for the delimitation of educated and refined English readers, an account of his exploits in what Lady Florence calls the wounding, maiming and torture of wild animals under the name of sport."

Canada's Fisheries.
A CONSIDERABLE INCREASE IN THE INCOME ACCRING TO THE FISHERMEN.
The annual report of the department of fisheries for the year 1891, which is now in course of preparation in the department, will, according to the Ottawa despatch, show a considerable increase in the income accruing to the fishermen of the maritime provinces from the sale of last season's catch. The total product of the fisheries of Canada last year is estimated at $25,000,000. In the western district of Nova Scotia the returns show an increase of over $600,000 in the value of the fish catch of '91 compared with that of the preceding year. An important factor in this enhanced value is the shipment of live lobsters, a comparatively new industry which promises profit to the coast fishermen. For the past couple of years a lucrative business has been carried on by Nova Scotia fishermen in shipping live lobsters to the United States market, and quite recently an ingenious bluenose has contrived a special tank apparatus wherein they may be safely transported to Great Britain, where lobsters in their natural state command a high price paid for them by the coast canners. Besides the increased revenue derived from this source the fishermen of the district referred to enjoyed a much larger income from the sale of mackerel of which there was an increased catch of 24,000 barrels last season. During the year 11,898 men engaged in the western Nova Scotia fisheries employing 5643 vessels and boats valued at over a million and a half of dollars. In the year 1890 the value of the fishery products of the whole of Nova Scotia amounted to $6,384,444 and it is expected that the returns will show an increase of over a million dollars for the season just closed.

Indian Courage.
From Harper's Weekly.
The annals of no country can show any savage foe so formidable for his numbers as the American Indian. The tales of the Sepoy rebellion, repeated as they are with heroic achievements of British soldiers, read like absurd fairy tales to Indian fighters of our army. The spectacle, repeated again and again, of a score or so of these Englishmen riding through as many thousands of opposing Sepoys, disciplined, and thoroughly supplied with the best of fire arms, would be a very novel novel one those accustomed to the temper of the savage of our own continent. Had Captain Jack or Joseph or Geronimo, with such warriors as they led, been the sort of foes to attack the English power in India, the history of Delhi and Lucknow would have been written in far darker characters on the pages of English history. Self-reliant, intelligent, fierce in battle, imitable horsemen, armed with the modern rifle, our own Indians have often waged successful battle with regular troops unsurpassed in quality and far outnumbering them. It is doubtful if even the Cossack or Arab can be compared with them in partisan warfare.

A REMEDY that is endorsed by physicians must have some merit, for no physician of any standing will place his seal of approval on a preparation unless he knows it to be good. Now Estey's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is not only endorsed by physicians but largely used by them in their practice. Feb 1 m

MAKES FRESH AND BLOOD.—When the system is all run down and there seems to be no hope of obtaining nourishment for the body by the ordinary process of food supply and digestion, when the body is sinking fast, there is the time to use Miller's Emulsion of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. It always works wonders, because it is a fresh and blood maker and contains all the constituents for nourishment found in wheat in fact, Miller's Emulsion is a perfect "staff of life," and has saved and cured thousands. In big bottles 50c, and $1 at Charlottetown drug stores.

By looking at the quotations of the Virginia tobacco market it will be found that the highest price paid for "fillers"—which is the tobacco which forms the body of the plug—very closely corresponds with the invoiced price of tobacco leaf imported into Ontario. As over four-fifths of all leaf imported into the Province is for "Myrtle Navy" stock, this fact is official proof of the claim that the "Myrtle Navy" is made of the finest Virginia leaf.
